Threat to Silence Girl Charged as Two More Fall Into Gambling Net

Witness in Probe Accuses Acalotti; Special Grand Jury Reconvenes Monday

By Joseph Paull and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporters

The trap snapped shut on two more suspects in District Attorney Fay's roundup of gambling racketeers yesterday and one was immediately charged with threatening to silence a Government witness.

He is Attilio Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, 40, of 908 14th st. nw., who in addition to being charged with setting up a gaming table (for horse bets) was accused of obstructing justice by attempting to intimidate a witness.

Earlier, Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos, 59, of 1020 9th st. nw., sought on a warrant by Fay's office, had surrendered himself. Another man is still being sought.

30 Charged in All

This brought to 30 the number of local gambling suspects taken into custody since a series of surprise raids here and in nearby Maryland Friday.

The raids, staged without knowledge of District or Prince Georges County police, were spectacular results of an investigation undertaken 10 months ago by a special grand jury.

More raids and more arrests were promised by Fay. He said the special grand jury would meet Monday to study evidence uncovered in the Friday raids. He also hinted that the case now includes proof of a link between local gambling operations and Nation-wide crime rings, such as the Capone Syndicate of Chicago.

The arrest of Acalotti yesterday injected a note of violence into the upheaval in the gambling underworld.

Affidavit Alleges Threat

Fay's office said it has an affidavit from Bernice Franklin of Suitland, Md., stating that Acalotti telephoned her Friday and warned her that "if I did not keep my mouth shut he would see to it that it was kept shut permanently."

In the Thomas Circle area, where, according to Fay's office, Acalotti has long operated as a curbside bootlegger and bookie, Miss Franklin was regarded as a friend of Acalotti's until several months ago.

She subsequently became an undercover agent for Fay's office and supplied information which led to issuance of warrants for Acalotti as well as William (Snag) Lewis, reputed boss of a betting headquarters at 4310 46th st., Bladensburg, Md. The 46th st. address was raided Friday and Lewis was among those arrested.

In her affidavit, Miss Franklin says Acalotti knew she had testified before the special grand jury and had sworn to a warrant for his arrest.

Miss Franklin is still under subpena of the special grand jury and still willing to testify, Fay's office said.

According to Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, Acalotti has been a "reluctant"

Weeks of Undercover Work

Law Student Known as The Kid Helped Shut Trap on Gamblers

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

A brown-eyed, curly-haired 24-year-old law student, known in Washington gambling circles as "The Kid," helped put the finger on eight alleged betting establishments raided Friday.

Investigators who put a crimp in the horse-race and numbers racket in the District yesterday were crediting Wilfred D. Garrett, of 3002 Parkway Terrace dr., Suitland, Md., for much of the undercover work.

He came here from Chicago last fall to study law at night at Columbus University, 1328 18th st. nw. He had served two years as a B-25 pilot in World War II, when about the only kind of gambling he did was with his life.

Leading up to Friday's raids on eight suspected gambling houses were months of day-and-night plodding and prodding by the United States attorney's men and "The Kid."

"The Kid" spent several weeks reading up on grand jury revelations just before Christmas, after he had been assigned to Fay's staff in a Civil Service job.

He was soon to find himself in the role of connoisseur of fine foods in one of the city's better-known restaurants; dispenser of rough talk in a nearby newsstand and observer of ticket and telephone services in a suburban horse-race betting headquarters.

Looking back, it was tough starting out, but a cinch once you got on the inside.

For example, you stop in a bookie joint with a newsstand for a front. You buy a scratch sheet, peer over it, chew on your pencil.

You try to look like the fellows—sneering a little, lipping a cigarette, smelling of suds—and talk just enough to let them know you know nags.

After weeks, maybe months, of dropping by every day, the boys get to know you. You find you've got a nickname.

One thing you notice. There are about four guys hanging around

Race 'Dope' Supplied By Maryland Capone Units, Fay Reveals

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

District bookies are members of a Nation-wide gambling cartel and operate openly with late racing information supplied them by Maryland organizations controlled by the Capone syndicate of Chicago.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay made this revelation yesterday in pin-pointing how and where the 300 known District handbook shops operate. Fay's office arrested 28 men in eight simultaneous raids Friday afternoon on the area's $100,000,000 a year gambling industry.

Gambling headquarters are concentrated in Prince Georges County, Md., just over the District line. There, within an area of 5 square miles, Fay said, 26 "ticker drops" collect racing information by Morse code or teleprinter from two services and dispense the information by phone to District bookies.

One service, the Howard Sports Daily, Fay said, subscribes to the Consolidated Press Service, a Nation-wide monopoly, control of which has allegedly passed to the Capone Syndicate of Chicago after bloody gang warfare.

The other service, State Wide Sports News Distributors at 3701

Woman Is Given 90 Days, $100 Fine On Gaming Charge

A heavy sentence of 90 days plus a $100 fine or an additional 90 days was imposed yesterday on Mrs. Thelma Eusebia Johnson, 37, of 2907 Georgia ave. nw., who pleaded guilty to possession of numbers slips.

"If she won't stay away from the numbers, we'll have to take her away from them," remarked Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson, when informed that the defendant had two previous convictions for gambling violations.

Mrs. Johnson was arrested March 21, at 2824 Georgia ave. nw., according to police. Records show she was placed on probation for 6 to 18 months in 1942 on a charge of operating a lottery and was sentenced to $50 or 60 days in 1945 for possession of numbers slips.

Believed Due to Excitement

Woman, 50, Dies as Roommate Is Saved From Sleeping Pills

A 37-year-old woman escaped possible death from an overdose of sleeping pills last night, but the resultant excitement was believed responsible for the death a few minutes later of her roommate.

Miss Lillian Hauter, police said, was found unconscious about 6:30 p. m. in her partment at 1125 New Hampshire ave. nw., by Mrs. Ruth Guyton, 50, with whom she lived.

Mrs. Guyton summoned help and an ambulance responded. While Miss Hauter was being revived at Gallinger Hospital, Mrs. Guyton was found dead by a friend, Mrs. Dorothy Neyman, of 2500 Q st. nw.

Mrs. Neyman, whose mother also lives in the apartment building, called police and the same ambulance with the same physician, Dr. Doris Knox, of Emergency Hospital, returned.

Mrs. Guyton, a native of Allen County, Ohio, had lived in Washington since May, 1945, her husband, Homer C. Guyton, said. A road foreman for the Pennsylvania Railroad, he was in Baltimore at work when she died.

Guyton said Miss Hauter, who was reported in fair condition by hospital authorities, is an old friend of the family. She came to live with the Gugton's last November from Canton, Ohio, and is employed as a clerk for a local insurance firm.

Mrs. Guyton had recently been treated for high blood pressure, Guyton said, by Dr. Ben D. Chinn, of 1726 I st. nw. He said he had been informed her death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

Sides Drawn For 2d Test On Sales Tax

Bitter House Floor Battle Expected Monday Over D. C. Revenue Measure

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Opposing factions of the proposed 2 per cent District sales tax yesterday drew sides for a second bitter House floor fight Monday on a slightly revised sales levy measure.

The original sales-income tax bill went down to surprise House defeat only two weeks ago by a 10-vote margin.

District leaders on both sides of the sales tax issue last night refused to predict outcome of Monday's second test vote, although House Democratic leaders have promised to throw active support behind pro-sales levy forces.

Pay Action Involved

Chances of early action on $330 pay raises for policemen, firemen and teachers also hinges on what the House does to meet the city's impending 18-million-dollar deficit. Pay legislation is tied to enactment of a new city revenue bill.

Following two hours' general debate, the House will vote on the modified sales tax bill which also includes (1) a 50 per cent increase in liquor license fees, (2) a boost of 15 cents in the present property tax rate of $2 per $100, (3) reduction from $10,000 to $5,000 in unincorporated business income tax exemption, and (4) an increase in the basic personal income tax exemption from $1000 to $4000 on income received after December 31, 1949. The measure cleared the House District Committee by a 15-5 vote last week.

The anti-sales-tax bloc, led by Representative John F. Kennedy (D., N. Y.) already has served notice it will move to substitute its plan to raise more revenue mainly by extending the income tax here to persons who now escape payment, by increasing the property tax rate from $2 to $2.25 and by a five-million-dollar Federal payment boost.

Reports Give Tipoff

Tipoff on the new line of argument which the two House factions will pursue was found in the majority and minority reports on the new committee-approved revenue bills which were released yesterday.

The majority report carried a comparative tax study of the 18 largest cities in the United States, including Washington, which concluded that:

1. District residents bear the lightest per capita tax burden. The relatively light tax load is largely attributed to low sales and gross receipts taxes and to the low income tax "of restricted application" here.

2. The percentage of property tax collections to total tax collections here is the highest of any city, except Boston.

Well Below Average Rate

The District per capita burden of property taxes on a dollar value, the study states, is "neither exceptionally high nor comparatively low," though it stands $7.91 below the average rate of the 18 cities.

Should the proposed 15-cent property-tax boost become effective, Washington's per capita property tax load would be $3.18 below the 18-city average.

The tax study was prepared by Raymond E. Manning of the Legislative Reference Division of the Library of Congress at the request of the House District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee.

Powers Map Parley Here On Germany

Conference Planned In 10 Days to Discuss Bars to Unification Of Western Sectors.

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

The State Department, it was learned yesterday, is quietly arranging a three-power foreign ministers' meeting on western Germany to be held here in about 10 days.

The meeting will try to settle among the United States, Britain and France critical issues delaying final unification and further economic development of western Germany.

British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman will arrive here late next week to attend the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty April 4. The German talks probably will be held immediately after that.

Yesterday the Western powers announced minor transfers of territory from Germany to its western neighbors.

The announcement said 52 square miles of German land, with a population of 13,500, will be switched to the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Saar and France to improve communications and administration. The frontier will be pushed back inside Germany at 31 points.

Issues Listed

Issues which may be taken up by Secretary of State Acheson, Bevin and Schuman here include the following:

1. Drafting an occupation statute to fix the relationship between the occupation powers and the proposed German government.

2. Division of powers between the proposed central German government and state governments. A stalemate now exists between the western military governors and German constitution writers.

3. The Berlin blockade.

4. Reparations — An Economic Cooperation Administration committee has recommended a reduction in the number of plants marked for reparations removal from Germany. Britain and France have not accepted the proposal.

American officials hope for agreements in principle so deputies in subsequent meetings can work out complete agreements.

First Border Shift

The slicing off of 31 small pieces of Germany and attaching them to Germany's neighbors was the first shifting of the German western boundaries aside from establishment of Saar autonomy.

It was agreed to by the United States, France, Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg in a Paris conference.

Reports from Europe said the Germans reacted bitterly. Some German leaders denounced any tampering with the western borders as contrary to international law and a violation of the Atlantic Charter.

The changes are officially termed "provisional" and may be "confirmed or modified by the terms of the final settlement concerning Germany."

The 13,500 inhabitants involved will have the right to continue to live as they now do and continue to own property, or to move into Germany, taking their wealth with them, if they prefer.

The western powers evidently are putting off until some future peace settlement what the announcement called "certain major territorial claims of Germany's Western neighbors."

3-Year Potato Price Support Costs Third of Billion Dollars

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Government price supports for potatoes have cost the staggering sum of one-third of a billion dollars in the last three years.

In other words, Government efforts to maintain potatoes at what Congress thinks is a fair price to the farmer cost far more than running the District of Columbia for that period.

The Government spent more on potatoes last year than it did for either the Department of Commerce or the Labor Department. Supporting spuds cost about 60 per cent as much as all the far-flung activities of the Department of the Interior, including Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and other possessions overseas.

This startling information was revealed by the Department of Agriculture last week in showing the cost for last year's crop up until March 14. (A fitting date—one day before income tax day.) At that date the Production and Marketing Administration had bought 110,256,200 bushels of the 1948 crop at a net cost of 182 million dollars.

That isn't all. The season isn't over. PMA estimates that it will have to buy from 10 to 15 million bushels more under the old price support law at a cost averaging at present about $1.47 a bushel.

Experts figure the cost for last year's crop will total about 200 million dollars. The largest previous loss was 91 million for the 1946 crop; while the 1947 crop cost about 40 million. The three-year total is about 331 million dollars.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan last week, in a few generally overlooked words before the House Agriculture Committee, gave notice that the Department intends to put full blame for the financially disastrous program on Congress.

Brannan warned the committee that the "consumer and taxpayer" must be convinced "that the farm price support program is reasonable and in the public interest."

He added that continuation of the type of program, "such as we had last year for potatoes" might result in all price supports "going up in smoke."

Brannan already has taken steps to plug up the potato leak. Acting under doubtful authority in the new Hope-Aiken price support law, he cut the support level for the 1949 crop from 90 per cent to 60 per cent last February 7.

The department is on record as

Conferees Deadlocked Over Rent Increases; To Try Again Monday

Automatic 5% Boosts For Landlords, Ok'd By Senate, Scrapped; Extension Is Voted

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Congressional conferees on rent control deadlocked last night over rent hikes, but tentatively agreed to scrap the two Senate-approved automatic 5 per cent increases to landlords.

After a stormy seven-hour session yesterday, Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate conferees, and Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) for the House, announced a stalemate.

Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.) told reporters the conferees were divided only on the point of whether landlords' increases should be given on the basis of a net income, or a net "operating" income.

Before the conference broke up the conferees had threshed out every other disputed point, agreeing to take the House-passed 15-month extension of controls through June 30, 1950.

To Tackle Bill Monday

Conferees are scheduled to meet at 10 a. m. Monday to see if a final draft of the measure can't be whipped through. The present law expires next Thursday, and both houses must act on the conference report and get President Truman's approval before the new bill becomes law.

House Chairman Spence disclosed that he had called a meeting of his group at 9:30 a. m. Monday and was optimistic about reaching final agreement with the Senate.

Sparkman said Senate conferees had believed earlier that a satisfactory agreement had been reached and were startled when House conferees finally turned it down.

A few minutes before the joint committee broke up last night, Senator Ralph Flanders (R., Vt.) stalked out of the meeting. Obviously angry, Flanders told reporters he did not believe "in just one side being stubborn."

New Increase Provision

Senate conferees already had yielded on the two automatic 5 per cent increases, and had agreed on a provision more along the line of the House-adopted "reasonable return for reasonable value" to the landlords.

Sparkman disclosed that the Senate spokesmen had offered to substitute either of two proposals for the House language.

Under the terms of the first, rents would be set at levels which would yield landlords "a fair net operating income."

Under terms of the second proposal, rents would be set at levels to yield the landlords "a fair net income from such housing accommodations, excluding amortization and interest."

House conferees wanted the provision to read that rents would be set at levels to yield "a fair net income."

Sparkman said either of the two

In 76,000 Churches

President Truman issued a call last night for Americans to join in a special world relief drive and thus help destroy the "barriers of distrust and propaganda that divide us from our fellow men."

The President's appeal was in behalf of an interdenominational collection in some 76,000 churches today. The money is to be used by participating religious groups for their regular overseas relief organizations.

Mr. Truman's talk climaxed a broadcast entitled "One Great Hour", carried by major radio networks. The program originated in Hollywood where Gregory Peck, Ida Lupino and Robert Montgomery played in dramatic sketches depicting the plight of war victims.

"I urge you to go to worship Sunday, each in his accustomed place, to thank God for our heritage and our strength, and to ask Him for the grace and power to carry out His will in this troubled world," Mr. Truman said.

He declared the Divine command to aid the hungry, the needy and the sick has a "fresh meaning today."

Churches participating include nearly all major Protestant sects, the Roman Catholics, and Russian, Romanian and Eastern-Serbian orthodox churches.

Supporting groups include the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Foreign Missions Conference of North America, National Catholic Welfare Conference, Church World Service, United Council of Church Women and American Committee for the World Council of Churches.

One group of denominations, the American Council of Christian Churches, opposed the collection and did not participate. It claimed some of the money would go to finance "modernism and socialism on a world scale," and asked for equal radio time to answer the appeal.

The radio networks refused on the ground world relief is not a controversial subject.

Truman-Stalin Talks Urged at Peace Session

Cultural Conference Speakers Blame Both Sides for Cold War

(From Press Dispatches)

New York, March 26—Two rival groups of intellectuals debated the relative merits and demerits of Soviet Russia and the United States here today.

Speakers on both sides added nothing new to the subject of the cold war, but one group, the Cultural and Scientific Conference, (CSC), heard renewed demands for a meeting of President Truman and Premier Stalin to "talk peace."

Highlights today included:

1. Speakers at CSC panel discussions blamed both Russia and the United States for the cold war. CSC has been labeled pro-Communist by the State Department.

2. Americans for Intellectual Freedom (AIF), the opposition group, sharply attacked the Soviet Union and its restrictions on science and the arts.

3. Prof. George S. Counts, co-chairman of AIF, in a surprise appearance at a panel session of CSC, made the point that "a meeting of this kind could never be held in the Soviet. It would be utterly unthinkable."

4. The Russian and other foreign speakers at the CSC sessions angrily defended communism and its policy toward intellectuals.

Demands for the Stalin-Truman talk were voiced before CSC by T. O. Thackrey, editor and publisher of the New York Post Home News, and by O. John Rogge, former U. S. Assistant Attorney General and an official of Henry Wallace's Progressive Party.

Wallace, at a CSC night session, declared that "neither communism nor capitalism can solve the problem of creating abundance for all people until both, by agreement, get rid of the spirit of intolerance."

Dr. Harlow Shapley, Harvard astronomer and chairman of CSC, said Russia and the United States "are so obsessed by pointing out each other's shortcomings that they ignore their own. Certainly both are at fault."

Dimitri Shostakovitch and two of his Russian colleagues defended at another panel the commu-

Storms Strike Again; 2-Day Death Toll 26

Scores Are Injured; Arkansas Is Hard Hit, With 17 Killed There

Little Rock, Ark., March 26 (AP). Tornadoes today hit Texas, Oklahoma, Mississippi and Arkansas leaving upwards of 20 dead.

The two-day toll in five States—Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Mississippi and Louisiana—stood at 26 dead—with 120 injured. Six were killed yesterday.

Today's casualties by States:

Arkansas: 17 dead, 50 or more injured.

Texas, One dead, 26 injured.

Oklahoma: Two dead and 20 injured at Crowder.

Mississippi: Several injured at Belden, near Tupelo.

There were 15 known dead in the England-Scott area of Arkansas 20 miles southeast of here; one known dead at Whelan Springs, little lumber mill community 80 miles southwest of Little Rock; and one reported dead near McCrory. There were unconfirmed reports of dead in other places.

Thirty-seven injured Arkansas persons were in Little Rock hospitals; nine in Pine Bluff and 12 were treated at Newport.

Sparkman, Hazen, Beedeville, Balch, Scott, Cotton Plant, McCrory, Harrisburg and Clear Lake were reported struck.

Earlier today, a tornado carved a swath five blocks wide through Crowder, Okla., after hitting two places in Texas. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

Both Crowder and Springtown, Tex., were struck by tornados before dawn this morning. A third storm near Eastland, in west central Texas, knocked down a switching station at the Texas Electric Service Co. power plant, causing $150,000 damage.

At least 20 of Crowder's 378 population were injured. Mrs. Jane Colbert, 75, and Mrs. Guy Boatright, 66, were killed.

Crowder is 15 miles north of McAlester and 75 miles south of Tulsa. Most business buildings and many residences were flattened.

The Texas tornado caused serious injuries to six persons at Springtown, a town of 850 situated 20 miles northwest of Fort Worth. A dozen homes and several business buildings were demolished.

Several Oklahoma towns suffered wind damage early today.

Scarce Antibiotic Synthesized

Chloromycetin Ready to Go Into Large-Scale Production

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Chloromycetin, lifesaving antibiotic whose benefits have been stifled by its scarcity, can now be produced commercially on a large scale, it was disclosed last night.

The news came simultaneously with a report that the drug has been found effective against virus pneumonia in humans.

Other diseases that have yielded dramatically to the scarce antibiotic include typhoid fever, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, scrub typhus, bacillary urinary infections and undulant fever.

The antibiotic, enthusiastically classed with penicillin in medical importance, has been successfully synthesized (made with chemicals) by research chemists of Parke, Davis & Co., Detroit pharmaceutical firm, it was announced last night.

Such announcement was further bolstered here by word from the U. S. Army Surgeon General's office that the synthesized chloromycetin has been tested by the Army and proved as potent in clinical tests as the original drug.

Until its successful synthesis, chloromycetin could be produced only in minute quantity by extraction from cultures in which it was grown.

The new drug is the first effective antibiotic ever to be synthesized and produced on a practical scale, the chemists said.

Drug firm officials last night said confidently that chloromyce-

Pact Could Plunge World Into War, Moscow Warns

London (Sunday), March 27 (U.P.). Moscow Radio warned today that under the Atlantic pact any minor incident might plunge the world into war.

It added that a Soviet-American peace pact would have "regulated" Soviet-American relations and strengthened world security.

The broadcast said the Soviet government will continue to struggle for peace "with more energy and determination than ever before.

"Article Six (of the Atlantic Pact) means any ship belonging to Britain, France, Belgium or The Netherlands has the chance to commit provocations somewhere on the high seas and so plunge the United States into war," Moscow Radio said. "Provided the desire is there, it is not difficult to produce an accident on an airline or the ocean."

The broadcast said, "It is hard to deny that a Soviet-American pact of peace would not only have regulated Soviet-American relations, but would have strengthened international peace and security to a considerable degree."

East Berlin Parade Hits Ban on Mark

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, March 26 (NYHT).—About 100,000 residents of East Berlin, led by 7000 Soviet-sector German police, paraded and demonstrated today against the establishment of the western Deutschemark as the only currency in West Berlin—an action which the Communists had said was "warlike."

The demonstrators, who massed in front of Berlin University on Unter den Linden, passed unanimously by a show of hands a resolution calling for the "self-defense of all Berliners against the currency crime." Speakers left no doubt that this was a call to defy and sabotage whenever possible the Western currency regulations.

Hans Jendretzky, Berlin chairman of the Communist-led Socialist Unity Party, said the time has come to "intensify the fight for the final liberation of the city from the warmongers," by which he meant the Western powers. This was the first time in several months that the Communists have publicly renewed their demand that the Western powers leave the city.

Cancer Victim

Atom Tests Fail as Man Dies at 76

New York, March 26 (U.P.).—Henry Noble Hall, 76, writer and lecturer who became a "human guinea pig" in the study of atomic treatment of cancer, died at 5 p. m. EST today at Memorial Hospital.

Heavy doses of radioactive iodine from the atomic laboratories at Oak Ridge, Tenn., arrested a cancer of the thyroid. But cancer also cropped up in Hall's pelvic bone, and a fall which broke the bone last April complicated doctors' efforts for a complete cure.

At one point, Hall was given 400 millicuries of radioactive iodine during a 90-day period, the heaviest doses ever given an individual. A millicurie is 1/1000th of a gram, named in honor of Marie Curie, who discovered radium.

Hall closely watched the technique and the doctors who worked with him, and told a dramatic story of his experiences in a book, "My Fight Against Cancer."

"I am pretty hard boiled, even for a newspaperman, and I don't frighten easily, but I was scared pink," he said.

It was on September 14, 1946, that Hall was given a first dose of 55 millicuries, which the doctor handed to him in a "small carafe at the end of a long pincers."

"I lifted the glass and said: 'Well, here's to science and success.'" Hall related.

Sixteen days later "where the hard, egg-shaped cancer had been, I could feel nothing," he said. "The carcinoma of my thyroid had vanished."

Results were not so promising in the pelvic cancer, although it absorbed some of the radio active drug. There were other effects. His forearms became covered with thick hair which also appeared on his legs and abdomen. It stirred his pancreas to life again and relieved infirmities of old age.

Hall returned to the hospital for a while as a "research patient" on whom the doctors experimented in search of a cure. He was in and out of the hospital repeatedly in 1947.

Early in 1948, he was given 200 millicuries of radioactive iodine and placed in a room with a sign on the door: "Don't disturb. Radioactive patient." It was the largest dose ever given a human, and "worked like magic," Hall said. After his fall the following April, he was given another 200 millicuries. When he awoke, his body seemed to be giving off a green glow, he said.

"This second dose, however, was followed by severe dehydration. My weight fell to 112 pounds. My throat was dry, my skin puckered. But I felt younger than I had in years. Was this the beginning of the end?" Hall wrote.

Berlin Hears 80,000 Died In Soviet Zone Camps

Berlin, March 26 (U.P.).—The American - controlled radio station RIAS said tonight that 80,000 persons had died in concentration camps in the Soviet zone of Germany since 1945.

RIAS said there were nine concentration camps in eastern Germany housing political prisoners. It said that over 180,000 persons had been imprisoned in them since 1945.

Of these 180,000, RIAS said, 80,000 died and 30,000 were shipped to Russia.

Meanwhile, the Soviet News Bureau announced that 50,000 German prisoners of war would be returned from Russia by the end of April.

U. S. Starved Germans For Decade, Langer Says

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP)—Senator William Langer (R., N. Dak.) declared tonight that Administration leaders "imposed deliberate mass starvation policies on 50 million Germans."

The North Dakotan, speaking at a testimonial dinner here, said that "for the past decade the American people have allowed two American Presidents to make a miserable mockery of our constitutional prohibitions against secret foreign agreements."

"As a result," he went on, "Congress has been pressured into signing blank checks, which have been filled in by the outrageous betrayals of power politicans and which are going to have to be redeemed by what remains of America's blood, treasure and tradition."

Langer said that in addition to sinking the German fishing fleet and imposing mass starvation policies on the Germans, American leaders:

1. "Agreed to the senseless dismantlement program that destroyed the industrial potential upon which the rest of Europe is so desperately dependent."

2. "Imposed the savage denazification program that has destroyed any semblance of personal rights and security . . ."

3. "Agreed to the mass deportation of millions of helpless women and children, and to an outrageous revival of human slavery . . ."

4. "Agreed to the destruction of the concept of private property . . . which not only furthers Russia's interests, but leaves the American people liable to damage suits running into billions of dollars if the concept of private property is ever restored in international law."

Tito's Press Hits 2 Nations

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 26 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito's government press today charged Bulbaria and Albania with using medieval and fascist tortures to gain confessions from Yugoslavia nationals recently tried for "anti-state" activities.

The attacks in the morning newspapers Borba and Politica were the strongest yet by the Yugoslav press against her Cominform neighbors.

The charges were similar to those leveled by the West against Hungary and Bulgaria during the espionage trials of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty and 15 Protestant pastors.

Borba said four defendants were "tortured and ill-treated in jail."

The Sofia court yesterday sentenced Dr. Chedomir Ilich, doctor for the Yugoslav Embassy, to 12½ years in prison and fined him 100,000 levas after convicting him of "espionage" and "anti-state" activities.

Borba and Politica both asserted Albania and Bulgara are trying by persecuton to alienate loyal Yugoslavs from their government, with little success.

Czechs Reject British Protest

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 26 (U.P.).—The government today rejected a British protest against the expulsion of Capt Philip Wildash, the British military permit officer in Prague, charging he had taken part in a "terrorist organization" plotting against the Communist regime here.

Wildash left Prague Wednesday under threat of arrest if he were not out within 24 hours.

The British, French and United States ambassadors were conferring at the British Embassy when the Czech rejection was released. Officials declined to discuss the conversation.

2 Seized in Turkey In Phone Tapping Case

Istanbul, Turkey, March 26 (U.P.). Two brothers were arrested today on charges of tapping the American military mission's telephones to pick up information for Russia.

Police said the spy suspects—Vasily and George Kazi—cut in on telephone lines serving the mission's office at the port of Iskenderon, where American military shipments to Turkey are unloaded.

According to police, the Kazi brothers intercepted conversations between United States and Turkish military officials.

'Peace Conference' Picketed . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

LADY VETERAN'S SLOGAN—"Three down, one to go," reads the placard carried by Grace Ball (front), a former WAC corporal in the picket line outside Carnegie Hall, New York City, where the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace was in session yesterday. The sign refers to Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo as the "three down" and Stalin as the "one to go" nist criticism of artists who deviate from party directives. Mention of the Soviet at this panel elicited prolonged applause. American "imperialism" was greeted with boos and hisses.

With Shostakovitch were Alexander A. Fadeyev and Peter A. Pavlenko. This portion of the session was reported thus:

Poet Robert Lowell rose and said: "My heart goes out to Mr. Shostakovitch. I would like to ask him how many writers and musicians have benefited by the criticism of his government?"

Shostakovitch, who has been taken to task in Moscow for "errors" and who made public apology, spoke swiftly and briefly: (according to the interpreter).

"Our musical criticism is a reflection of the life and movement of our music. It brings me much good, since it helps me bring my music forward."

Fadeyev angrily denied that Soviet writers who criticized communism had disappeared. He also denied he had attacked American culture, "only those forces which work against peace."

Pavlenko said "aggression threatens us, but in no way does it threaten the United States."

The CSC meetings were picketed all day. The rival Americans for Intellectual Freedom, in contrast, met no opposition.

Dr. Sidney Hook of New York University, and one of the leaders of AIF, said the purpose of the AIF rally was to "do something which the CSC will not and cannot do—tell the truth about the state of cultural freedom in our divided world . . ."

Hook said Russians were in an "intellectual strait-jacket."

He also expressed disapproval of State Department action that barred certain delegates from entering this country to attend the rival CSC meeting.

Dr. Counts at his own rally, formally invited Shostakovich to follow the example of Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, who leaped to freedom from the Soviet consulate.

A speech by Mrs. Kasenkina was read to the meeting. She denied there is "social, political and cultural equality in Russia" and said that she learned "to my sorrow" that "apologists for Soviet tyranny" include many American women.

Many AIF speakers pointed out that there are bars to complete intellectual freedom in many countries besides the Soviet.

Dr. Hermann J. Muller, 1946 Nobel Prize winner, reminded, however, that "so long as political democracy exists, conditions can always be improved. Dr. Muller called "the destruction of science in the U. S. S. R." a tragedy of the greatest significance, accomplished by calculated brutality."

He called the Lysenko doctrine of genetics "militant mysticism," pointing out that Lysenko thus supported the Nazi doctrine of the master and subject races.

A. J. Muste, secretary of Peacemakers, a pacific organization, impartially attacked all intellectuals as having backed war as much as anyone else. Other AIF speakers included Arthur M. Schlesinger, jr., Morris Ernst, Louis Fisher, Bertrand Wolfe and Dr. Bryn J. Hovde.

Anna Louise Strong, American newspaperwoman, recently ousted from Russia as a spy, attended the CSC keynote session earlier today and told a newsman: "I don't think I can call it (the meeting) a Communist front."

"Today I met one of the delegates who is a member of a Republican State committee. Another delegate is a Progressive, but more anti-Soviet than otherwise." She declined to name them.

Rogge said later that Miss Strong "today sent $1000 toward the defense of the leaders of the Communist party with this message: 'To the defense fund of the 12 American Communists, who are getting the same raw deal from American justice as I did from Soviet justice. From a fellow victim of the cold war.'"

Drought Cuts Production In Italy 7%

Rome, March 26 (AP).—Dry weather has struck a staggering blow to Italy's postwar industrial recovery.

The worst shortage of hydro-electric power in the nation's history threatens a temporary shutdown of major industry, a European Recovery Program (ERP) official said today.

He said industrial output, which on January 1 equaled or exceeded prewar production, already had slumped 7 to 10 per cent.

Rigid new electricity rationing may cut production to less than half of normal, he added.

Italy's cabinet is considering creation of a powerful special committee to allocate and establish strict priority controls over all power sources.

The drought is the worst since 1921.

For two months, north Italy had been denied normal use of electricity on three days a week, from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. Central Italy, including Rome, has lacked power two days a week.

Franco-Italian Treaty Signed

Paris, March 26 (AP).—France and Italy today signed a treaty designed to tear down the tariff wall between them and eventually to unify all their trade.

The pact calls for a Franco-Italian customs union in 1950 and a complete economic merger by 1955.

Foreign Ministers Robert Schuman of France and Carlo Sforza of Italy, hailed it as a move forward on the road to European unity.

"This bilateral agreement will one day, and we hope soon, become multilateral and European," Schuman declared.

The Franco-Italian customs union will be the second in present-day Europe. Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands abolished tariffs among them in January of last year.

Schuman and Sforza also agreed on a new exchange rate of 180 lire, instead of 220, for 100 francs. It provided for revision of this rate on the basis of changes in the dollar rates in France and Italy.

Airlift Flies Record 51,049 Tons in Week

Berlin, March 26 (AP)—The Allied airlift set a new record the past week.

It moved 51,049 tons in the seven days ended at noon today. The old mark was 45,683 tons during the second week of March.

The daily average is now only 800 tons short of what German officials say is needed for western Berlin to function as though a blockade did not exist.

Chinese Reds Schedule Peace Talks

Nanking, March 26 (AP). — The Chinese Communists tonight told the government to send its peace delegation to Peiping, ready to talk business next Friday.

The brief instruction, broadcast in Chinese and English, named a five-man Communist delegation, headed by Chou En-lai, No. 2 Red political figure.

The broadcast reiterated that the eight Communist terms of January 14 (which amount to unconditional surrender) would be "the basis for negotiations by both sides."

Members of the five-man government peace delegation declined comment. Chairman Shao Li-tze was pessimistic.

The Communists were continuing an attack on Anking, 150 miles southwest of Nanking. It is one of the last important government positions on the north bank of the Yangtze River.

Spain Favors Portugal Bid

Madrid, March 26 (AP).—Spain implied today she would approve acceptance by Portugal, her ally in the Iberian Pact, of an invitation to join the North Atlantic Alliance.

A foreign ministry spokesman hailed the North Atlantic Treaty as "the first serious effort to defend Continental Europe against Soviet imperialism."

The cabinet discussed the Atlantic treaty yesterday during a long meeting with Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

(Spain hasn't been invited to join. Portugal and three other nations, Denmark, Italy and Iceland, received invitations recently from the eight original members—the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, Netherlands, Luxembourg and Norway. The treaty is geared to the Charter of the United Nations. Spain is not a member of the U. N.).

Italian Red Held After Offering To Kill Premier

Rome, March 26 (NYHT)—Police arrested today a 20-year-old member of the Communist Party who was charged with volunteering to assassinate Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

The youth, Antonio Grillo, wrote to Luigi Longo, a top Communist leader, offering to kill De Gasperi in an effort to keep Italy out of the Atlantic Pact, asserting that the premier's death might prevent greater bloodshed for Italy. Longo turned the letter over to the police.

The youth told police his real reason for writing the letter was to attract attention to himself in the hope he could get work.

Iran Reports Soldier Killed By Russians

Tehran, Iran, March 26 (AP).—A high military source said today a detachment of 50 Soviet troops has killed one Iranian soldier and wounded and captured two others in a disputed frontier region.

The incident, the informant said, occurred in an area claimed by Iran, in the Gurgan district south of the Atrek River.

(The date was not stated in this dispatch, which passed through Iranian censorship.)

The Iranian commander protested to the Soviet consul in the city of Gurgan and demanded return of the prisoners. Negotiations for release of the two and payment of indemnity were reported under way.

Press sources reported the Soviet commander in the area isued and ultimatum to Iranians to withdraw from frontier posts in the area and massed Soviet regiments in a show of force, but the Iranian command moved up an equal force and there was no action at that time.

The Gurgan district is in northeast Iran, adjoining the Soviet Turkman republic.

A reported worsening of relations between Iran and Russia was believed the result of the Iranian ban upon the Tudeh (Communist) Party.

Some members of the party are on trial, charged with conspiracy in an assassination attempt against 29-year-old King Reza Pahlevi.

French Go To Polls Again

Paris, March 26 (AP).—The second serving of a French election comes up Sunday.

The voting is for 785 local political posts.

The election began last Sunday, but only 723 of 1508 seats in the general councils were filled, because an absolute majority was required for election. The council posts are on the county government level and do not carry much power. However, the election is regarded as a political weathervane.

Sunday, the candidates getting the most votes in the runoff win.

Last week, the government bloc of parties got 51.12 per cent of the vote. De Gaulle's French Peoples Party got 25.34 per cent and the Communists, 23.54 per cent.

Anti-Union Paper Banned by NLRB

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered a southern textile firm fighting the CIO's "operation Dixie" to stop circulating a newspaper which threatened reprisal or force against employes who joined the Textile Workers' Union (CIO).

The board said that the company's circulation of the paper, the Trumpet, was not protected by the employers' free speech provision of the Taft-Hartley Act or by the Constitution.

The board also ordered the Bibb Manufacturing Co., Macon, Ga., to stop causing the Porterdale, Ga., police to spy on organizing activities of the union.

The company, the board said, "did use the police department as an instrumentality to impede self-organization of its employes."

The Bibb company employs 8000 workers at plants in Macon, Porterdale, Columbus and Reynolds, Ga. The Trumpet is a weekly newspaper published at Columbus. The board said the company started circulating the paper to all its employes shortly after the union had announced organization of Bibb plants was a major objective in "operation Dixie."

"Operation Dixie' is the CIO's name for a one-million-dollar Southern organizing campaign it started on June 1, 1946.

The labor board said the Trumpet "is not a 'newspaper' in the usual sense of the term."

"In our opinion," it said, "the Trumpet can hardly be viewed as more than an anti-CIO tract with its coercive effectiveness dependent upon its reaching the textile mill workers. By having copies delivered to all its employes the company contributed to achieving this effectiveness."

The board said the company "had the constitutional right to compaign against the union by expressions of views and opinions, free of coercion and restraint."

"However, it is abundantly clear," the board said, "that at least some statements in the Trumpet were designed to defeat self-organization not by appealing to the employes' sense of reason, but by inciting physical violence, by threatening loss of employment, and by promises of benefit."

The board said the Taft-Hartley Act "was not designed to protect the rights of employes against wrongful municipal action."

"But," it said, "when an employer is a party to such municipal action, which interferes with, restrains and coerces his employes, his action falls within the interdiction of the act."

The board ordered the company to stop causing distribution of The Trumpet or any other publication calculated to coerce its employes, stop causing the Porterdale police to spy on union activities, and reinstate four employes with back pay who were discharged because of union activities.

The princess was divorced last year by the Shah of Iran after nine years of marriage without a son

Union Asks President for Soviet Accord

Cedar Rapids, Iowa., March 26 (AP).—The CIO United Farm Equipment Workers (UFEW) today adopted a resolution asking President Truman to take action to "restore peaceful relations with the Soviet Union."

About 15 delegates voted against the proposal in a standing vote. One said the objection was chiefly to the wording of the resolution. It is possible it may be recalled for committee revision.

Asked where they were from, most of the dissenters said they represented locals in Moline and Rock Island, Ill.

Resolution Critical

The foreign policy resolution criticized the Truman doctrine and the Marshall Plan. It said the North Atlantic Pact represented "a new get-ready-for-war policy by our State Department."

Earlier, the approximately 300 delegates, representing about 55,000 dues-paying members, unanimously adopted resolutions which:

1. Called for immediate repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and for "a national work holiday" to support the repeal drive.

2. Demanded the repeal of the peacetime draft, and asserted opposition to universal military training.

Illinois Red Act Hit

3. Stated opposition to the Broyles proposals before the Illinois Legislature. These proposals would make communism a felony, and require loyalty oaths of school teachers and public officials.

4. Asked Congress to enact a full civil rights program, to abolish the House Committee on Un-American Activities, to enact a housing program, to cut taxes on low-income families, and to reestablish price control.

5. Criticized the 1948 CIO national convention at Portland for "intimidating delegates" and "refusing to permit the reading of minority reports."

It was at the Portland convention that the CIO national executive board ordered UFEW to merge with the CIO United Auto Workers. The convention yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution refusing to comply.

Move by U. S. Delays Strike On Pullmans

By The Associated Press

The National Mediation Board yesterday said it has intervened in a Nation-wide strike of Pullman conductors set for March 31. This means an indefinite postponement of the walkout.

The Order of Railway Conductors (ORC) called the strike. Its grievances are over pay and working conditions under the union's contracts.

Harry W. Fraser, ORC president, who was in Washington yesterday on another matter, announced officially that the strike has been deferred.

The National Railroad Adjustment Board was created to settle disputes like this—arising over differing interpretations of contracts. But the machinery of that board has been stalled for a long time.

The appeal had the support of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in whose headquarters Gamboa served during the war.

Speedy Formation of Anti-Red Labor Federation Sought

By the United Press

Conferences aimed at the speedy formation of a new anti-Communist World Federation of Labor opened yesterday among leaders of the AFL, CIO and British Trades Union Congress.

The British delegation conferred with AFL President William Green and his top officials, and planned to meet today with CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey and other top CIO officers.

The new body would counter the World Federation of Trade Unions, which Soviet Russia has taken over as a weapon in the Communist propaganda war. This organization originally was set up by the British, CIO and Russians in 1945 but the AFL refused to join because of the CIO and Communist members.

The British and the CIO broke with the Communists and pulled out last year. The Dutch and Canadians followed. They now hope to establish a new democratic world organization of more than 40 million workers to pit against the 30 million in the Communist-dominated federation.

Arthur Deakin, head of the WFTU until the British withdrew from that organization, headed the British delegation.

Pay Downgrading Asked for AEC Head

By Carl Levin
NYHT News Service

A Senate committee considering salary increases for top Government officials has asked the Senate to approve a schedule which would move the chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission from a favored position above that of cabinet officers to a third echelon rating alongside assistants and deputy administrators of other agencies, it was learned yesterday.

This reevaluation of the relative importance of the Nation's far-flung atomic energy program has been proposed by the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Civil Service. The bill, which in effect is a reclassification of top Government posts, is on the Senate calendar awaiting action. A similar bill is pending in the House.

$10,000 More for Cabinet

The bill would raise the salaries of members of the Cabinet from $15,000 to $25,000 a year; would provide $20,000 salaries for 25 sub-Cabinet officials, and $18,000 salaries for 17 supposedly still lower ranking executives.

The chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, a post now held by David E. Lilienthal, would receive $18,000 along with such other Government administrators as the Assistant Director of the Bureau of the Budget, the Assistant Comptroller General, the executive assistant administrator of veterans' affairs, the Assistant Federal Security Administrator, the director of the administrative office of the United States Courts, the deputy Administrator for Economic Cooperation, the executive secretary of the National Security Council, the Public Printer and the Librarian of Congress.

The proposed relative downgrading of what has been considered one of the most important positions in the country follows by less than 2½ years Congress' determination in the McMahon Act that the man who directs atomic energy development is entitled to a salary above that of a Cabinet officer.

Scale Is Detailed

As a result of committee amendments, the Senate will be asked to approve $25,000 salaries for Cabinet officers; and $20,000 salaries for the administrator for Economic Cooperation (the same rate set by the ECA Act), the Comptroller General, the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, the director of the Bureau of the Budget, the chairman of the National Security Resources Board (the post for which Mon C. Wallgren's nomination has been tabled), the Federal Security administrator, the administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the Undersecretaries of the various executive departments, the assistant to the Attorney General, the Solicitor General, the First Assistant Post Master General, and six White House administrative assistants.

Efforts to learn whether the relative downgrading of Lilienthal was a result of opposition among some Senators to Lilienthal personally and to civilian control of atomic energy in general produced no positive information. Lilienthal's arch enemy in the Senate, Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), is a member of the committee but was not a member of the subcommittee which proposed the relative downgrading. Asked if he had anything to do with it, he said that he did not even know of it.

Price Support Cost Revealed

favoring a change in the law since the expensive experience of 1946. On November 29, 1946, the then Secretary, Clinton P. Anderson, appealed to the incoming Congress to act at once to halt further losses.

Later Anderson, in personal appearances before the 80th Congress, repeated his plea. Finally, on February 26, 1948 he wrote Congressional leaders urging prompt action.

Last-Minute Compromise

Brannan, then assistant secretary, echoed Anderson's appeals. But no action was taken until in the closing moment of Congress last June, a compromise price-support bill was adopted on orders from the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia. This law gave Brannan the opportunity he wanted to lower support levels this year.

The Department also points out that misdirected public opinion has added to the cost. Historically—before price supports were invented—a large part of the annual potato crop usually was either left in the ground, fed to livestock, or not picked up.

But when PMA tried to destroy Government-owned potatoes the public howled to the high heavens. The potatoes destroyed were of a type so full of water that they would spoil in 24 hours, yet the outraged shouts of politicians and others forced the Department to take expensive measures to save them.

Potatoes were bagged, shipped and delivered hundreds of miles to starch mills, alcohol plants etc., for less than the cost of the bags. In one case in Chicago a scavenger bought several carloads of rapidly spoiling potatoes for one cent a 100-pound sack. He dumped the potatoes at a hog-feeding farm, washed the sacks and sold them for 10 cents apiece—a profit of 1000 per cent.

If it hadn't been for expensive processes designed by some industries such as the Publicker Interests in Philadelphia, the loss might have been even greater. Publicker worked out a way to make potato flour out of mush of the waste potatoes, which was furnished to occupation forces overseas at considerable saving in the cost of maintaining the Armed Forces there. Publicker also used large amounts to make commercial alcohol, which brought in some return to the Government from excise taxes on alcohol.

One big reason for the huge cost of the potato program has been over-production, and the big cause of over-production has been the advance in potato raising in recent years.

The crop yield for the entire country last year averaged 212.4 bushels an acre. Only 15 years before, in 1933, it was 100 bushels, while 10 years ago it was only 124. Today we raise more potatoes on half an acre than we did a few years ago on an entire acre.

Potatoe experts predict this increase will continue—a situation that makes crop control through acreage control a difficult task.

Rent Control Extension Set

Senate-offered phrases added up to the same thing.

He told reporters that Senate conferees felt the simple words "a fair net income," without excluding interest and amortization charges, would boost rents unjustifiably.

The conference version of rent control has developed into a "home rule" measure. State legislatures can decontrol, and cities, towns and villages can junk controls with the approval of State Governors.

Before the road block over rent increases, the conferees agreed to give the Federal Housing Expediter discretion to free so-called luxury apartments from control, provided the landlord intended to convert the large units into smaller ones.

Rent ceilings on permanent apartments in non-transient hotels in cities of 2,500,000 (New York and Chicago) would be restored at the October 31, 1949, level.

The conference bill defined non-transient hotels as those having less than 75 per cent of their rooms occupied on a day-to-day basis as of October 31, 1948.

Each group of conferees has the task of "selling" the conference report to its respective house. When deadlocks arise in conference, it usually is because one side or the other fears the body it represents will not accept the compromise offered.

Maryland Rent Control Extension Is Approved

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—A proposed one-year extension of Maryland's standby rent control act won committee approval today.

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted a unanimous favorable report on a Senate bill to keep home rule rent control powers on the books until June 1, 1950. Under a law due to expire next June, Baltimore and 10 counties are authorized to impose ceilings if Federal controls are lifted.

Virginia Has Five Days To Invoke State Plan

Richmond, Va., March 26 (AP).—Governor Tuck has five days to make up his mind on whether to invoke the Virginia rent control law in case Congress lets the Federal law expire next Thursday. He said today he had "no comment" on the need for the extension of rent control in the State.

Virginia has a "local option" rent control act which can be imposed if Federal controls are lifted.

Wagner's Son to Run If Father Resigns

New York, March 26 (AP).—Robert F. Wagner, jr., chairman of the city planning commission, says he would "be delighted to run" for the U. S. Senate if his father resigns and causes a vacancy this year.

The senior Wagner, Democratic Senator from New York, has been in ill health for some time. His current term expires next year but there have been reports he would quit in the next few months in time to make a special election next November necessary.

Young Wagner said no decision had been reached as yet on a resignation.

Fiancee Sees Pilot Die in CAP Crash

Santa Ana, Calif., March 26 (AP). Pilot Norman F. Lee crashed to his death today while his fiancee looked on from another plane.

Lee, a 25-year-old Civil Air Patrol pilot, of Santa Ana, brushed wings with the craft in which his fiancee, Barbara Brown of Long Beach, Calif., was a passenger. His light monoplane plunged out of control. The other ship was piloted by Rosalee Bentley, also of the CAP. She landed safely.

Lee died instantly when his ship struck a hillside in the exclusive Lemon Heights district near here.

Taft Suggests 4.28 Billion Ceiling for ECA

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) suggested yesterday that Congress limit European recovery funds to $4,280,000,000 and let President Truman decide whether to use that amount during 12 or during 15 months.

Taft told reporters this proposal has been discussed among Senators along with suggestions for a flat 10 per cent cut in the pending bill to put a $5,580,000,000 ceiling on Marshall Plan aid to western Europe in the next 15 months. The Senate resumes debate on the measure Monday.

The Foreign Relations Committee has approved a $4,280,000,000 outlay for the year beginning July 1. It also has recommended that $1,150,000,000 be made available for April, May and June, plus 150 million dollars in contracting authority for later use.

The Ohio Senator's suggestion would duplicate the action Congress took last year, when it voted $5,050,000,000

Taft said an amendment may be offered for a 10 per cent cut in the over-all $5,580,000,000 figure in line with economy talks between House and Senate Republicans.

Taft said he fears that unless some cut is made in the European recovery budget there won't be much over-all savings.

"I don't see why we should be asked to appropriate more this year than we did in the last Congress," Taft said.

"We could make the $4,280,000,000 available for 15 months and if the President finds it has to be spent faster, we will be back here next January and can take the matter up then, just as we have this year.

The Ohio Senator, who heads the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said he doesn't believe all of the money made available last year will be spent before this July 1.

He contended that, while contracts may have been let or commitments made for the remainder, actual cash outlays by the Treasury for the Economic Cooperation Administration will reach only about three billion dollars on April 1.

D. C. Rent Bill Faces Fight on Senate Floor

The District rent control bill, already passed by the House, last night appeared slated for Senate floor action Tuesday or Wednesday.

This became apparent as Senate leaders gave assurance that the local rent measure will clear Congress and be on President Truman's desk before its expiration date Thursday at midnight.

The measure has been held up pending final action on the national bill.

The separate District rent bill faces a showdown test on the Senate floor when Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) will lead a fight to bring the city rent measure in line with the weaker national rent bill.

"It's perfectly silly to have one set of rules for Congressmen, their staffs and Government workers and another set for the balance of the country," McCarthy said last night.

Too Costly in China To Print Own Money

Shanghai, Sunday, March 27 (AP). China's currency is so inflated you couldn't even afford to print your our paper money.

The job printing department of the American-owned Post-Mercury today estimated with inflated salaries and expenses it would cost about 200,000 "gold yuan" to print 100 of these 100-yuan notes.

Maryland Adopts Its Biggest Budget

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The General Assembly signed a $157,839,000 check today for Governor Lane, to pay Government expenses, and do some hospital building in the year beginning next July 1.

With only a few scattered objections, the House passed Maryland's record budget bill and returned it to the Senate for approval of a few minor changes.

In no time at all the Senate agreed, and the Administration had permission to spend more money than ever before in one year of Free Stae history.

The working budget itself amounts to $134,299,629. The remaining $23,539,300 is available from the Treasury surplus for new buildings and improvements at the mental hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria.

This year—which ends June 30—the State expects its operating budget to total $118,073,000, in itself a record for Maryland.

The surplus spending for a pay-as-you-go construction program is a new thing. It means the State will put out all but some two million dollars of its left-over money for buildings. Up to now, Maryland has made a practice of issuing bonds for all its new construction.

Board Wants Va. Milk Prices Cut

The Arlington County Board yesterday went on record favoring reduction in Virginia milk prices to conform with price cuts recently announced by most of the dairies in Washington and nearby Maryland.

County Manager A. T. Lundberg was instructed to voice the board's sentiments at a public hearing which the Virginia State Milk Commission will hold on the question Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Alexandria's George Mason Hotel.

Permission of the commission is necessary before price cuts can be put into effect in Virginia.

In other actions yesterday the board:

(1) Agreed to purchase for $12,760.50 part of a 22-acre site bounded by N. Lexington st., 9th rd., Wilson blvd. and the Washington & Old Dominion Railroad for a park and playground. The county hopes eventually to purchase the entire tract at a total cost of $35,874.

(3) Approved after lengthy and heated debate a $571 bill at the rate of $100 a day submitted by Albert A. Carretta, member of the county public utilities commission, for legal work connected with PUC's preliminary work in trying to obtain a reduction in county gas rates.

(3) Learned from Commonwealth Attorney Denman T. Rucker that it could legally make a $25,000 appropriation requested by Arlington Hospital for treatment of emergency cases, but postponed action until adoption of the 1949-50 budget.

(4) Referred to County Manager Lundberg a petition signed by 128 residents asking action against the flooding of N. Roosevelt st. by Four Mile Run.

(5) Recessed until Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. when it will consider a possible increase in the tax rate.

Falls Church Water System Work to Begin

Work will begin Monday on construction of a one-million-dollar water supply system for Falls Church, Va.

Approved by a public referendum a year ago, the project involves (1) laying 24-inch mains from Chain Bridge to a $45,000 pumping station to be built near Chesterbrook; (2) construction of a one-million-gallon storage tank, and (3) laying a system of 12-inch mains to connect the new reservoir with the regular Falls Church system.

Falls Church now gets most of its water from Arlington.

City Manager Roy F. Dunn said the first step in the project will be laying of 12-inch mains along Great Falls road.

Bill for Charter Passed for Town Of Morningside

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The House passed unanimously today a bill which writes a town charter for Morningside in Prince George's County.

The Senate still must act on the measure to incorporate the town, in the county's Spaulding district.

If finally enacted and signed by the Governor, Morningside citizens would have a chance to accept or reject the charter at a referendum the third Monday in May.

Should a majority approve, candidates for the town's first five-member council would have to file within 10 days. The election would be held 10 days after that.

Maryland Gets Tax Revenue Bill for Parks

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The Maryland National Park and Planning Commission could spend special tax revenues for recreational centers and community buildings in Montgomery County, if a county delegation bill passes the General Assembly.

The bill was introduced today. The all-Republican delegation put in a bill to cover those improvements in playground expenditures of the commission. A 5-cent tax is now authorized for recreational facilities.

Oyster, Fishing Bills Pass Maryland Senate

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—Two versions of how to get Maryland and Virginia together on their maritime problems got approval of the Maryland Senate today.

Both bills go to the House for final action.

One of them would create a commission to supervise oystering in the Potomic River alone—aimed at peace in the "oyster war" which has plagued the States beyond the memory of living man.

The other goes further. It calls for a commission on both the Potomac River and the Chesapeake Bay. This commission would not only act on oyster matters in the Potomac but on fishing and crabbing in the bay and river.

The idea is to give the Virginia Legislature both bills, so in 1950 it can choose between them.

'No More Tax Bills,' Lane Tells Assembly

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The Administration flatly ordered today that there be no more tax legislation in 1949, except that it has already approved.

Some State Senators got set for some argument about it anyway.

The order against passing tax bills was based on the theory that any or all of them would disrupt the fiscal program already set up.

There was a promise, however, there will be a commission created to go over the Maryland system and hunt out all the unfair taxes.

Although it was conceded that Governor Lane's position would be upheld, some Senators insisted upon setting Monday night for open debate on a half dozen of their pet tax measures. Most of them deal with tax reductions.

Dutch, Indonesians Plan Peace Talks

Batavia, Java, March 26 (U.P.).—Dutch and Indonesian leaders will meet here next week, probably Wednesday, in preliminary talks aimed at ending fighting in Indonesia, a United Nations spokesman said today.

Dutch sources reported Dr. Herman Van Royen, Netherlands representative in the United Nations Security Council, will head the Dutch delegation.

KNOCKDOWN BATTLE—This is definitely Capt. George Cauthen's round in the scrap with his bride, the former Barbara Jean Floyd, "Miss New Orleans of 1948." He grins as he paddles her in the lobby of a New Orleans hotel after she attacked him with a folded newspaper. Said divorce-seeking Mrs. Cauthen, "It didn't hurt much. I had my girdle on."

New Orleans, March 25 (U.P.).—Dashing Capt. George Cauthen flipped "Miss New Orleans of 1948," his plane-ticket bride, over his knee in a hotel lobby today and spanked her where her tight gabardine dress was the tightest.

But as far as physical injury went, Cauthen was the loser. She hit him, slapped him, scratched him. She chewed one leg so lustily she tore his trousers and left the mark of her teeth in the flesh.

The beautiful 18-year-old bride, formerly Barbara Jean Floyd, was angry at Cauthen for saying: (1) that she proposed to him; (2) that it appeared he had "been taken," when they were married, and (3) that he was going to write his memoirs and call them, "How green was my billfold."

Cauthen is assistant chief pilot for a Pan American Airways subsidiary in Colombia.

When Cauthen entered the Reed Hotel on respectable St. Charles ave., she was waiting for him in the lobby with her shoes off. She sailed into him as he stepped into the elevator with his arms full of packages.

That was when the biting, scratching and slapping took place. Cauthen grabbed her hands and held them. A couple of photographers were standing by with cameras aimed. Cauthen asked them not to take a picture. They took pictures anyway.

"Well, if you are going to take a picture, I am going to give you something to take one of," he said.

Whereupon, he flipped his bride over one knee and gave her a sound paddling.

She laughed while he spanked her.

"You can't hurt me, George Cauthen," she said. "I've got my girdle on."

She tried to hit him after he let her go. Then she tried to tackle him, but he finally broke away and got to his room.

She went up after him, and started to talk to him through the door.

"You had better come out and face the music, George Cauthen," she said.

"I'm going to call your mother or your father to come and get you," he said.

"You've got a lot to pay for," she said. " . . . this is the first time I ever saw a man afraid of a real woman."

"Oh, Barbara . . . "

"Don't call me 'Barbara'," she said. "I'm Miss Floyd to you."

"All right, Barbara," he said.

Then the hotel manager came up and ordered her and the reporters and photographers to leave.

Cauthen married her in Medellin, Colombia, where she was appearing with a theatrical troupe. She returned to New Orleans Monday and announced that the only reason she married Cauthen was because she was broke and needed a plane ticket home.

He arrived Thursday, wanting a personal interview with her, to tell him why she married hem.

She finally convinced him it wasn't love.

Primary Set For August 2 In Arlington

Arlington County Democrats will hold a primary August 2 to nominate a candidate for the county board seat which comes up for election in November.

This was announced yesterday by C. Harrison Mann, chairman of the county Democratic executive committee, in response to a request by the Arlington County Civic Federation that county and school board elections be placed on a nonpartisan basis. The decision was made at a meeting of the committee Thursday night, Mann said.

He indicated, however, that the party will not hold a primary for the school board because it feels that "the administration of the schools should be kept out of politics."

The federation had objected to party primaries on the grounds (1) that they discriminate against Federal employes who, under the Hatch Act, are forced to run as independent candidates, and (2) that candidates should be chosen on their own merits instead of "meaningless party labels."

Speaking for the committee, Mann replied that though only 38 per cent of the county's employed population work for the Federal Government, three of the five County Board members are government employes.

To the second objection, Mann said "the quickest way to stifle the two-party system . . . is to kill it off at the local level."

He pointed out that when the Democrats did refrain from holding a County Board primary in 1947 it created a situation where groups under "high-sounding nonpartisanlike names" stepped in to take the place of regular political parties.

Dealer Tags Denied Loan Firm

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp has issued a stop order on sale of auto dealer license tags to 20 to 25 finance companies and banks which have received them in the past.

The issuance is being held up pending action by the District Commissioners Tuesday on an opinion by the corporation counsel's office on whether such firms are legally entitled to purchase the tags.

The companies contend that such tags are necessary to repossess cars on which loan repayments have halted, since they do not have authority to use the existing auto tags.

Education Aid Bill Passage Held 'Must'

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Federal aid to education "this time . . . surely must pass," Chairman Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) of the Senate Labor Committee said yesterday.

An aid-to-education bill was reported out by Thomas' committee Friday. This measure, Thomas said, is almost exactly like that passed last year by the Senate and defeated in the House. The only important exception, he added, is that the 1949 bill contains no school health provisions, these having been incorporated in a separate measure.

"This time," said Thomas, "Federal aid to education surely must pass. Those of us who have worked for its fruition for a number of years firmly believe that our greatest efforts to bring about this desirable legislation are surely behind us.

"Probably no proposal has withstood so great refinement as has been accomplished in the evolution which has produced the 1949 Federal aid-to-education bill."

Thomas stressed the point that the current measure specifically reserves to the States the right to operate their school systems in their own way. He would not favor, he said, "any bill . . . not based on the complete power of the State and local governments to determine the kind of education which they wish to receive."

The bill is truly bipartisan, the chairman said, quoting both Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate GOP Policy Committee and President Truman in support of its principles. His committee, Thomas said:

"Recognizes that the primary obligation to educate children under our constitutional system falls on the States and local communities which contribute, and very properly so, to their primary support. Were it not for the limited taxing power of State governments and were it not for the low degree of wealth obtaining in a number of States, the chasm between the opportunities which has become increasingly wider would not have become one of our greatest national problems—so much a problem, in fact, that it bids fair to become a national disgrace.

mittee members for again recommending a revenue measure focused on a sales levy, the minority report stated:

"The bill differs in only minor respects from the sales-tax bill which the House voted down two weeks ago." The new measure "is no more equitable or less discriminatory than its first edition. By transmitting substantially the same bill which failed just a short time ago, the majority of this committee demonstrates that it intends to continue to confuse issues and, thereby, to thwart the recorded will of the majority of the House."

The pro-sales-tax bloc of the District Committee concluded its majority report by indicating it considered concessions had been made to sales-tax opponents:

"The committee believes," the majority said, "that this bill, with its provisions for imposing a sales tax, for increasing the rate of taxation on real property, for providing liberal exemptions from income tax, and for increasing the alcohol beverage licenses, embodies methods for raising revenue which are particularly suitable for the District."

Paper Publishes Reds' Ad, but Spurns Profit

Asbury Park, N. J., March 26 (AP).—The Asbury Park Evening Press published a half-page Communist Party advertisement today and announced on page one that it was passing on the proceeds to the American Red Cross.

The advertisement, which was headed "Patriots Fight for Peace," urged the public to read the Daily Worker for the facts on the current trial of United States Communist leaders.

The Evening Press said in its page-one announcement it was printing the Communist advertisement because it believes in defending free speech "for its enemies as well as its friends."

The announcement added that the enwspaper had "no desire to profit from the sale on such advertising. Therefore, the entire proceeds, . . . amounting to $144.48, is today being sent to the American Red Cross for its work among members of the armed forces of the United States."

Plane Wreck Believed Pennsylvanians' Craft

New Orleans, March 26 (U.P.)—Civil Aeronautics Inspector H. B. Mitchell said tonight he believed the wreckage of an airplane found in a dense swamp near Carlisle, La., might be the one in which three Pennsylvanians disappeared mysteriously last November.

They were wealthy Mr. and Mrs. W. W. York and the pilot, Joel Ritter, all of Allentown, Pa. They were en route home via New Orleans after a flight to Texas

Boy Admits Killing His Bride's Sister

Condition Grave

Police Rookie Shoots Wife Accidentally

PVT. AND MRS. WYATT ROY
Wife accidentally shot

A 23-year-old rookie Washington policeman yesterday accidentally shot his wife, also 23, and then told fellow officers:

"If she dies, I might as well die, too. I won't have anything to live for."

He is Wyatt J. Roy, 1022 12th st. se., a policeman attached to No. 14 Precinct. His wife, Rosalie, is in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital.

According to the story Officer Roy told Inspector Clarence Lutz, he was cleaning his .38 service revolver yesterday about 12:30 p. m. in the second floor bedroom.

Roy said he had finished cleaning the gun and was dusting off fingerprints prior to returning it to its holster when it went off. The bullet struck Mrs. Roy in the left chest, narrowly missing their 11-month-old daughter, Jacqueline, who was being held by Mrs. Roy.

Milwaukee, March 26 (AP).—District Attorney William McCauley said today a 19-year-old bridegroom admitted today slaying 16-year-old Patricia Birmingham just before he eloped with her older sister.

McCauley's announcement came as a climax to a chain of events started by a fantastic coincidence. Pretty Pat's trussed and weighted body was dragged from the Milwaukee River last Sunday by firemen hunting for a suicide. The girl, who disappeared February 10, had been shot twice through the head.

The district attorney said Milton Babich told him he killed Pat because the younger girl knew that Kathleen, her 17-year-old sister and Babich's fiancee, was pregnant and threatened to tell her parents.

The break came after 45 hours of quizzing by police. Babich had been held on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of Kathleen, a minor, in urging her to elope with him two days before Pat's body was found.

Babich and Kathleen, who had left a note saying she was eloping with Milton, were traced to Kalamazoo, Mich., where they were married, and finally located at Minneapolis. They returned to Milwaukee voluntarily, accompanied by detectives.

The prosecutor quoted Babich as saying Kathleen did not know he killed Patricia. The youth added he didn't want Katheen's reputation smeared because she was pregnant.

"I think that's why Patricia was shot," McCauley said he told Babich.

Babich answered, "That's right. I was afraid she'd tell the family," the district attorney added.

McCauley said the youth told how he had bought the gun at the end of January because he said he knew he would have a showdown with Patricia. The shooting, according to McCauley, took place in the Babich family car shorty after he had picked up Patricia on her way home from high school.

Babich related, the district attorney said, that he put the gun on the front seat between them and Patricia "picked it up by the handle."

He took the gun away from her, he said, his finger hit the trigger and the gun went off.

McCauley said that when he asked Babich why a second shot was fired he answered, "I didn't know the first shot was fatal." Then McCauley said he asked Babich how he had decided to dispose of the body and he answered:

"Well, after the shooting my first thought was to dispose of the body. I had read in magazines how to dispose of bodies, so I went out looking for water. I figured that by dropping the body in water I would have everything covered up."

McCauley said the youth told him he disposed of the gun in the river, after dropping the body, weighted by a concrete block, into the water.

The youth was returned to jail. In the corridor, sobbing hysterically, was his bride of a few days. "Milton, don't worry, Milton!" she cried. She seemed near collapse.

Man on Bail Seized Again

A Cedar Heights (Md.) man, who was freed under $1000 bond two weeks ago after his arrest on charges of felonious assault and illegal possession of liquor, was listed as a "repeater" by Prince Georges County police yesterday.

Detective R. A. Pearson said Arthur (Bootsie) Green, 1108 64th ave., was arrested in his home late Friday night on charges identical with those on which he is awaiting grand jury action as a result of the earlier arrest.

On the second occasion, the arrest stemmed from a complaint by Charles Jones, 38, 520 5th st. se., that Green fired at him three times with a revolver during an argument over payment for a drink of liquor.

Police said they found eight gallons of home-made "Maryland corn" in Green's home when they went to arrest him, duplicating the haul they made two weeks ago when Green was taken into custody on an assault warrant sworn out by a woman.

The prisoner was remanded to jail in lieu of a new $1000 bond, pending a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court at 10 a. m. Monday.

Bridegroom, 19, Called Murderer

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
MILTON BABICH, 19, is pictured as he appeared at a habeas corpus hearing yesterday in Milwaukee. He is charged with the slaying of Patricia Birmingham, the 16-year-old sister of his bride of a few days. A district attorney said Babich made a statement admitting the killing

Two Soldiers Hurt, Held in Robbery Try

Two soldiers were in Gallinger Hospital yesterday, one with head injuries, after police foiled a midnight burglary attempt at Hogate's Sea Food Restaurant, Maine ave. and 9th st. sw.

The two were identified by police as Pvts. Duane Skinner, 18, and Chester R. Munson, 25, both of Co. G, 3d Infantry, at Fort Lesley J. McNair. Both were charged with housebreaking and held under police guard at the hospital.

Summoned by a watchman, Russell A. Allen, 804 6th st. sw., who noticed a rear window broken and raised, nine policemen took part in the soldiers' capture. They were found on the restaurant's second floor.

One policeman, Pvt. Eldon R. Ernest, fired two shots at them as they fled down a stairway.

Both were injured, police said, after one of them struck Allen in the eye. Police then came to Allen's aid. Munson received minor head injuries; Skinner a battered left eye and possible skull fracture.

Police said nothing was missing from the restaurant, but the cashier's cage had been entered on the first floor and an empty cash register opened and overturned. On the second floor, an attempt had been made to enter a beer locker they said.

24-Ounce Baby Gains

Huntington, W. Va., March 26 (AP).—Patricia Ann Cantrell is nine days old now and holding her own, though she weighs only a fraction over a pound and a half.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cantrell of Cattlettsburg, Ky., and weighed 24 ounces at birth March 17.

Man Shoots Self and Is Slain When He Turns Gun on Officer

A 56-year-old Ardmore (Md.) man fell in a hail of police bullets yesterday after he shot himself and attempted to turn his gun on a Prince Georges County policeman.

Pvt. Wiseman

The victim was Henry M. Phillips, described by police as a railroad worker. He was pronounced dead at the scene of the shooting, his Ardmore home, a few minutes later.

The shooting occurred at 2:55 p. m., after Police Pvts. William Wiseman and Emmett Gray had gone to Phillips' gray bungalow near Ardmore church to question him about a chicken theft.

Wiseman, 32, said he and Gray had separated upon approaching the house, Wiseman going to the back door, where he was greeted by Phillips, who motioned for him to follow him into the bedroom.

There, Wiseman said, Phillips snatched a revolver from a table and fired it into his own chest, cocked it quickly and turned it toward the officer. Wiseman said he fired in self-defense.

Phillips, a bachelor who neighbors said had occupied the small Ardmore house for more than 40 years, was pronounced dead by Dr. J. T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner. Maloney said death probably would have resulted from the self-inflicted bullet wound, even if the policeman had not fired.

Dr. Maloney said Phillips' body was pierced by six bullets, the self-inflicted one entering the chest near the heart and the five others in the chest and groin. He said he also found 20 to 25 shotgun pellets in Phillips' right leg.

An autopsy, Maloney said, will determine exactly which shots caused death.

3 Charged In Robbery; Car Traced

Because a woman holdup victim had presence of mind to get an automobile license number and detailed descriptions, police yesterday were able to round up three suspects who police say quickly confessed.

Mrs. Jennie Seniors, 40, of 20 Bass Circle se. told police a car drove up as she walked about 2:40 a. m. along B st. se. between Benning rd. and 46th st. Two men jumped out, she said, flashed an object she thought a weapon, and grabbed her pocketbook containing $10.

Tracing the license number, police set up a watch at 515 6th st. nw. and at 8 a. m. arrested Walter A. Hawkins, 19, of the 6th st. address; Tommy Johnson, 21, no fixed address, and a 17-year-old who was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Hawkins and Johnson were charged with robbery and bound to the grand jury under $5000 bonds after arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Police said they admitted the robbery "because they needed money."

Rent Hearing Set Monday

District Rent Examiner William F. Mansfield will hold a hearing on proposed rent increases on 265 units of the Benning Heights project in Southeast Washington Monday at 9:30 a. m. in the board room of the District Building.

The owners, Benning Heights, Inc., have requested that rents of three-room apartments be raised from $49.75 to $54.75 and on four-room units from $61.50 to $67.50. The Benning Heights Civic Association has gone on record in opposition to rent boosts on the four-family structures located on Alabama ave. and E st. se.

Sale of Half-Pint Costs Bootlegger $150 or 180 Days

A $1.50 half-pint of whisky yesterday cost a curbstone bootlegger a sentence of $150 or 180 days.

The sentence was imposed by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson on James N. Graves, 24, of 1319 S st. nw., who pleaded guilty to keeping and selling whisky without a license.

Police said Graves was arrested January 30 in the vicinity of Portner and U sts. nw. after he sold an undercover man the half-pint on the street. He was convicted on the same charge in August, 1947, and sentenced to $50 or 60 days.

Two other persons were sentenced to $50 or 60 days yesterday by Judge Neilson after they also pleaded guilty to keepng and selling whisky without a license. They were George P. Hudson, 23, of 1334 Corcoran st. nw., and Mrs. Gladys Byar, 35, of 1421 Florida ave. nw.

D. C. Man Held Without Bail Is Released

A charge of drunken driving against a Washington man was dismissed in Arlington County Court yesterday because the defendant was held overnight without having bail set.

William A. Ring, 33, of 958 26th st. nw., was arrested the afternoon of February 9, held overnight in the county jail and did not have his bail set until he appeared in County Court next morning for preliminary hearing.

Trial Justice Hugh Reid observed that no evidence was offered to rebut the drunk driving charge and that the State Supreme Court of Appeals has ruled that the denial of an opportunity to apply for bail would not necessarily invalidate a conviction.

"However," Reid said, "it is difficult to imagine a case in which the result would not involve prejudice to the accused whether actual or potential."

Reid said there was no evidence that Ring asked to be taken before a bail commissoner. The refusal of police to take Ring to Washington, outside their jurisdiction, for examination by a doctor was "entirely proper," Reid said. But he added that the mere fact of his detention made it impossible for Ring to have blood tests made until it was too late to be of any value.

Court officials are now considering plans to set up the position of assistant trial justice or some similar post so that a person qualified to set bail will be available at all times. The County Board, which would have to provide the funds for such a move, yesterday appointed Board Member F. Freeland Chew to consult with Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy, County Manager A. T. Lundberg and Judge Reid in the matter.

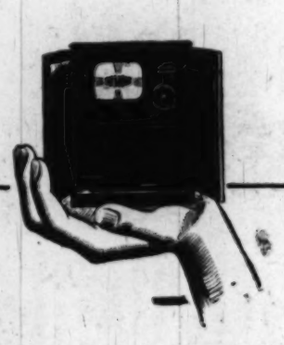
What to look for in Television



Use this check list when you select a television receiver

☑ You'll want a big screen—one big enough for the whole family to watch the big events. All Du Mont Telesets* have large screens—none smaller than 72 square inches—some as large as 213 square inches.

☑ You'll want a direct-view screen. A demonstration will show you why. The Du Mont direct-view pictures are clear; brilliant even in a normally lighted room; free from distortion at any angle.

☑ You'll want easy, accurate tuning. Du Mont's patented Inputuner* permits you to tune quickly with hair-line precision. And it stays tuned.

☑ You'll want full range FM radio coverage and all 12 television channels. Be sure to check this one.

☑ Since television is something everybody looks at, you'll want a handsome cabinet... designed in good taste; made of fine woods; a beautiful piece of furniture that will enhance the other furnishings of your home.

☑ You'll want an instrument that will give you long and dependable service—made by a reliable maker with long experience in all phases of television.

Make this point-by-point check; see if Du Mont doesn't give you the most real value in television receivers.

Do you want a complete home-entertainment instrument?

A distinguished Du Mont console like the Colony gives you everything—and the finest of everything. Television on a 116 square-inch direct-view screen; high-fidelity sound on AM and FM radio, and the dual-speed automatic record player. $945.

Do you primarily want television and FM?

Then a Du Mont table-top set like the Chatham will give you superb television in compact, inexpensive form... a 72 square-inch direct-view screen, plus static-free FM radio. $425.

These are only two of a complete line of Du Mont receivers.

Cheaper Ice Cream Break for Kiddies

This week the kids will get a break in a cost of living drop—ice cream prices are tumbling.

Two manufacturers have announced immediate cuts and others are planning decreased prices by Friday.

R. A. Callahan, sales manager of Southern Dairies Inc., 60 M st. ne., said the price of bulk Sealtest ice cream will be reduced 10 cents a gallon to its retail outlets on Monday.

"In discussing this price reduction with a number of Sealtest dealers," Callahan said, "it has been indicated to us that this will result in a decrease of at least 5 cents a quart in the retail price of bulk ice cream and 10 cents in Sealtest ice cream gallons."

C. Y. Stephens, president of the High's Stores, said his company has already inaugurated reduced ice cream prices.

Half-gallons have been cut from 90 to 80 cents; quart bricks, formerly 52 cents are now 45 cents; pints cut from 28 to 25 cents, and quart bulk from the old price of 75 cents to 68 cents, he said.

Eugene Masseron, president of the Bettar Ice Cream Co., said his company will definitely announce a price decrease by Friday. The amount, he said, will hinge on new milk and cream contracts now being negotiated.

M. K. Heartfield, president of Melvern Dairies said he also would announce a price cut on Friday.

Officials of the Brimers Ice Cream Co. said they were considering a price change but had as yet made no definite plans.

Aid Dropped To Stranded Plane Crew

Halifax, N. S., March 26 (U.P.).—A plane from Frobisher Bay today dropped supplies to seven airmen stranded in Resolute Bay about 400 miles north of the magnetic pole.

The seven were aboard a C-82 which made a belly landing on an ice floe in the bay yesterday.

Reports from Goose Bay said all seven were safe, had plenty of supplies, and that the aircraft's radio was working.

Just before landing, the "flying boxcar" radioed it was low on fuel, had lost its bearings, and was forced to land.

Another plane took off from Goose Bay today for a 12-hour cruise over the area to report the exact position of the stranded fliers.

Proposed D. C. Theater for All Races

New York, March 26 (AP).—Clarence Derwent, president of Actors Equity Association, said today the proposed memorial theater to be dedicated to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt in Washington, D. C., would have no segregation policy.

"All people will be admitted regardless of race, color or creed," he said.

"Actors Equity will assist in the drive to raise funds for the theater, and our plan is to have no one contribute more than $1 each. We want it as a theater for all the people and for democratic audiences."

Actors Equity officials and others are now organizing committees to conduct the drive, to decide upon plans and location for the theater.

Leopold Lever, house master of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish houses at New York University, said he suggested the memorial to Actors Equity because he thought the late President "should have a live instead of a dead monument, a theater instead of a stone monument."

Weizmann Set to Fly To U. S. in April

Tel Aviv, March 26 (AP).—President Chaim Weizmann is expected to fly to the United States the second week in April, it was learned here today.

The President was host at luncheon yesterday to Eddie Jacobson, friend and former business partner of President Truman. Jacobson and his wife arrived yesterday for a 10-day stay.

Unification Saving Put at 56.5 Millions

By The Associated Press

An estimated $56,517,421 has been saved by armed services economies under unification, Defense Secretary Forrestal said yesterday.

This came through reduction of overlapping and duplication, Forrestal said. The Unification Act was passed in June, 1947.

The total includes $25,369,006 annual savings and $31,148,415 in one-time economies.

More than 400 economy projects were involved, the statement said. It cited unification of certain types of training, joint purchase of supplies, and merger of Army and Navy air transport services.

A clothing allowance plan has resulted in an eight-million-dollar savings. Unification in certain training, such as photography, chemical warfare, phases of air navigation, and use of same texts and schools has saved more than two million dollars.

An effort is being made to use warehouses, commissaries, post offices and repair shops in common wherever possible.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

CSC to Seek 'Police' Power Over Pay of 600,000 Per Diems

Police power over the salaries paid the 600,000 per diem employes in the Government will be sought by the Civil Service Commission.

The Administration will ask Congress to give Civil Service the authority: (1) to set up standards which the agencies would be required to use to fix the salaries of the many wage board employes; (2) to coordinate the work of the many wage boards, and (3) to see that salaries of the per diems are similar for similar work in the same areas.

This recommendation will be made by the Administration in its plan to revise the Classification Act. Civil Service now has no authority whatever over per diem salaries.

The suggestion could lead to the creation of a single wage board in each area—such as this city—to fix the salaries of all per diems in all agencies in that area. A single board here, for example, would lay down the salaries, under civil service standards, for the thousands of per diems here in agencies such as Government Printing Office, Navy Gun Factory, Army Air bases, Army forts, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, etc.

Under the present system, each agency has its own wage board and the salaries paid per diems often conflict between the agencies. It's this sort of problem the Administration hopes to solve by giving the Civil Service Commission the power to bring about uniformity in per diem wages.

STORY: J. E. Crown is a master mechanic at the big Naval Gun Factory here. He's in the gun factory's foundry where big Navy guns and metal parts of ships are made.

Not long ago the technicians at the Bethesda Naval Hospital were having trouble making dental plates for patients. Dental experts from all over were brought in to produce a satisfactory metal for the plates. They failed. Crown, the master mechanic, volunteered his services. Within a matter of a few hours he had produced an alloy which naval dentists believe is the best they have ever used for dental plates.

Incidentally, Crown is known throughou. the world for his ability to cast metals, but this was the first time he made dental plates in his foundry. A career employe, he received all of his training at the Gun Factory.

PAY RATES: Civil Service has approved these pay scales for Public Health Service student employes:

Student x-ray technicians, $65 to $75 a month; student medical interns, $67 a month for halftime, $134 for fulltime while attending medical school, and pharmaceutical interns, $1470 for a year of postgraduate training.

BONDS: Uncle Sam is one of the Nation's few employers who requires his bonded employes to pay for their own bonds. And the bonding companies are making immense profits from this screwy practice. This is the record:

Upwards of 558,000 Federal employes and officials are required by law to be bonded. In annual premiums they pay a total of about 2 million dollars to the private surety concerns. The average assessable recoveries the companies pay to the Government is $230,000. What it all means is this—that the companies are legally taking about $1,800,000 out of the pockets of the Federal workers.

The Hoover Commission has looked into the problem and it has made this recommendation to Congress:

"That the Congress should continue its study of the whole question of fidelity insurance for the accountable officers of the Government in order to arrive at a simpler and less expensive system. The problem, it seems, could be better solved by establishing a fidelity insurance fund in the Treasury to which accountable officers and employes would be required to contribute."

The bonded employes, however, are pulling for the Downey bill which would relieve them of surety costs. The Administration will indorse the principle in the Downey measure.

MEETINGS: The Society for Personnel Administration will continue its discussions of the Hoover Commission's personnel recommendations Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the Archives Auditorium.

To Run Air Guard

Quesada Assailed As 'Unfit'

By The Associated Press

The National Guard Association yesterday accused Lieut. Gen. Elwood Quesada of being "eminently unfit" for handling the Nation's air national guard and reserve affairs.

Maj. Gen. E. A. Walsh, adjutant general of Minnesota and president of the guard association, said Quesada should be removed from the job of heading the Air Force Guard-reserve affairs unit because Quesada belonged to a committee whose job is to "perform the pick and shovel work preparatory to federalizing the Air National Guard."

The Air Force said Quesada had no comment to make at this time.

Walsh, who expressed his views in the current issue of the Guard Association's publication, has opened a vigorous campaign against recommendations for removing the Air Guard from State control and placing it under the Federal Air Force.

"The Air Force," Walsh wrote, "has become entirely too big for its britches, and we sincerely trust that the President and Congress will assume the control and jurisdiction with which they are clothed."

10,000 to See Johnson Take Oath Monday

By The Associated Press

Col. Louis Johnson will take the oath of office as Secretary of Defense Monday at military ceremonies in the Pentagon expected to be attended by about 10,000 persons. He succeds Secretary of Defense Forrestal, resigned.

The ceremony will be held on a platform in the center court of the huge Pentagon Building.

Stockpiling Delay Charged

By the United Press

Chairman Clair Engle (D., Calif.) of a House Public Lands Subcommittee yesterday accused the Interior Department of blocking the Nation's program of stockpiling strategic materials.

He was supported by Representative William Lemke (R., N. Dak.), chairman of the same subcommittee in the last Congress.

"The Interior Department is not doing anything about stockpiling; it's a disgrace," Lemke said.

"We're closer to war than we think, although it may blow over. And we've got only enough steel to fight a war for one year."

Engle said he will ask Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug to explain the situation to the committee. Krug's office canceled his scheduled appearance before the committee last week.

Engle said the stockpiling program is only 20 per cent complete and has "lost ground" on some strategic materials such as manganese, which is essential for steel production.

"We've got 240,000 tons of manganese in the pile, but we had to rob industry to get it," Engle said. "And last year we used 70,000 tons more than we imported."

Engle and Lemke charged that the Interior Department wanted complete authority over stockpiling. But under Interior Department methods, Engle said, a mine operator must "come in and beg on his knees to get a contract."

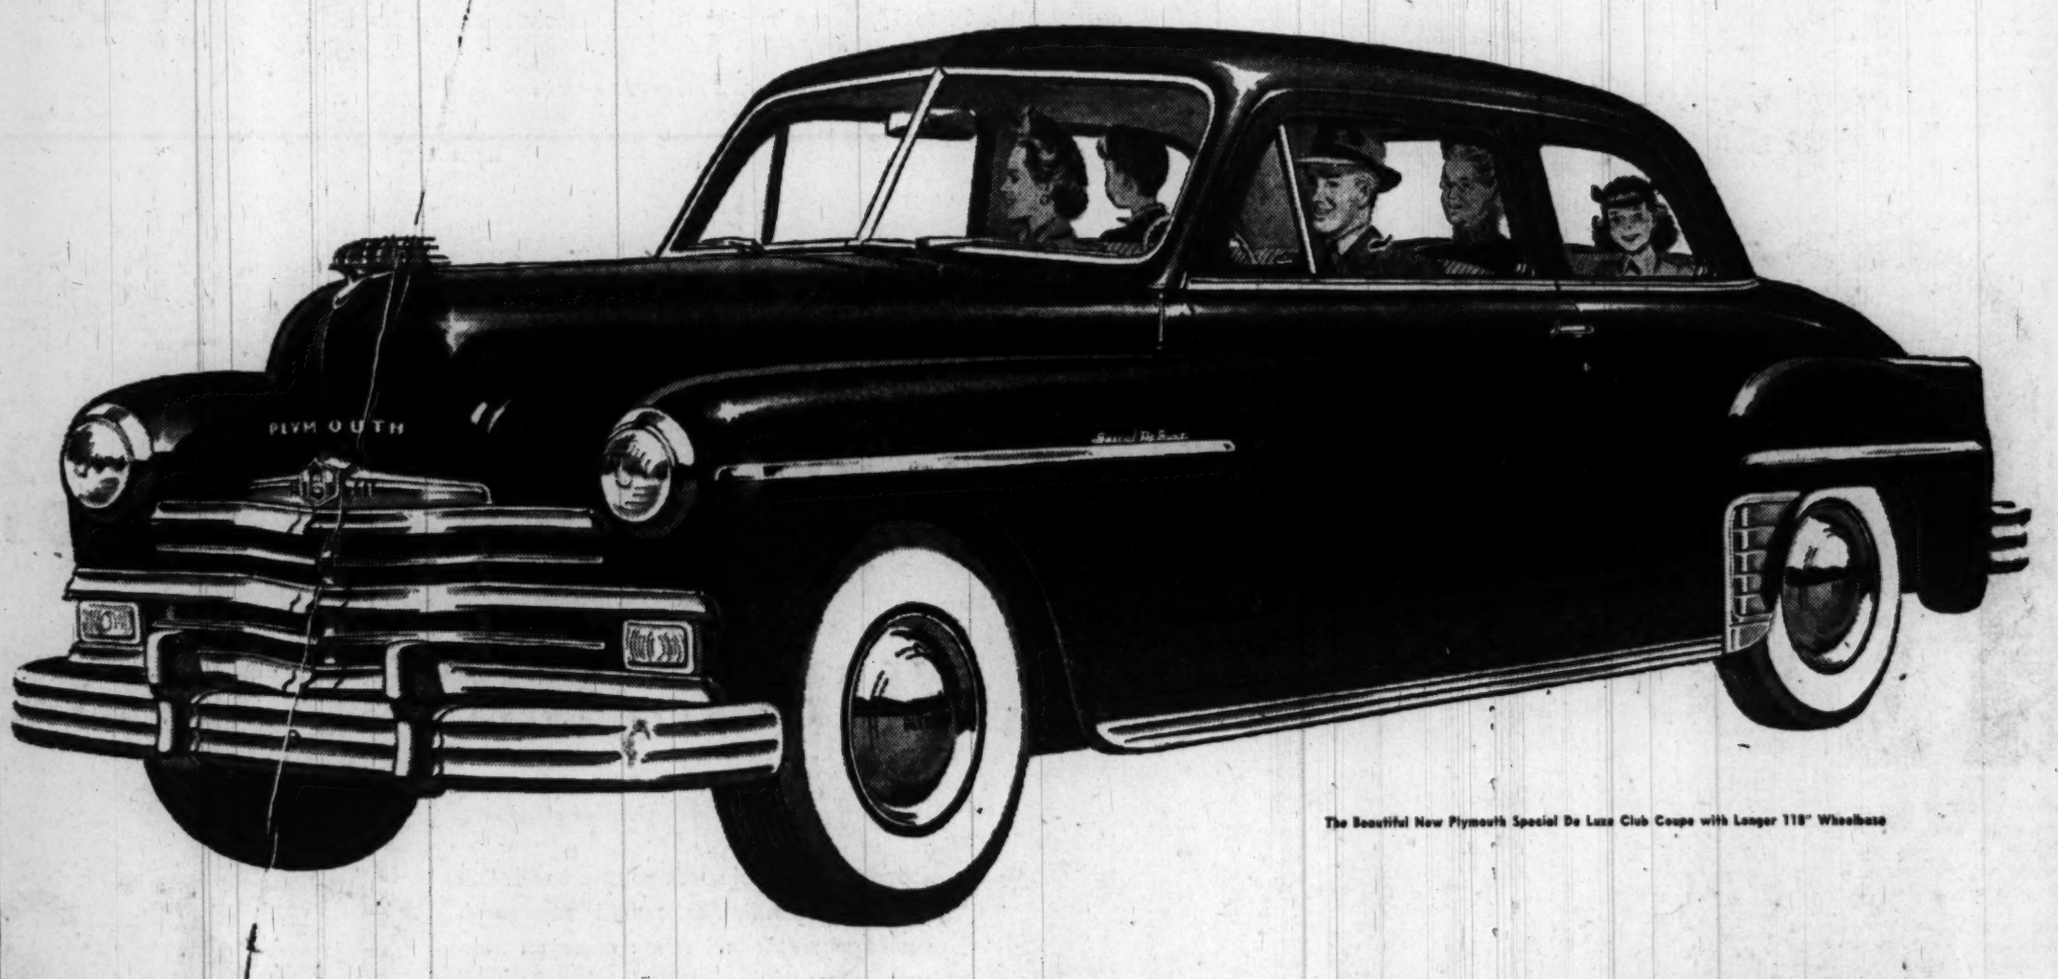
Here's beauty at its best!

Now there's more difference than ever in low-priced cars—and the great New Plymouth makes the difference!

FOR A BETTER CAR. The brilliant new beauty of the great New Plymouth is not just for the sake of appearance. It flows naturally from advanced engineering . . . to help give you a better car to drive—to ride in—to enjoy for many miles to come. It's an easier car to start—you simply turn the ignition key—no buttons to push, no choke to pull! It's an easier car to handle—to park, to put in the garage, to service. And its distinctive new styling is practical—you don't have to repair a major body section if you happen to damage a fender!

FOR GREATER SAFETY. The new lines of this car make the most of the greatly increased glass area. Blind spots are practically eliminated. The new, larger V-shaped windshield lets you see without distortion. You have a clear view of the road in all directions—day and night—rain or shine! New body construction makes the New Plymouth a sturdier, safer car. Body and frame are 23% more rigid. The car has a lower center of gravity, hugs the road better. You drive with a great new sense of security—and you can drive for hours and still feel fresh



The Beautiful New Plymouth Special De Luxe Club Coupe with Longer 118" Wheelbase

FOR GREATER COMFORT. The chair-height seats in the great New Plymouth are wider, deeper from front to back. There's room for long legs and high hats. New heating and ventilation system gives year-around comfort. Thicker, softer body mountings make a smoother, quieter ride. Diagonally mounted rear shock absorbers give added stability. Windows lift and lower easier. Doors open wide for easy entrance and exit. You relax on soft, buoyant cushions at a comfortable angle. The famous Air Pillow Ride is now smoother than ever!

FOR GREATER PERFORMANCE. There's brilliant new power in the engine of the great New Plymouth—the result of a newly designed cylinder head, a higher compression ratio and a new intake manifold. You save on oil and get longer engine life with new oil control piston rings and the brand-new chrome compression ring. If you haven't already seen the great New Plymouth, head for your nearby Plymouth dealer's now. See the value car—the car that gives you more for your money—the greatest of all the great Plymouths!

Weak, Watery Blood Blamed for Making Men and Women Look and Feel Older THAN THEIR YEARS

How do you feel at the end of a day? Is that old time pep and drive lacking? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Thousands now regaining glowing good looks and vitality through the release of vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a general run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Former FBI Agents Plan Raid Strategy With Situation Maps and Charts

The Washington Post

DISTRICT GAMBLING RACKET—Operatives in the office of United States Attorney George Morris Fay prepared this chart to show how the gambling racket in Washington operates. It follows the bet from the customer to the bookie and the big layoff-takers in other cities. It also traces the path of race results from the tracks

2 More Charged In Gambling Raids

witness in the still unsolved beating of Cabdriver James Rowell at Thomas Circle last January 14.

Four deputy marshals and Downey Rice, attorney and former FBI agent assisting in the case, picked up Acalotti yesterday in an apartment at 1223 12th st. nw.

When he appeared before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, Acalotti was identified as a news dealer of the Times-Herald by his attorney, H. Clifford Allder.

Through his attorney, Acalotti complained that he had been under arrest for three hours but did not know until his arraignment that a charge of obstructing justice had been added to the gambling charge.

Allder declared that Miss Franklin had been at the Commissioner's office for three hours and then, just before the arraignment, had been taken off by agents of Fay. He demanded that Acalotti receive either an immediate hearing on the charge or be freed on personal bond.

Commissioner Lawrence consulted with Fay by telephone, then announced:

"The United States Attorney says there's no need for a hearing. The witness is not available now. I'm going to continue the case."

NICHOLAS FLORATOS, operator of the Macedonia Coffee House, on the second floor of 746 9th st. nw., who was absent when the Fay raiders arrived Friday, surrendered yesterday

Bond Set at $4000

Over Allder's strenuous objections, Commissioner Lawrence continued the hearing until April 13 and set bond at $4000—which was $1500 on the gaming charge and $2500 on the intimidation charge.

At one point during the arraignment, Acalotti seemed to smirk.

"Don't look like that," stormed Commissioner Lawrence. "I can set the bond at $5000, $10,000 or $50,000."

"My client is not acquainted with courtroom procedure," said Allder.

During the arraignment, the Commissioner commented that Miss Franklin is a material witness in several of the gambling cases and any intimidation of her might run or threaten to ruin the Government cases.

When Acalotti was taken into custody, Fay's office said, he was in the company of two women, one described as a "girl friend" and the other the occupant of the apartment where he was found.

The party then went to Acalotti's three-room apartment at 908 14th st. nw., where the marshals found, as they expected, everything "clean as a whistle."

They confiscated enough evidence, however, to verify their belief the apartment had been used as a gambling headquarters.

They found three disconnected telephones—two handsets and an old headset with an earphone—on the top of the kitchen cabinet.

Adding Machine Found

Also uncovered were an adding machine, poker chips, playing cards and a box of red and white dice.

Acalotti denied emphatically that he ever used the equipment and said he didn't know to whom it belonged.

The fourth-floor apartment, handsomely furnished in dark green and red decor, contains a living room, study, bedroom, hallway, bath and kitchen.

Acalotti said he and a friend—another man—rented the apartment furnished for $37.50 a month each.

Array of Knickknacks

An elaborate array of knickknacks, antique vases and clocks, gave the living room and study a cluttered appearance.

The second man taken into custody yesterday, Floratos, is co-owner of the Macedonian Coffee House, 746 9th st. nw., one of the places raided Friday by Fay's men.

Accompanied by his attorney, William B. O'Connell, Floratos surrendered at the United States Marshal's office and was taken before Commissioner Lawrence for arraignment on a charge of operating a lottery.

Specifically, Floratos was charged with accepting a numbers bet in his coffee house last December 10. He was released in $1500 bond and his case was continued until April 13.

"I would like to have a hearing," said his attorney, "but I guess there is no use in asking for one now."

Commissioner Lawrence made a note of the request, but informed O'Connell that the Government had asked for a continuance and he was granting it.

Floratos told reporters he had surrendered on advice of his lawyer after reading newspaper accounts of the raid at his coffee house.

"I wanted to come in and see what it was all about," he said.

He admitted part ownership of the place but denied any knowledge of gambling on the premises.

Fay Plans Caution

Meanwhile, Fay, obviously pleased over the results of his eight raids—three in Maryland and five in the District—promised that he would be ready to go to trial in any of the gambling cases within three weeks of indictments if they are returned.

Although he indicated he would prove a link between local gamblers and the Nation-wide crime syndicate in announcing his investigators have collected long distance toll slips of the gamblers, Fay was cautious in his words.

In a brief statement, he said:

"On Monday morning the Federal grand jury investigating gambling in the District will begin hearing further testimony.

"Because of that, I will be in no position to comment on any evidence whatsoever which will be submitted to that body.

"While I did state last week that on Monday I would give additional data indicating the national hookup of gambling cliques, on reconsideration I feel that nothing should be said concerning any evidence submitted to the grand jury.

"The press and public, of course, will continue to be entitled to anything that is a matter of public record."

He disclosed also that all records of the Statewide Sports News Distributors, 3701 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md., have been subpenaed. This place, reportedly controlled by Sam Beard, one of Washington's biggest gamblers and bookies, was one of those raided Friday.

Wide Expose Is Work of Bet Probe Novices

The interstate betting expose is the product of a small group of persons who had never before tried to investigate gambling, it was learned yesterday.

Backbone of the 11-month probe that erupted last week with nine raids and 30 persons arrested were three former Federal Bureau of Investigation agents. Supervising them were United States Attorney George Morris Fay and John W. Fihelly and William Hitz, two of his assistants.

Special mention must be given to a Government typist and an anonymous small group of borrowed and volunteer employes who worked nights to see that the grand jury investigation, which was often under fire by the press, would not fail.

3 Practicing Lawyers

The three former FBI men are Downey Rice, James R. Sharp and Daniel L. O'Connor, all in private practice as lawyers here.

The typist who was given an office in the Department of Justice building and told to set up the files and collate the information as it came in from the investigator is Mrs. Edith Wildrich.

Fay said he grabbed his other help from Department of Justice agencies wherever he could, giving them no special investigation and entrusting them with delicate operations in the probe.

When the grand jury investigation began last May, it was believed by the United States Attorney's office that it could roll merely by summonsing witnesses and documents. But it became apparent that accurate analysis of data and other investigative techniques were required.

Ex-FBI Men Called In

Then, the former FBI men were called in. Using elementary investigative techniques, they parked in trucks disguised as workmen and observed gambling locations for long periods.

Pictures were taken, license plates on automobiles were scrutinized. Records of telephone toll charges were searched and soon the pattern of operations was observed.

All this time, strict secrecy was exacted of all persons involved in the probe.

For instance, the investigators seldom if ever appeared in the United States Attorney's office where defense lawyers and newspapermen might notice their presence.

The three former FBI agents agreed that their training under J. Edgar Hoover and his men was invaluable in their execution of the raids.

In the last stages, when all the needed data was obtained and unexpected help had come from citizens who complained of gamblers they knew, the raids were planned.

Gives Raid Order

On Monday, Fay directed that the raids be made and notified only Fihelly, Hitz, Rice, O'Connor and Sharp.

On Thursday, United States Marshal Bruce Matthews was notified to keep 35 men on hand for the next day. That afternoon they were assembled, divided into groups and dispatched.

All the time, attention of the public was diverted by the pyramid club craze that was sweeping the city.

"People could talk all they wanted to about the way we were going after the pyramid clubs," said Fay. "We knew what we were after, and I think we hit it."

D. C. Bookies Linked to Ring

Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, receives all its information from Howard.

Both services relay information by telephone to District bookies who operate under a wide variety of fronts including news stands, business offices, taverns, apartment houses, brokerage houses, florist shops and other buildings.

These gamblers in turn deal with "turn-in men," runners, street corner bookies, Government employe bookies, cab driver and apartment bookies.

And it is these men who deal directly with the man-in-the-street, better known in the trade as customers.

Many of the fronts in the District handle numbers as well as horse bets, Fay said.

Fay said yesterday his own estimate that gambling constituted a 100-million-dollar-a-year business in Washington had been contradicted by a "prominent police official," who named a figure of 300 million dollars.

When asked if this prominent figure was Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett, Fay declined comment.

To back up his contention that gambling is big business in the Washington area, Fay compared the tickers operating within five square miles here, with one for Norfolk, Va., Richmond, Va., Savannah, Ga., and three in Atlanta, Ga.

Government employes are playing the numbers and betting on horse races "in great numbers," Fay said. Bookies and numbers runners operate openly in Government buildings.

Fay was jubilant yesterday at the success of the opening gun of his campaign against the gamblers.

He particularly emphasized that the raids Friday had netted "at least one big-shot gambler," whom he identified as William "Snag" Lewis, arrested at the Statewide Sports News Distributors office; "plenty of evidence" including a "truckload" of numbers slips; and the transmitter for Statewide which relays racing results to 14 Maryland gambling headquarters, and without which these headquarters will be "useless to the gamblers."

The total cost of special grand jury action against the multi-million-dollar-a-year industry of gambling, Fay said, has been less than $25,000 to date, including the per hour costs of his own staff and the cost of the grand jury.

The investigation has paid for itself "many times over" Fay said, through new income taxes collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue from information revealed

Two Arrested by Police As Grand Jury Probes Case

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

Two of Washington's biggest gamblers were key figures in the special grand jury's probe of gambling here until police stepped in and arrested them without warrants, it was learned yesterday.

The two men, Louis W. Dove, 40, and Dr. Max Schwartz, 54, arrested October 6 in an apartment at 2151 California st. nw., were indicted a month later by the regular grand jury on a charge of setting up and keeping a gaming table for horse race betting.

Their trial has been delayed, however, pending disposition of a defense motion to suppress the evidence in the case on the grounds the police officers trespassed when they made the arrests.

"Took No Piker Bets"

"I'd say those two men, particularly Dove, were among the biggest gamblers on the East Coast," Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly declared yesterday, while admitting they had been important figures in the special grand jury probe.

"They didn't bother with numbers, they stuck to horse race bets only and they wouldn't accept any 'piker' bets on the horses at that," he said.

Dove and Schwartz were not connected with any of the smaller gamblers here, Fihelly added. He said they dealt with big bettors individually.

When arrested, Dove had with him a list of names and telephone numbers which showed he was in direct connection with some of the biggest gamblers in the country, probably to make "lay - off" bets, Fihelly explained.

$90,000 in IOU's

In addition, Dove had in his possession a list of IOU's for gambling debts owed him, which totaled close to $90,000, Fihelly said. One debt alone totaled $25,000, he added.

After Dove and Schwartz were arrested by police, they were taken before the special grand jury. But Dove, on the advice of counsel, refused to answer any questions. He would not comment on what information, if any, Schwartz gave the special grand jury.

The apartment in the California st. building, which is owned by Schwartz's brother, was used soley for gambling operations, Fihelly said. Both Schwartz and Dove lived elsewhere and spent only the afternoons there, he added.

Schwartz, at the time of his arrest, told police he had given up practicing medicine in New York because gambling was more profitable. Dove is a newsdealer at 1796 Columbia rd. nw.

Listened at Window

The two men were arrested by Detective Sergt. James Roche and Pvt. Angelo Bonaccorsy under the following circumstances:

The two policemen visited the California st. apartment house on October 1, 2, 4 and 5, when both listened intermittently at the closed window of the first floor apartment's bathroom, which adjoined a room containing several telephones.

On each visit, the policemen said they heard a radio turned on to race results and heard numbers being taken or given over the telephone.

They returned again on October 6, and while they were both listening at the window, they heard one of the men say to the other: "The janitor just called and says someone is snooping around outside."

Fearing that the two men would get away, the policemen said they rushed right around to the front door of the apartment and knocked. Schwartz opened the door but slammed it shut as soon as he saw them, so they knocked it down.

Tests of Sound

Defense Attorneys Denny Hughes and William C. Collins now contend, in a motion before the court, that it was impossible for the policemen to hear through the closed window and that the arrest of Dove and Schwartz without a warrant was therefore illegal.

District Court Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut, hearing the motion, has already made one test to determine if a telephone conversation could be heard through the window. That test, however, was objected to because not all the attorneys were present.

Friday he decided to make another test in the presence of the attorneys but called it off because newspaper photographers were waiting at the scene. Judge Schweinhaut refused to say later if he would make another test nor would he say when the hearing on the defense motion will be resumed in District Court.

Phone and Ticker Removal Assured

Delays of three to seven days were predicted yesterday before telephone and teleprirter service to 300 District bookies and 26 Maryland and Virginia "drops" will be disconnected.

Officials of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and Western Union promised to comply "immediately" with United States Attorney George Morris Fay's request that service be discontinued, but said that "immediately" would take time.

Fay's request was sparked by Friday's mass raid against eight suspected gambling establishments. He asked that 324 telephones be removed from 300 District buildings.

Conditions of Use

Both Western Union and the telephone company supply service on the condition that it shall not be used for illegal purposes. Both discontinue service when law enforcement authorities present them with evidence that the service is being used for such purposes. Both received such evidence from Fay Friday.

John M. Howard, general commercial manager of the C. & P., said yesterday he had already discussed discontinuance with his staff. Work orders will be made out Monday and Tuesday and the 300 customers involved will be notified that service would be shut off, he said. The installation division will be disconnecting phones throughout the week and the work should be completed before Saturday.

"We still have to serve the non-gambling public," Howard added.

"No Idea" of Misuse

Harry I. Gilbert, associate superintendant of Western Union, said the tickers were not removed yesterday.

When asked when they would be removed, he replied "When we get around to it." He said removal would take three or four days.

Gilbert emphasized that his company had "absolutely no idea" that the tickers were being used for gambling purposes.

"We are not interested in what our machines are used for," he said. "We are compelled by the FCC to supply service and it's up to officials to find out if they are used illegally."

Rental of the ticker machines varies from $40 to $55 a month, he said.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay yesterday listed the 26 locations he charges have been used during the last year as gambler's "ticket drops."

He said names given on the list are mainly aliases used to get the telegraph service from Western Union.

Receiving service from Howard Sports Daily in Baltimore he said, are:

Thomas Byrne, 4708 Wilson blvd., Arlington, Va.; Robert Durham, 3201 Perry st., Mount Rainier, Md.; Pete Gianaris, 3817 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md.; State Wide Sports News Distributors, 3701 Bladensburg, rd., Colmar Manor, Md.; Tom Dykes, 6202 Sheriff rd., Fairmont Heights, Md.; William Greenfield, 5404 Taylor rd., Riverdale, Md.; E. J. Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md.; Charles Rogers, 3327 Naylor rd., Silver Hill, Md.; Howard Seal, 5509 Taylor rd., Riverdale, Md.; Ted Smyrnas, 4421 Silver Hill rd., Silver Hill, Md., and A. H. Smith, 5550 Tuxedo rd., Tuxedo, Md.

Receiving service from State Wide Sports News Distributors, he said, were:

S. Blake, 3608 38th ave., Colmar Manor, Md.; Ruby Haberman, 311 Riggs rd. Chillum, Md.; Charles Newton, 3306 40th pl., Colmar Manor, Md.; S. Stanton, 4310 46th st., Colmar Manor, Md.; M. Venton, 3640 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md.; James Byrnes, 3814 34th st., Mount Rainier, Md.; R. D. Camp, 3829 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md.; John Carroll, 3107 Perry St., Mount Rainier, Md.; Frank Disney, 3221 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier, Md.; Sam Howard, 4231 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor, Md.; Jack Lery, 3801 Nicholson st., Mount Rainier, Md.; Anthony Lombardo, 3811 34th st., Mount Rainier, Md.; J. Long, 2003 Patterson rd., Hyattsville, Md., and M. Gordon, 4111 29th st., Mount Rainier, Md.

Fay added that there had been a ticker at a location listed to Louis Kapporos, 3801 29th st., Brentwood, Md., but that it had been removed.

the street. They're spotters, set to tip off the boys in the back room if things get hot.

Up the street, they serve some mighty fine steaks. You like steaks, so you eat there most every day about 2 p. m. This place youve got to look sharp, though. The town's big shots eat lunch there.

They "close" from 2:30 until 5, but after a while they let you stick around. Thats when it looks a little "fishy" when a guy comes in with his pockets full of dough, then turns it over to a Joe who works there.

Before long, they know you as a regular guy—and you make a bet on a horse when you finish some of this fancy French pastry after "closing" time.

Inside the Back Room

It's almost three months after you first cased the bookie joint down the street before you join a gang going into the back room one day about the time numbers and horseracing reports are due.

They let you in, there's a crowd there. A guy says, "Who are you with?" You point at some other character.

The guy turns to his brother, who's hanging on the phone, and says, "He's all right?"

The brother looks around and nods; figures he's seen you before, and anyway he's busy. (That was a close one).

It's a handy place to make a bet. And it's a good place to see this guy dial telephone numbers. That way you can check on the "feeder" spot that serves as a nerve center for bookies all over the town.

Almost before you can pick a winner in the third at Belmont you're on the inside of the "feeder." That's the "big kill."

Score Offer Skin To Burned Boy, 4

More than 20 persons have volunteered to give patches of their skin to aid 4-year-old Michael Rector in a final major skin-grafting operation, Casualty Hospital doctors said yesterday.

Three of the volunteers will be selected Monday, officials said, and will be asked to give 64 square inches of skin each. The 192 square inches of skin will be placed on the child's burned body during an operation scheduled tentatively for Saturday.

Included among the volunteers, doctors said, are Robert J. Denyer, a sailor stationed at the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, who already has given the boy four patches of skin, each 4x8 inches, from his flanks, a University of Virginia student who has agreed to give up his spring holiday to make the donation, and a Marine who has arranged to take leave from his station to aid the boy.

Th doctors also appealed for blood donors, explaining the youth would need additional plasma to prepare for the operation.

Michael, who has undergone five skin-grafting operations since he was brought to the hospital on November 12, now has a 40-60 chance to live, his doctors said, and should be greatly improved by the next skin grafts.

Man Invites Own Arrest

Arlington police got a call at 1:30 a. m. yesterday from a man who said he was at the Virginia Auto Body Shop, 1740 N. Nash st., and that they had better come get him.

They found Joseph S. Ace, 50, of 813 E. Capitol st., an employe of the shop, who said he got so mad when his boss didn't pay him Friday night that he broke into the shop and beat up a car with a hammer.

Police arrested Ace on a charge of housebreaking, and estimated damage to the car at $150. Ace was released under $500 bond for hearing in County Court Monday.

Home Rule Hearing

The District Commissioners and 18 spokesmen of leading civic, labor and political groups here are scheduled to testify Monday on the Washington home rule bill.

The all-day public hearing before the Senate Home Rule Subcommittee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), will be held in the Senate District Committee room in the Capitol, beginning at 10 a. m.

Dunbarite Wins Contest

Ulysses G. Shelton, jr., 17, of 2395 Elvans rd. se., was announced yesterday as the winner of the twelfth annual American Legion Oratorical Contest for Negro high school students.

The Dunbar High senior gained the recognition by his speech titled "The Constitution a Barrier Against Tyranny" in competition at Garnet-Patterson Junior High School Friday night. He will compete in the city-wide finals, April 1 at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Famed Plane on Way

The Swoose, proud and lone survivor of the original United States Far Eastern Air Force, left Los Angeles yesterday on the first leg of her last flight that eventually will taker her to the Smithsonian Institution's national air museum in Washington.

The Associated Press reported that Col. Frank Kurtz, who skippered the gallant flying fortress through the war, was at the controls as the Swoose left the municipal airport.

The Swoose, the only warplane continually in service from December 7, 1941, to V-J Day, is to be hangared in Chicago until the Smithsonian Institution's air museum is built.

Attorneys Join Coif

Three Washington attorneys yesterday became members of the legal profession's honorary fraternity, Order of the Coif, when a chapter of the society was installed at Vanderbilt University at Nashville, Tenn.

The attorneys, all alumni of Vanderbilt, are Jesse E. Baskette, jr., 1809 G st. nw.; James Irwin, 3031 Sedgwick st. nw.; and William Currell Vance, 3901 Connecticut ave. nw.

Success Seen For Truman's Legislation

Representatives of divergent factions of the Democratic Party last night agreed that the Eighty-first Congress would still enact a good part of the Fair Deal program.

Speaking at a Truman-Barkley Club dinner in honor of Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the 1949 Inauguration, Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.), said that persons who expected wonders from Congress within a month "either don't know how Government operates, or are deliberately trying to mislead the people."

No Scuttling of Program

Senator Sparkman, one of the Southern Democrats who just finished a filibuster against the President's civil rights program, said there wouldn't be any "scuttling" of the President's program.

He said bills embodying the program are being readied in committees and that "when the 81st Congress comes to an end, it will have a program of which we can be proud."

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan also spoke confidently of the Fair Deal's progress through Congress. He said the end of the 81st Congress would bring "victories" in terms of what the people asked for when they elected President Truman.

Hildreth, introduced by Toastmaster Arthur Clarendon Smith as the "Honorable Judge Hildreth," credited his aides for the success of the inauguration, which most of the speakers called "the finest ever."

Truman's 'Point IV'

Hildreth reminded his audience of 78 at the United Nations Club of the tremendous impact President Truman's "Point IV" had made on the peoples of the world.

He said people were "reading and re-reading" that part of the President's inaugural address in which Mr. Truman suggested a program for spreading American technical and scientific know-how in order to raise the world standards of living.

Others who spoke in tribute to Hildreth's job in the inauguration were Thomas P. Morgan, jr.—consistently referred to by Toastmaster Smith as the "next Mayor of Washington"—Mrs. Claude Pepper, A. L. Wheeler, chairman of the inauguration's Ways and Means Committee, and Remmie Arnold, Virginia gubernatorial candidate.

Hands at Gallaudet Eloquent In Praise of Dean Peet at 75

In the language of signs, the young college student said: "She leaves the door wide open and greets anyone who wants to come in."

The student, Miss Ailene Hoare, was appraising the contribution to student life at Gallaudet College made by Dr. Elizabeth Peet, dean of women, professor of Romance languages and a member of the faculty for 49 years. The occasion was the seventy-fifth birthday anniversary of the small, white-haired woman who has devoted her life to teaching the deaf.

"She treats us as though she were our mother."

Ailene was one of three students who had come through the wide-open door to visit with Dr. Peet in her apartment in the girls' dormitory at the college, 8th st. and Florida ave. ne.

The three girls, Ailene, Ruth Taubert and Elodie Berg, will graduate from the college in June, and soon after will be married to fellow students.

Teaching the deaf is an inheritance passed down to Dr. Peet from her grandfather, Dr. Harvey Prindle Peet, and her father, Dr. Isaac Lewis Peet, both directors of the New York Institution for the Deaf. In all, the three generations have taught the deaf over a period of 127 years.

In addition to her duties as dean and teacher of French to the deaf, Dr. Peet instructs hearing students at the college in the sign language.

They will carry on the Peet inheritance. One former such student is Leonard M. Elstad, now president of Gallaudet.

Monday Rites Scheduled For Mrs. Seay

Mass will be said for Mrs. Margaret Gaddis Seay, 35, a clerk in the District Water Department, at 9:30 a. m. Monday at the Blessed Sacrament Church, Chevy Chase Circle. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Seay

Mrs. Seay died Friday at Georgetown University Hospital of pneumonia.

She was born in Washington and was graduated from Western High School. During World War II she worked with the Victory Garden program and was chairman of a Red Cross flower and garden committee.

She lived at the home of her father, LeRoy Gaddis, 5308 Reno rd. nw., who survives her. She also leaves a daughter, Margaret Jean of the Reno rd. address. Her mother died in June, 1948.

Mrs. Seay's former husband, Harry de Ruiz Seay, lives in Wayne, Mich.

Mrs. Charlotte M. Ruff

Mrs. Charlotte M. Ruff, 80, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank S. Pohanka, at Burnt Mills Hills, Silver Spring, Md.

Mrs. Ruff had been ill since she suffered a stroke in November.

Born in New York City, she came to live with her daughter in Silver Spring ten years ago following the death of her husband, Joseph F. Ruff.

She was active in the work for the Florence Crittenton Home in Washington and was a member of the Eastern Star and the Trinity Episcopal Church, Takoma Park, D. C.

Besides her daughter she is survived by four sons, Joseph, of Dallas, Tex., Charles, of Lakeside, Fla., Theodore of Massapeaqua, Long Island, N. Y., and Paul Ruff of Meadow Wood dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Also, a sister, Mrs. Stephen Housman of New York City, four grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Services will be held Monday at 3 p. m. at the Little Chapel in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Burial will be private.

Women's Chapter Of Izaak Walton League Chartered

The first women's chapter of the Izaak Walton League in Montgomery County was organized last night with installation of officers and presentation of its charter at the clubhouse of the Takoma Park-Silver Spring Chapter, near Colesville, Md.

Dr. William B. Holton, chairman of the league's national executive board, presented the charter. Officers of the men's chapter, headed by G. M. Van Hoesen, president, conducted the installation.

Mrs. Leslie Mason, 23 Darwin ave., Takoma Park, is president; Mrs. Bertha Kurswidas, first vice president; Mrs. H. G. J. Arnold, second vice president; Mrs. Katherine Nierle is secretary and Mrs. Marie Briggs is treasurer.

Mrs. Hannay Dies; Daughter Of Last Mayor

Mrs. Mary Abby Emery Hannay, daughter of Washington's last mayor and wife of William M. Hannay, vice president of Second National Bank, died at noon yesterday at her home, 207 I st. nw.

Death from a heart ailment came unexpectedly, members of her family said.

Mrs. Hannay's father, the late Matthew G. Emery, was Washington's mayor from 1870 to 1871 when the mayor form of government was abolished here in favor of a territorial governor. The present commission form of government was established in 1874.

Her father, a stonemason, who moved to Washington in 1842, cut and laid the cornerstone for the extension of the Capitol and cut and laid the cornestone of Washington Mounment in 1848. He helped also to restore the White House for occupancy of President Pierce.

His town house at 207 I st. nw., where Mrs. Hannay died, was built originally for Vice President John C. Breckinridge.

A lifelong resident of Washington, Mrs. Hannay was active in numerous patriotic and civic groups here.

She was national treasurer of the Daughters of the Founders and Patriots Society of America for 18 years and was a charter member of both the National Chapter and Our Flag Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She also was a member of the Order of the Crown and of the Washington Club and of Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two nieces, Mrs. Charles Parks of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Mrs. Horace Laird of Norfolk, Va., and a number of grand nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Hogan Dies; Requiem Mass Monday

Mrs. Mary Adair Hogan, 71 widow of Frank J. Hogan, one time American Bar Association president, died yesterday at her home, 2320 Massachusetts ave. nw. Mrs. Hogan had been ill with cancer for more than a year.

A native of Columbus, Ga., Mrs. Hogan attended schools there before her marriage to Mr. Hogan in Savannah, Ga., in 1899. The couple had met while Mr. Hogan was working for the War Department in Georgia. Her husband died in 1944.

Mrs. Hogan had lived in Washington for the past 48 years, but had made frequent visits to her summer home in Littleton, N. H. and to her daughter, Mrs. John W. Guider of that city.

She is survived by Mrs. Guider and three grandchildren, Miss Elizabeth Hogan Guider and Frank Hogan Guider, both of Littleton, and Mrs. Edward B. Williams, 1530 16th st. nw.

Requiem mass will be said in the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle Monday at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery

Col. Albert W. Stevens

Redwood City, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Lt. Col. Albert William Stevens, 63, holder of the world's record for stratosphere balloon free flight, died today.

Col. Stevens set the world record for lighter than air flight when he reached the height of 72,395 feet on Armistice Day, 1935, at Rapid City, S. D. He was accompanied by Capt. Orvil Anderson.

They were in the air for eight hours and 13 minutes.

In World War II, Col. Stevens was an aerial observer over the German lines.

Dr. W. Halsey Barker

Baltimore, March 26 (AP).—Dr. W. Halsey Barker, 42-year-old assistant dean of Johns Hopkins University medical school, died today after a two months' illness. He had been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

A native of Baltimore, Dr. Barker had served as assistant dean since 1938. He specialized in internal medicine.

Johnny Mills

Memphis, Tenn., March 26 (AP).—Johnny Mills, 80-year-old Beale Street Negro known as the Barbecue King, died last night.

He was as much a part of Beale Street as zoot suits, yellow dresses and the sound of juke boxes. The tangy odor of barbecue completed the picture.

Jack Kapp

New York, March 26 (AP).—Jack Kapp, 47, president and founder of Decca Records, Inc., died last night.

Mrs. Julian Dies; Wife of Treasurer

Mrs. W. A. Julian, 80, wife of the Treasurer of the United States, died yesterday at her home in Cincinnati.

Mr. Julian, who arrived there this morning from Washington, said she had been ill for several months, the Associated Press reported.

Daughter of a one-time mayor of Cincinnati, the former Gertrude Means took an active part in civic work there before her husband's Government appointment in 1933. She was particularly active in the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and in various garden clubs.

Mrs. Julian reputedly would often stop her car to berate a horse beater, or to pick up a lost dog and spend hours trying to locate a home for it.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian were in the center of social and musical circles of their home city. Childless, they particularly enjoyed entertaining young people and visiting college glee clubs. They were among supporters of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, the annual May festival and other musical events.

Henry S. Wood Funeral Set For Monday

Funeral services for Henry S. Wood, 60, an accountant at the Government Accounting Office, who died Friday at his home, 2044 37th st. nw., will be held at 10 a.m. Monday at the St. James Episcopal Church, 222 8th st. ne. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Wood, who died of cancer, became too ill to work three months ago. He had been at the GAO since 1941.

A native of Washington he attended public schools here. He worked as an accountant for the Home Owners Loan Corp. from 1934 until he began work for the GAO.

Active in Masonic affairs, he was a member of the Centennial Lodge, No. 174, at Upper Marlboro, Md., was past Junior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Maryland, and was Junior Grand Inspector of the State's Grand Lodge at the time of his death.

In 1912 he won the swimming championship of the District which he kept for three consecutive years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bessie G. Wood, of the 37th street address, a son, George B. Wood, 2409 Good Hope rd. se.; a daughter, Miss Mary Louise Wood, Philadelphia, and one grandson, George B. Wood, jr.

Mrs. Swigart Is Dead at 75; Rites Monday

Mrs. Rebecca Swigart, 75, wife of Jesse E. Swigart, one-time assistant director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, died at 1 a. m. yesterday at Suburban Hospital after a month's illness.

Mrs. Swigart, who was active here in many community and women's groups, had lived nearly 50 years at 327 Essex st., Chevy Chase, Md. She was a member of the women's board of the Montgomery County Hospital, a founder of the Somerset Women's Club and a member of the Chevy Chase Women's Club.

Although she was born in Philadelphia, her parents had a residence in Georgetown at the time. She was graduated from Central High School here in 1891 and spent virtually her entire life in the Washington area. Her maiden name was Rebecca Shanks Daw.

She is survived by three daughters, Dr. Margaret Swigart Neubauer of Monterey, Calif.; Mrs. W. K. Harrill of New York City, and Mrs. Laurie F. Hess of Fort Jackson, S. C., and by four grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Funeral services will be held at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle, at 2 p. m. Monday, with burial private at Oak Hill Cemetery.

Man Trying To Stop Row Fatally Hurt

A 46-year-old man died of injuries last night suffered when he attempted to halt an argument between his daughter and her estranged husband, police reported.

The victim, James E. McKeever, of 904 Hamilton st. nw., fell to the ground in an altercation with his son-in-law, Robert Franklin Kelley, 24, of 1412 Decatur st. nw., which had progressed from his front porch to the street, they said. He was pronounced dead at Freedmen's Hospital.

Police said McKeever attempted to intercede in the argument between his daughter, Mrs. Patricia Ann Kelley, 21, who was staying at his home, and Kelley on the porch.

Kelley was held by police for action of the coroner.

Art Exhibit Seen by 3000 At Corcoran

Nearly 3000 persons packed the Corcoran Gallery of Art last night to view the twenty-first biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings.

At the invitation opening of the exhibit, Corcoran Thom, president of the gallery's board of trustees, presented prizes to four artists whose works were chosen as the most outstanding among the 187 entries.

First honors, the W. A. Clark prize ($2000) and the Corcoran Gold Medal, were awarded to Eric Isenburger, 46-year-old New York artist, for his canvas, "Romantic figure."

The exhibit will be open to the general public today from 2 to 5 p. m. and on weekdays, 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. The exhibit will close May 8.

Inventor Claims Invisibility Defense

Munich, Germany, March 26 (U.P.).

Could be the first paragraph is there all right, but you just don't see it. Invisible colors, you know, like the whistle which a dog can hear but you can't.

A scientist here in Munich says it may be the answer to the atom bomb; invisible factories and invisible men.

"How can you bomb what you can't see?" he asked.

His name is Rudolph Schuster. He is 58 years old and you can see him plain as anything.

"I have transferred the thesis of the inaudible dog whistle to the optical secter with the result that dogs, cats and human beings are not able to see anything," he said.

Schuster didn't say how he had accomplished this. He may have explained it, of course, but if he did it was inaudible.

He means, however, that there are colors which the eye cannot perceive just as there are sounds which the ear cannot hear.

Ohioan Boomed for Alexandria Post

The vacancy that has existed for six months in the post of Alexandria health officer soon may be filled, it was indicated yesterday.

City Manager Robert S. Marshall, jr., announced that Dr. T. F. McGough of New Philadelphia, Ohio, has agreed to accept the position if the salary is increased from $8000 to $8500, and with the understanding that a year's satisfactory service will bring another increase.

Marshall said he will recommend the appointment to the city council.

McGough, 39 years old, was recommended by the Virginia State Board of Health. He is health commissioner of Tuscarawas County General Health District in Ohio, Marshall said.

Bayer Aspirin Is Ready To Go To Work!

MAKE THIS TEST!
To actually see how fast it's ready to go to work, drop a Bayer Aspirin in a glass of water and time its disintegrating speed. What happens in the glass, happens in your stomach.

Millions use Bayer Aspirin to relieve ordinary headache, because it starts disintegrating with astonishing speed . . . is actually ready to go to work in two seconds. And they know this is why Bayer Aspirin brings quick relief.

But important as fast relief is when you're in pain, there are also other reasons why Bayer Aspirin is the choice of millions.

First, it's remarkably effective. Second, it's wonderfully gentle. In fact, Bayer Aspirin's single active ingredient is so effective, doctors regularly prescribe it for pain relief . . . is so gentle to the system mothers give it even to small children on their doctors' advice.

So don't experiment with drugs that have not stood the test of time. Do as millions do—use Bayer Aspirin for fast, dependable relief. And when you buy, buy by name. Ask for Bayer Aspirin.

*Because no other pain reliever can match its record of use by millions of normal people, without ill effect, one thing you can take with complete confidence is genuine tin may now be produced in sufficient quantities to meet all needs by the medical profession.

Chloromycetin Is Synthesized

Dr. Elwood A. Sharp, director of the Parke-Davisd epartment of clinical investigation, revealed the clinical success of chloromycetin against its latest victim, virus pneumonia. Other clinical work now in progress, Dr. Sharp said, includes pitting the drug against many other diseases that do not yield to penicillin.

The history of chloromycetin (pronounced chloro-my-seetin) began three years ago at Yale University. There, Dr. Paul R. Burkholder, research scientist commissioned by the drug firm to search out antibiotic sources, found the microbe-killer in a soil sample from Caracas, Venezuela.

That history jumped dramatically to the Altiplano region of Bolivia, South America, where an American doctor entered the typhus-swept town of Puerto Acosta with a meager quantity of the antibiotic. Sixteen patients were selected from the severely ill, and given the drug on December 6, 1947.

All 16 survived and some were out of bed in 48 hours. Five at the least would have died normally.

Then, in March, 1948, Dr. Joseph Smadel, director of virus research of the U. S. Army Medical Center, asked the drug firm for chloromycetin to try on scrub typhus patients in Malaya, where workers on rubber plantations were dying.

The drug firm scraped up every bit of chloromycetin it could get, 1 pound, and gave it for the drug's second big test. Dr. Theodore Woodward of the University of Maryland and a group of Army scientists went to work with it at Kuala Lumpur, Malaya.

They found that the new drug cured 32 patients with scrub typhus in the amazing time of three days.

It was on this mercy mission that chloromycetin was unwittingly proved effective against typhiod fever. For among the patients some few did not respond the first day of the drug administration. Dr. Woodward found that these patients were not suffering from scrub typhus fever—they had typhoid fever.

Two months later Drs. Woodward, Smadel and M. C. Pincoffs, research scientist of the University of Maryland, tried chloromycetin in 15 cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in Baltimore. Symptoms improved uniformly in 24 hours. Temperatures of all dropped to normal in 76 hours.

Chloromycetin was definitely therapeutic; it also was hard to get.

Dr. Harry M. Crooks, jr., Parke-Davis research chemist, was assigned the job of coordinating research to find some means to produce the drug synthetically. John Controulis, company chemist, was given the first job.

Controulis, company officials said, quickly succeeded in working out a practical method of synthesis. But the arrangement of atoms making up the drug was wrong, and the product first isolated was found inactive.

A woman scientist, Dr. Mildred Rebstock, 28, carried on to become the first person to successfully synthesize active chloromycetin. A graduate of North Central College, Ill., she received her Ph.D. in chemistry at the University of Illinois, and had been with the research staff of the company for four years.

Later, Dr. Loren M. Long and Harvey Troutman, staff researchers, worked out a second feasible method of making chloromycetin commercially on a large scale.

Parke-Davis chemists are scheduled to reveal the synthesis formula to the Nation's chemists on Tuesday at the 115th meeting of the American Chemical Society, in San Francisco.

Silver Spring Hospital Bonds to Be Discussed

A proposed $1,500,000 bond issue to erect a hospital in the Silver Spring (Md.) area will be discussed by delegates from 20 citizens associations before the Allied Civic Group of Silver Spring Monday at 8 p. m. in the Liquor Control Board Building, Colesville rd.

Mrs. Howard Kline, chairman of the ACG's legislative committee, will present a report and a resolution. The bill is sponsored by the Silver Spring Hospital Associates, Inc.

2 Coast Guard Benefit Shows Scheduled Today

Eddie Arnold and his Hillbilly Jamboree radio show will put on two performances at Constitution Hall at 3 and 8:30 p. m. today for the benefit of the Coast Guard's Inter-Faith Memorial Chapel Fund.

Former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey and Arthur Lake, the Dagwood Bumstead of the "Blondie" movies, both wartime Coast Guardsmen, will be guest masters of ceremonies.

Sponsored here by the Washington Variety Club, the show will include music by the United States Marine Band.

The program is part of a national drive by the Coast Guard to raise $450,000 in private donations for the construction of a World War II memorial chapel at the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn.

Action Promised On White House Job Overseers

President Truman's request for a commission to supervise White House renovation yesterday was assured "immediate consideration" by Congress.

Senator Dennis Chavez (D. N. Mex.), Chairman of the Public Works Committee, said he would act promptly on the suggestion, which was referred to his committee Friday.

Senate Appropriations Committee members expressed concern over award of Executive Mansion contracts last week when they stipulated that most future White House jobs must be let on a competitive basis.

5000 Educators Open Conference

Form Long Line Of Quiz-Wisers

The Washington Post

WINNERS — Looking upward you see Jimmy Lester, 8, of 3340 Gunston rd.; Billy Fidler, 9, of 3751 Gunston rd.; Leroy Burrows, 10, of 3526 Gunston rd.; David Hall, 11, of 3652 Gunston rd.; John Richardson, 10, of 3252 Ravensworth pl., and Walter Smyth, 11, of 1004 Valley dr., members of the Quizdown team from Charles Barrett School, Parkfairfax, Va. They defeated the team from the Douglas MacArthur School, Alexandria, in the contest broadcast by WTOP yesterday from the George Mason School

Philadelphia, March 26 (AP).—Brief ceremonies today opened the Eastern regional conference of the American Association of School Administrators. Some 5000 school officials from the Middle Atlantic and New England States are attending.

AASA President Willard E. Goslin, Pasadena, Calif., superintendent of schools, welcomed the visitors and announced briefly the program of meetings which will continue through Wednesday. The theme is "Education and the General Welfare."

Vesper services are scheduled for Sunday afternoon, with a general session Sunday night in Convention Hall. William F. Russell, president of Teachers College, Columbia University, will speak on "How Education Can Work for Peace."

Other speakers on the program for following sessions include Roy E. Larsen, president, Time, Inc.; Allison Davis, professor of education, University of Chicago; and H. B. Bruner, Minneapolis superintendent of schools.

Civic Groups' Parent Body Indorses Hall

The Federation of Civic Associations has ignored, in effect, the mandates of its members bodies in indorsing Woolsey W. Hall for District Commissioner.

The group, meeting in the District Building, indorsed Hall, a former president of the federation and Government clerk, without dissent after prolonged discussion on the motion by Mrs. Velma G. Williams, president of the Pleasant Plains Civic Association. Approximately half of the 50 delegates present Friday evening refrained from voting.

In local action taken previously, those member bodies taking a stand, with one exception, had indorsed Attorney Charles H. Houston. The Lincoln Civic Association had given its support to Incumbent John Russell Young.

Mrs. William, in proposing Hall's name, recalled that the federation had supported him a year ago and called for consistency this year.

Federation President Ernest F Harper left the chair in an attempt to influance the meeting not to indorse any individual. He urged that the body merely "urge the President to appoint a competent Negro. He suggested that a list of names or a single name be forwarded with the recommendation.

Rising in support of Young, Dr. Edward F. Harris, president of the Lincoln group, contended that under Young's tenure Negroes had advanced in positions of responsibility in District offices and that "the man in office has done much for the city."

Bernard C. Chapman, president of Northeast Boundary, questioned the propriety of indorsing Houston, who, he contended, "does not even belong to his area civic body."

The federation also authorized its segregation committee to seek an appointment with the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association in answer to a letter from the latter to discuss improvement of racial relations, and voted to petition the Senate District Committee to appropriate sufficient funds for construction of the proposed Spingarn High School at 24th st. and Benning rd. ne.

Vote of Farmers May Be Sought On Wheat Control

By The Associated Press

The Government is getting set for a probable Nation-wide farmer referendum within the next 120 days on the question of putting wheat under production controls.

Such controls, if approved, would apply to the 1950 crop. They probably would require a cut of as much as 25 per cent in wheat acreage.

It now appears that this year's prospective big crop will create a surplus requiring Secretary of Agriculture Brannan to put to growers the question of whether they favor rigid marketing quotas to bring supplies back into line with market demands.

Approval by at least two thirds of those voting would be necessary. Marketing quotas have been used for wheat only in one year—1942—since crop control laws were first passed in the early thirties.

Brannan is expected to wait until late in June before deciding whether to call the referendum. But aides are going ahead with plans so as to be ready should he decide that way.

Text of Truman Speech on 'One Great Hour'

Following is the text of President Truman's speech on the "One Great Hour" broadcast

THE words from the Bible that have just been read to us carry a great message. It is one that influenced our fathers deeply, and guided them when they shaped our way of life. As a country, we have long understood that to help the suffering is to serve God.

Through our communities and our governments, as well as through our charities, we have sought to carry out this divine command to aid the hungry, the needy and the sick.

Today, however, the words of the Parable of the Last Judgment have fresh meaning for us.

They make clear our duty toward those millions of people in other countries who have suffered and still suffer the miseries of war, destruction and tyranny.

There are thousands of children in foreign lands who have no memory of their parents, no knowledge of the meaning of the words "home" and "family," and who have forgotten what it feels like to have enough to eat. There are hopeless thousands who wander among shattered towns seeking a place to rest, seeking security and a chance to begin their lives anew. There are many who pray to God only in secret, fearing persecution if they profess their beliefs openly.

It is hard for us to comprehend grief and distress such as this, because we in America are so much more fortunate. Our country has been blessed with material riches. Our homes are secure. We can go to our churches and worship God as we desire. And most important of all, we know that our rights and our dignity as individuals are guaranteed to us under our Constitution.

WE KNOW that we enjoy these great blessings not because of any special merit on our part, but because of the bounty of God. It is to his providence that we owe the richness of our country and our heritage of freedom. Since these good things come to us from Him, we know that we must use them for the good of others in accordance with His will.

Many of those in need and distress throughout the world share these beliefs and ideals with us. To them we should offer not only our aid in physical things, but also the sense of brotherhood in a common cause.

We cannot do this through the channels of Government alone. We must also extend the hand of fellowship through our private organizations and as individuals. In this way we can join with those of kindred faith, and destroy the barriers of distrust and propaganda that divide us from our fellow men.

To the millions in the world who cry in their despair for a new day of freedom and justice, we here in America, out of our strength and by our example, can give hope and comfort.

I urge you to go to worship tomorrow, each in his accustomed place, to thank God for our heritage and our strength, and to ask him for the grace and power to carry out His will in this troubled world.

Stop Taxing Our Games, High Schoolers Ask

A group of teen-age high school students yesterday urged Congress to eliminate the Federal admission tax from school entertainments and athletic contests whose proceeds are for educational purposes.

The students were delegates of the Key Club International, junior Kiwanis group. Their sixth annual convention, which drew 2200 members from 44 States and Canada to Washington, closed last night at the Departmental Auditorium.

They elected 16-year-old Kenneth Miller of Cape May, N. J., president to succeed Thomas C. Starnes of Monroe, La.

Other new officers of the international high school group are Donald Albares of Baton Rouge, La., and William Mach, Pomona, Calif., vice presidents, and Harold Abrams of Pensacola, Fla., secretary. Norman Kidd of Charlottesville, Va., was one of 12 trustees elected.

The convention delegates, who ranged in age from 15 to 18, also adopted a resolution in favor of reducing the voting age in the United States to 18. Several opposing delegates said they did not believe youths of 18 had sufficient experience to be allowed to vote.

Rear Admiral John H. Cassady, assistant chief of naval operations for air, guest speaker, told the youths that the unification of the three armed services in the National Military Establishment "is sound and is working." This is true despite numerous accusations and remarks to the contrary, according to the admiral, who commanded the carrier Saratoga in several South Pacific battles.

Highest achievement award for community service during the past year went to the Baton Rouge (La.) Key Club.

Others cited for achievement were the Reading (Pa.) and Cape May (N. J.) Clubs.

In the convention finale last night, the group was addressed by J. Belmont Mosser of St. Mary's, Pa., Kiwanis International president. The Key Club trustees will meet this morning. A recommendation for Columbus, Ohio, as the site of next year's convention, will be one of the items to be acted on.

134 Treated Here During Week for Home Injuries

A 5-month-old baby who suffered second and third-degree burns on the shoulder and back from spilled boiled milk was one of 134 District residents who were treated at local hospitals for home injuries last week.

Four deaths from home accidents were recorded last week, including two from falls, one from hot water burns, and one from suffocation.

Among the injuries were 70 falls—highest recorded number in a single week since January, 1945, according to statistics of the Red Cross home accident survey.

Liaison Group Convention Opens Monday

More than 500 executives of the communications and photographic industries will meet Monday with members of the Armed Forces for the third annual meeting of the Armed Forces Communications Association.

The two-day conference, designed to "stress the vital importance of communications in National security," will be held at the Shoreham Hotel and will feature exhibitions and demonstrations arranged by the Navy.

Speakers will include Wayne Coy, Federal Communications Commission chairman, Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, and Gen. David Sarnoff, president of the association.

Other conventions slated:

American Retail Federation, meets Monday and Tuesday, Statler Hotel, 250 delegates expected.

Student branch, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Friday and Saturday, Annapolis Hotel.

Boat Service To Norfolk Starts in May

Baltimore, March 26 (AP).—The Baltimore Steam Packet Co. announced today it plans to start Washington-to-Norfolk passenger-freight service in May.

The operator of the Old Bay Line has leased Government piers formerly used by the old Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co. at 7th and Maine ave. sw. The company abandoned service after its only ship, the District of Columbia, was damaged in a collision with a tanker off Old Point Comfort last October 31.

The damaged ship was bought by the Old Bay Line and now is being repaired here.

The Steam Packet Co. said it will operate service between Washington and Norfolk on an "every other night basis." One steamer will be used on the run, leaving Washington one night and returning from Norfolk the next.

WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, MARCH 27, 1949

Foggy Bottom Becomes Focus of Western World

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

ROLLING down past Georgetown, the Potomac absorbs the waters of Rock Creek and then dips sharply to the southeastward on its journey to the bay. This bend in the river has become noteworthy. It marks the western and southern boundaries of Foggy Bottom, Washington's old gashouse district, which, Cinderella fashion, has recently acquired a new dignity and a fame that reaches into the chanceleries of the world.

The section has had various names over the years, none of them pretty. First it was called Funkstown, then Hamburg, and, finally, Foggy Bottom—this because of the "miasmatic vapors" that arose from its swamps and flats in an earlier day.

Both George Washington and Thomas Jefferson envisioned great things for the area, but fulfillment came slowly.

Vicissitude of War

THE event that lifted Foggy Bottom into international prominence, and installed its name in the language of diplomacy, took place in the spring of 1947.

The Department of State was moved into the Bottom; specifically, into the partly completed building that was put up for the War Department before the mighty Pentagon was conceived. America's role as a world leader was responsible. The State Department had become too big for the old Baroque building just west of the White House, once known as the State, War and Navy Building. Also, space in that building was needed by the ever-expanding executive office of the President.

Well, "Scotty" Reston and other diplomatic reporters eventually caught on to the fact that America's foreign affairs were being handled in a section with a quaint and delightful name; and, gradually, Foggy Bottom began to get into the news.

An example was noted recently in Newsweek. Reviewing the latest shakeup in the Soviet high command, the relief of Molotov as Foreign Minister and his replacement by Vishinsky, the magazine said that there had been no inkling of the shift. Then it added:

"The Quai d'Orsay, Whitehall and Foggy Bottom all professed astonished bewilderment . . ."

The Quai d'Orsay, of course, is a street along the Seine where is located the French Foreign Ministry. Whitehall is a section near the Thames where one finds the British Foreign Office.

Statesmen Converging

IN THE future, presumably, Foggy Bottom will become as well known a metonym as its counterparts in Paris and London. At the moment, the international spotlight is blazing on it. With the forging of the North Atlantic Treaty, and the converging here of British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin and other statesmen from overseas, the old settlement along the Potomac has become the focal point of the world's hopes for peace.

This is fitting, if only for the reason that this country's first Secretary of State, Thomas Jefferson, thought so highly of Foggy Bottom. In a rough outline of a plan for the new Federal City, Jefferson wrote the following:

"The highest summit of land in the town heretofore called Hamburg . . . shall be appropriated for a Capitol for the accommodation of Congress . . ."

Maj. Pierre L'Enfant, the French engineer who laid out the city, liked another site—the Daniel Carroll property a mile or so to the east of the site selected for the White House. L'Enfant said it was "a pedestal waiting for a monument." President Washington gave his approval, and the Capitol therefore arose on its present location.

Georgetown's Rival

IN THE days before Congress agreed on a permanent site for the Nation's Capital, the region now embraced by the District of Columbia, or in proximity to it, had a number of villages and hamlets. Bladensburg, later to be a celebrated dueling ground, was a flourishing little center of the tobacco trade. Carrollsburg lay at what is now the foot of South Capitol st. Georgetown was a bustling port, having been laid out by authority of a Maryland law of 1751. Hamburg, an ambitious rival of Georgetown, was laid out in 1768.

The founder of this settlement with the pretentious name was Jacob Funk, a German immigrant, who apparently hoped that he would see the building up of a thriving river trade. Funk gave the name of Hamburg to his 130-acre tract, and it appears on some of the early maps. But the area also was called Funkstown, both before and after it was named after the German seaport.

A romantic story is told about the region before it came into Funk's possession. In 1755, during the French and Indian Wars, General Braddock is supposed to have moved up from Alexandria with his troops and to have crossed the Potomac at this point, bound on his ill-fated expedition westward against Fort Duquesne. A rock, located just below the old Naval Hospital, became famous as "Braddock Rock."

George Rothwell Brown, one of the city's best and most painstaking historians, scoffs at the story, but agrees that "still, it's a good, reliable Washington myth."

Just when Hamburg, or part of it, got the nickname of Foggy Bottom is not clear. All things considered, however, it would have been surprising if it hadn't got one, and a colorful one at that. This was a lusty town in times gone by, and nearly every section had its picturesque tag.

There was, for example, "Swampoodle," located in the general area of the Government Printing Office, once a damp, marshy stretch between the two arms of old Tiber Creek. And then there was "Cow Town," "Hell's Bottom," "Holy Hill" and "Bloodfield."

The city's myriad alleys bore such names as "Goat Alley," "Chow Alley," "Porksteak Alley" and "Tilly Tinkers Alley." But there were also alleys with the more sublime names of St. Anne, St. Dominic and St. Paul.

The boundaries of Foggy Bottom, whatever they are, do not follow strictly those of old Hamburg. Jacob Funk's holdings in 1768 took in the area now bounded approximately by the Potomac on the south, H st. on the north, 23d st. on the west and a line midway between 18th and 19th sts. on the east.

Actually, there is no agreement on the Bottom's boundaries as of today. Some say it is bounded on the east by 23d st., the line from the Lincoln Memorial to Washington Circle; on the west by Rock Creek and the Potomac; on the north by Pennsylvania ave. and on the south by the river again.

Others will settle for three of those boundaries, but insist that the eastern line should be nearly to the White House at 17th st.

A Past to Remember

ACCEPTING this latter delineation, and a Greater Foggy Bottom, one can say that it is a section that has much more than the State Department to give it an aura. It has an interesting past as well as a promising future.

The region just west of the White House was at one time a fashionable neighborhood, with splendid mansions, especially on F and G sts. A few of these are still standing, notably the house at 1801 F st. This 124-year-old structure, now occupied by Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, was long known as the Carroll home, an early occupant having been William T. Carroll of the noted Carroll family of Maryland. Chief Justice John Marshall was a boarder there. Another famous house in the neighborhood is the Octagon House at New York ave. and 18th st., which sheltered President Madison and his vivacious Dolly after the British set fire to the White House in 1814.

Farther west, on the south side of K st. between 26th st. and the river, were two large brick houses which were a center of the social life in the city's early days. They had been built by Robert Peter, a pioneer Georgetown merchant, and there George Washington, Peter's kinsman, was sometimes a guest.

Jefferson Davis, Secretary of War in the Cabinet of President Pierce and later President of the Confederacy, lived in a house on the north side of G st. between 17th and 18th sts.

In 1796, George Washington wrote a letter suggesting that the Foggy Bottom section would be a good site for a university. In time, by sheer accident, the school that now bears his name was located in the square bounded by G and H sts. and 20th and 21st sts. Originally called Columbian College, it was chartered in 1821 and was at first located on upper 14th st.

Adams Loved City

JESSIE FANT EVANS, in a booklet put out by G. W. some years ago, listed a number of notables who lived in this block. One was Henry Adams, the prolific letter writer and author of "The Education of Henry Adams," who had quarters at 2017 G st. In his early Washington letters, he rhapsodized over the city's beauty in the spring; and years later, after his wife had been buried in Rock Creek Cemetery, he had Saint-Gaudens execute in her memory the poignant bronze monument, "Grief."

Gen. Nelson A. Miles, the famous Indian fighter, lived for a time on the northeast corner of 20th and G sts. A house across the street was occupied by Capt. Archibald Butt, military aide to President Theodore Roosevelt, who lost his life in the sinking of the Titanic.

The section nearer the river, in what might be called "deep" Foggy Bottom, had a reputation for toughness in earlier days. According to Historian Brown, it was inhabited by "a free and easy population, as full of feuds as the Tennessee mountaineers." He says it took "a mighty good policeman to rule a community like that, and the men who did won their promotion by hard work."

Foggy Bottom—the gashouse section, that is—was still a pretty robust place 30 or 35 years ago. The Irish predominated, as might be judged from "Connaught Row," a name given to 23d st. below Virginia ave. The neighborhood's baseball team was the Emerald A. C., and its football team the Irish Eleven.

Small Melting Pot

IN THE GANG of boys that roamed the Bottom's cobbled streets in those days, swam in Rock Creek and the Potomac and hunted snakes in the marsh where the Lincoln Memorial now stands, were also Jewish, Italian and German youngsters. These last, for the most part, were sons of men who worked in Heurich's Brewery and the Abner-Drury Brewery.

The streetcar lines that then ran along F and G sts. have vanished, along with the Aid Filters Down to M. Jolivet

Marshall Plan Delivers a Tractor

A year ago this week, Congress finally passed the Economic Cooperation Act which put into effect the Marshall Plan, or the European Recovery Program, as it was variously called. The bill was signed by President Truman April 3, 1948. The following story shows how the plan has worked out, and is working, in the life of an individual Frenchman.

By Stephen White

ENTREVIN, FRANCE, March 26 (NYHT).—Le Petit Entrevin is a few houses tucked insignificantly into the rolling landscape of Cher, in almost the geographical center of France. Here M. Albert Jolivet farms 90 acres of fertile land, as his father did before him. Over the years he has not done badly, but this year he expects to do even better, for he has a new tractor, thanks to the Marshall Plan.

M. Jolivet would be incensed if he were asked to think of the tractor as a gift. He paid for it in hard cash—well over 500,000 francs. Nevertheless, it is only because the Marshall Plan is in operation that M. Jolivet was able to turn his francs into a new American tractor.

For months his name had been on the lists of the company in Wisconsin that manufactures the machines. The trouble was that he could pay only in francs. The American company did not want francs, since it cannot buy its raw materials with francs.

Neither could M. Jolivet convert his francs into dollars. To do this, he would have to find someone with dollars who wanted francs with which to buy French goods. France had few goods to sell, and America was so overflowing with goods that it had no particular desire for French goods. M. Jolivet, in short, was trapped in the dollar famine.

One of 209 Tractors

FORTUNATELY for M. Jolivet, the United States and 16 European nations decided to alter the normal course of affairs. The United States asked these nations to itemize their needs, and promised to cooperate by taking care of the dollar program.

France listed the things it needed most for reconstruction. There was nickel and lead and cadmium; streptomycin and cotton. One item was tractors.

The General Confederation of Agriculture—a business organization of French farmers—was told that a certain number of tractors had been approved. The confederation allocated the total number by districts. District meetings allocated the tractors to individuals.

M. Jolivet is a good farmer, with a fine reputation, and his application was one of the oldest. It was decided that he was entitled to a tractor.

He paid the requisite number of francs to the Paris agent of the tractor company. The company turned over the francs to the French government. The United States Government turned over the corresponding sum, in dollars, to the company.

On January 6, the S.S. Cape Race reached Le Havre with 209 tractors. On January 14 M. Jolivet plowed a furrow—not that it was time to plow furrows just yet, but because a man who has a new tractor likes to try it out.

Francs Plowed Back

SO M. Jolivet got his tractor. But what of the francs lying in a Paris bank, and the dollars that the United States paid out?

That is the heart of the Marshall Plan. The dollars come from the pockets of the American taxpayer. They are his contribution to the rebuilding of France, and of a peaceful world. He does not get the money back, although there is hope that he will get more than good value for it in stability and peace.

The francs may be used by France for internal reconstruction. M. Jolivet's francs, which already have bought him a tractor, will also buy him electric power, and good roads, and new waterways. These francs—called the counterpart fund—stay in their own country, where they are of value, and build it back to strength.

At Dongere Mondragon, on the Rhone River, these francs are building a great new dam. With luck the job will be done by 1952, and 360,000 kilowatts of electrical capacity will begin feeding power into the French distribution network. The connection with the European Recovery Program is not so direct as in the case of a shipment of tractors, but it is another part of the story of M. Jolivet and his tractor.

Cash Into Kilowatts

M. JOLIVET'S 500,000 francs were deposited in the Bank of France. In the meantime, the country was in desperate need of more electricity. Hundreds of billions of francs were necessary if the power system was to be brought up to demand. But the government did not have hundreds of billions of francs.

M. Jolivet's francs supplied the answer—his and billions more from thousands of other M. Jolivets. Every item of goods shipped to private French consumers was represented, francs for dollars, in the counterpart fund.

France is not allowed to spend the counterpart fund for daily governmental running expenses. Since the money represents goods for which the French made no payment, it is almost as if it were newly printed money. Used carelessly, it would be as inflationary in the long run as crisp new bills with nothing to back them up.

Used to reequip and reconstruct, the money becomes capital investment. It is represented by permanent installations that in time can earn the money back and more, directly (like an electrical plant) or indirectly (like a new road).

So far, 140 billion francs of the counterpart fund have been released, and there is no sign of a runaway inflation. In the electrical generating industry alone, 100 billion francs are being spent this year, much of it counterpart money. The dam at Dongere Mondragon is only one of many.

Suit From Down Under

M. JOLIVET has other needs, however. He needs, for example, a suit. France does not produce enough wool, and the United States is not a large exporter of wool. If M. Jolivet is to have a suit, the wool must come from Australia.

To buy wool in Australia, one must have Australian or British pounds. To earn British pounds, France must sell in Britain. Britain, with its austerity program, cannot afford to buy France's wines and quality merchandise.

This is serious to more people than M. Jolivet, who could make his old suit do a little longer. It is serious to France's great textile industry, to the tailors and shopkeepers all through France. It is, in fact, serious enough to cripple the Marshall Plan if it were not remedied. But the remedy has been written into the program.

Britain also has a counterpart fund. For every dollar of goods shipped to private interests in Britain by the United States, the equivalent in pounds goes into a British bank. Like the French fund, it may be used for reconstruction. But a certain part of it must be set aside for the use of other Marshall Plan countries.

And now the routine is a familiar one. The textile industry in France, needing wool from Australia, pays for it in francs, which are deposited in the Bank of France. Britain, from its counterpart fund, withdraws pounds and pays the wool grower in Australia. The textile mill gets its wool and goes to work; the tailor makes the suit, the shopkeeper stocks it, and M. Jolivet wears it on Sundays.

France seems to be the winner in this exchange. To a great extent, France is usually the winner—it is a great country that has suffered most under two wars. But France is on the giving side as well.

M. Albert Jolivet tries out the tractor from Wisconsin that he wouldn't have received if there had been no Marshall Plan. Hitched to a cart alongside it is one of his three horses. He plans to sell one of them and still raise more

Some of the francs in its counterpart fund are set aside for the use of other countries which need French goods but have no French money to pay for them.

A Symptom of Disease

THE problems of M. Jolivet appear to have revolved completely about the matter of money. His French franc was good nowhere except in France. Consequently, it might appear that the complexities of the Marshall Plan are unnecessary; that all the Western nations need do is pass a law making money freely convertible from nation to nation.

That it can appear so is a measure of the deceptiveness of money. The difficulty lies not in money, but in the goods for which the money stands. To make the franc freely convertible would merely be to make it worthless in purchasing power—not because it is a French franc, but because the French are not producing enough goods for export to balance the amount they must import.

Europe's difficulties are not monetary; the monetary problems are the symptoms and not the disease. The difficulty, before the Marshall Plan, was like the dilemma that faces the aspiring actor. He finds he cannot get a role in a Broadway play until he has had a role in a Broadway play. Similarly, a destroyed Europe was faced with the problem of producing goods with which to buy the materials she needed to produce goods.

The Marshall Plan is intended to make this possible. For four years the United States will supply the funds to start Europe rolling again. At the end of that time, it is hoped, the machine will be operating under its own power. France, if it needs tractors from the United States, can sell enough goods in the United States to buy the tractors. And the American tractor company will do business in francs—or its bank will—as willingly as in dollars, because the franc will stand for goods actually being produced.

U. S. Must Have Say

THE interim period is an uncomfortable one. It is, for example, expensive for the United States. Hence, the United States, not unreasonably, demands that European economy be made workable as quickly as possible. And this brings up some ugly complications.

Suppose, for example, that Europe were short exactly one steel mill. Belgium, let us say, wanted that steel mill, and so did France. In a normal world, both would build steel mills, and the better steel mill would survive.

That may be fine when private investors are paying for the mill. It is a little hard to defend when the United States is paying. So the United States is in the position of requiring that the European countries decide among themselves which of them will have the steel mill—with the implied threat that if they cannot decide, the United States will. Clearly, this is American interference in European internal affairs, but who has an alternative?

Also, having made the decision, the countries must enforce it by refusing permission to certain private interests which may wish to build still another steel mill. The necessities of the Marshall Plan, in this and other directions, almost require an amount of governmental control in European countries that the United States considers socialistic. In other words, the great defender of free enterprise is coming perilously close to forcing socialism on its friends (most of whom have appeared to indicate, by their votes, that they want it anyway).

An Invisible Transfusion

MEANWHILE, M. Jolivet plows his field with his new tractor and awaits the arrival of his new suit and the increase in cheap electricity, all because of the Marshall Plan. But he never gives the Marshall Plan a thought. He paid for his tractor and he plans to pay for his electricity and his suit.

"The Marshall Plan? It doesn't mean a thing to me. I have received no gifts," he says.

Perhaps the American taxpayer will be a little disappointed to hear M. Jolivet speak this way, and yet it reflects only the fact that the Marshall Plan has been feeding its aid into Europe as far back in the veins as possible. The goods go through the normal channels of trade, and by the time they reach M. Jolivet they appear to him as items in the normal course of affairs.

America's reward will be a healthy, strong France that can take its place as an equal in the family of nations—a France that can buy American goods and pay for them in francs that mean something.

Nova Scotia 'Point IV' Plan Has Worked 20 Years

By Thomas K. Ford
Post Reporter

IT ISN'T often these days that a special mission comes to Washington from another country not to get aid from the United States Government but to give it.

That happened last month. Two men in clerical garb traveled down from Nova Scotia to offer their help to the State Department. They believe they have worked out techniques that could be used in carrying out "Point IV" of the President's inaugural address.

Point IV is the "bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for underdeveloped areas" of the world. State and other departments are now studying how this is to be done.

Msgr. M. M. Coady, one of the two visitors, is director of the extension department of St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish, Nova Scotia. The other, Dr. H. J. Somers, is vice president of the university. Their contribution to the Point IV program is something they and others in the Maritime Provinces of Canada have developed over the past 20 years.

The Power of Debt

IT IS usually called the Antigonish Movement. Its more lyrical advocates sometimes call it "the Maritime Miracle of the Men of Antigonish." Antigonish, by the way, is pronounced (like Annie O'Neill) with the accent on the last syllable, which sounds as if it were written -neesh.

The Antigonish Movement goes back 20 years, when the Maritime Provinces (Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island) were in a state of economic stagnancy. Their fisherfolk were generally at the mercy of low prices paid for their fish and lobsters, high prices charged for what they had to buy.

Each little coastal village had its general store, whose proprietor set the prices both coming and going. He extended credit and often took part possession of the fishing boats as security. He wielded an almost feudal power simply because almost everyone was in debt to him.

Farmers produced largely low-grade crops and were little interested in improvement. Mine owners in the Cape Breton Island coal fields paid low wages and bitterly fought union organization. Only the Communists showed any sympathy for the miners' plight—with the result that in the 1920s Cape Breton Island became the hottest hotbed of communism in Canada.

A Shrinking Shell

AT THAT time Monsignor Coady was a parish priest in the towns of Canso and Dover. He saw that the prevailing trend was toward deeper pessimism, greater apathy and more isolation as depressed income levels cut down the number of schools, newspapers, telephones and other means of contact with the world. Thousands of young people were migrating from the Maritimes.

Something had to be done. The extension department of St. Francis Xavier, with Father Coady and a few others as the moving spirits, stepped into the breach. Its basic purpose was to broaden the cultural horizons of the dispirited people, but it found that before culture could be of any interest, poverty had to be dealt with.

Credit unions offered a ready means of accomplishing several ends at once: individual savings where none had seemed possible before; a source of emergency credit on favorable terms, and a supply of capital for community developments. Most important, perhaps, the credit union was the start of community attack on community problems.

NEW WATERFORD, a coal mining center of 14,000, started a credit union in 1934. By 1948, it had 3000 members and assets of $300,000. It had made loans totaling $1,750,000 in 14 years and lost only $55 in bad loans.

Altogether, there are now 451 credit unions in the Maritimes.

Often the first use of credit union funds was to finance a cooperative enterprise of some sort. It might be a fish cannery, a produce shipping cooperative, a general store or a combination of several such functions. Now there are 210 cooperatives, and the fishermen have a wholesale organization to handle their catches all the way to the major markets.

The actual results of all these efforts are sometimes hard to measure. The average cash income of the coastal fisherman is now 10 times what it was in the 1920s. Part of this—perhaps half of it—is due to higher prices. The rest can probably be attributed to the fact that the fisherman gets a much larger share of that price.

The farmers, too, have organized rural cooperative stores, canneries and warehouses, and these have encouraged the growing of higher-quality produce, which brings higher prices on more distant markets. The miners more than the others have gone in for cooperative housing.

With all the purely economic activity goes a continuous process of education. It is largely a sort of practical education in self-reliant handling of local affairs. An incidental part of it has been education in how to handle Communist disruption.

For the Communists did not like the ideas of self-reliance and democratic management inherent in the Antigonish Movement. They fought it in the coal and steel towns—and lost. Today the Communist Party has only a handful of adherents.

Here again the leaders of the Antigonish Movement—though certainly anti-Communist—emphasize that this is not the aim of their program. As Father Coady says: "We are not interested in negative motivation. We were active in Cape Breton because we wanted to help people help themselves, not because communism flourished there."

As a matter of fact, the Antigonish Movement is carefully nonpolitical. Members of all political parties except the Communist are active in it. No party controls or influences it. And the movement has rigorously eschewed special help from either the dominion or provincial governments.

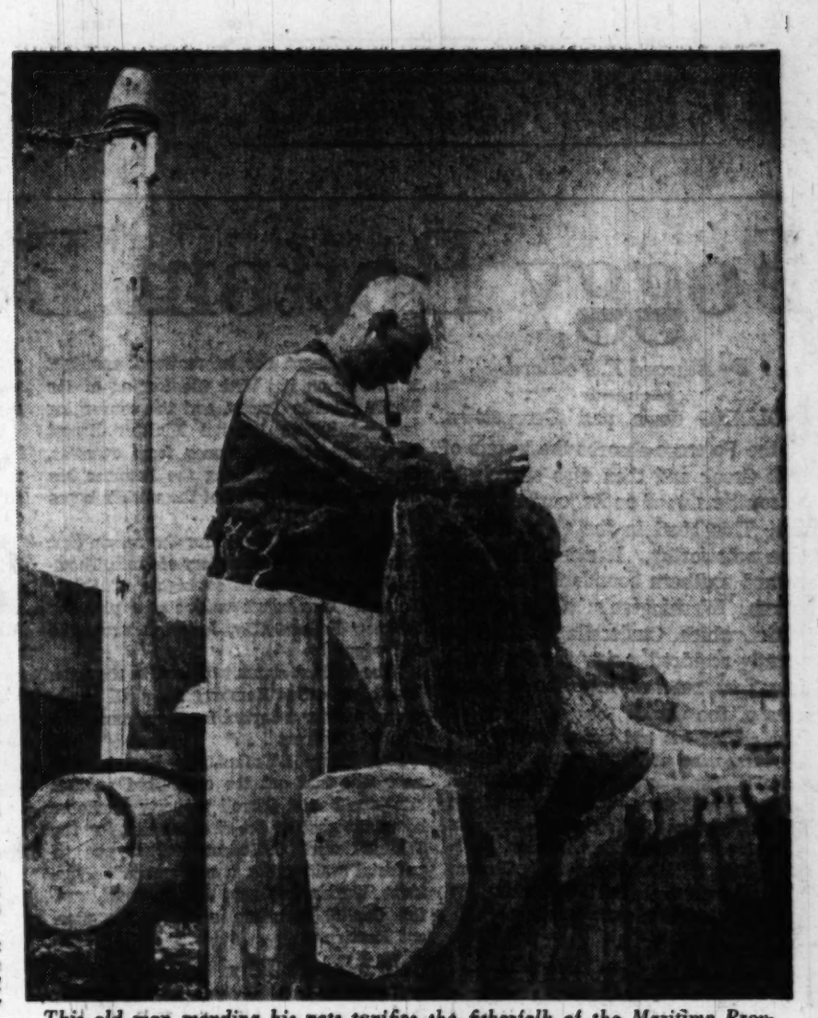
International Scope

ONE of the methods employed by the Antigonish Movement to increase its effectiveness has been to give special training in community leadership to a number of adult students each year. Of the 32 in the leadership course a year ago, four came from Latin-American countries, one from Scotland, one from China and three from the United States. For the Antigonish Movement has become known around the world.

Governments of underdeveloped lands have asked to send groups of students for training in the Antigonish techniques and philosophies. The university cannot take many of them since it is crowded with returned servicemen. But it wants to expand this international training program and is seeking funds to do so.

The money is being raised privately. The men of Antigonish are not asking and do not want government aid. That was not their reason for coming to Washington to talk about Point IV.

Their mission to the State Department was simply an offer to come up and see the work they are doing. Their methods of self-help and educational stimulation, they think, might help the people of other underdeveloped areas to help themselves.



This old man mending his nets typifies the fisherfolk of the Maritime Provinces, beneficiaries of the Antigonish Movement

Chinese Reds Still Face Warlord Opposition

By Hessell Tiltman
Chief Far Eastern Correspondent, London Daily Herald

SHANGHAI, March 26.—China has settled down to the prospect of protracted peace talks between Nationalists and Communists, with the crucial decision not expected before midsummer.

The Communists, who, according to reports filtering through the "bamboo curtain," would prefer a negotiated settlement to further fighting, have boiled down their major demands to two: the peaceful surrender of Nanking and Shanghai and the turning over of the Nationalist air force, navy and military supplies to be integrated into the defenses of a new "national" China.

In the event these are conceded, the Communists are expected to agree—after the usual sort of "off again, on again" negotiations peculiar to China—to the formation of a coalition government to include Acting President Li Tsung-jen but not Chiang Kai-shek or any of the Soongs or the Nationalist big shots on their list of "war criminals."

The Nationalist peace delegation has completed the draft of a tentative program to be presented to the Communists as a basis for discussions. And the Chinese press, alarmed at the lukewarm attitude toward peace of some top Kuomintang leaders, has been bluntly urging that "opponents of peace voluntarily leave China and spend the rest of their lives elsewhere." One Shanghai newspaper further urged that representatives of China's long-suffering common people be allowed to participate in the peace talks.

As the two groups spar for position, China's "war of brothers" has practically been halted and China's millions of citizen soldiers are idle. It is therefore an appropriate moment to add up the score, and to consider what next in China.

Impressive Beginning

TODAY Mao Tse-tung, the Communist "boss," rules one fourth of China and around 200 million Chinese. The Communists have occupied more than 700 cities and towns. They control most of China's coal and iron ore and a large slice of its rice acreage.

Communist armies are massed on the doorsteps of three more great cities—Nanking, Shanghai and Hankow. Their guerilla units are active behind the Nationalist lines as far south as Kwangtung Province. The general belief of observers on the spot is that they could occupy what remains of Nationalist China without much difficulty.

This is an impressive score, but it represents only the end of the beginning of the task of taking over China. From here on out, the Communists have got to include the Chinese people in their reckonings. Anyone resuming fighting is going to have to contend with angry humanity, for the Chinese are more fed up with war than at any time in generations. That also goes for most of the Nationalist troops.

A military drive across the Yangtze would involve serious risks for another reason. Unless the Communists, by displaying a spirit of compromise, win public confidence in presently Nationalist areas, the tens of thousands of minor officials who are running Nationalist China may pack up and quit. And without those officials, not even a Communist Party supported by many of China's younger intellectuals could administer China. Because of this, the Communists are expected to make a special point of the peaceful handing over of the commercial metropolis of Shanghai.

Hair-Trigger City

SHANGHAI is going to prove an economic headache for the Marxists if they take over. Its foreign trade has shown a surprising resilience but is down to a fraction of prewar volume. Its communications with the interior are disrupted. Its local industries, pinched for raw materials and power, are in many cases working short time, and some factories continue to operate only because of an official ban on closing down.

With the city's five millions living from hand to mouth and with the astronomical inflation unchecked (the price of rationed rice is up 150 per cent over February, while the non-gold "Gold Yuan" banknotes slumped from 1800 to one United States dollar in mid-February to around 4600 a month later), law and order hangs by the slimmest of threads which could be snapped by any demonstration or unrest.

Hence the importance to the Communists of acquiring Shanghai as a going concern complete with all except the topmost Nationalist appointees on the job. The alternative would be chaos, and a serious loss of "face."

The Communists, therefore, may be expected to follow the tactics which they employed at Tientsin. In that North China city, their first anxiety was to keep all former officials below policy-making rank on the job; their next was to get the mills and factories working again—which, incidentally, was accomplished within 48 hours.

The first American vessel to call at Communist-occupied Taku Bar, in North China, reported finding "the same lighters, same uniforms, same everything."

Warlord Opposition

ALL of this is seen as strengthening the hand of Acting President Li and the Nationalists in the peace talks, but it does not necessarily mean that the shooting war is over. There exists a distinct possibility that armed opposition to the Chinese Reds, and to any settlement reached with them, may be continued by certain southern and northwestern warlords and by Kuomintang diehards centered on Canton—with or without the approval of the brooding Generalissimo.

Some of the Nationalist reactionaries, and some in China who are not so reactionary, are hoping that non-Communist China can hold on, in the deep south or if necessary in Formosa, until the non-Communist world comes to their rescue, as happened in 1941. With this objective in view, Formosa is being converted top speed into a Nationalist "bitter end" fortress, despite Formosan objections to the "invasion." Most of the "Gimo's" air force, navy and war chest has been removed there, and the advocates of fighting on continue to place orders abroad for weapons and military supplies.

It is improbable that the Communists will succeed in subduing all China—this year or any year. With the cracking up of such tenuous unity as Chiang Kai-shek ever imposed upon the country, the power and the ambitions of local warlords are in the ascendant in many areas. One chieftain in the northwestern provinces declared the other day: "We have no Communists here, because when we find any they are executed."

Nor should the resources still available to the Kuomintang be underestimated. The Nationalists have still got some good divisions, and some good American equipment and some money. According to reports, the Nanking Ministry of National Defense is engaged in raising 30 new Nationalist "armies" in case the peace talks fail. What the Nationalist forces lack most is morale, and the fact that if fighting were resumed they would be aligned on the anti-Communist, and therefore pro-American side against enthroned Marxism might yet supply some of that.

Meanwhile, China today is dwelling in a strange twilight zone between war and peace, in which the telephone service between Nationalist-held Shanghai and Communist-occupied Peiping is uninterrupted; mails move regularly between the two Chinas; Nationalists swap flour for coal with the Communist North; and special trading points have been established on the banks of the Yangtze between Shanghai and Nanking, where Chinese merchants from both sides of the "bamboo curtain" meet to haggle and barter and buy and sell, thereby demonstrating once again that, despite wars and revolutions, there will always be a China.

All the signs point to a China split between Communism and warlordism, in which 450 million little people will sturdily continue minding their own business and thinking not much either of Marxism or any other "ism," but quite a lot about their ricebowls, their families and their family clans.

Nationalist troops swarmed through Shanghai early last month on the road of retreat to South China. Now the Communists covet Shanghai, but they may find is to be a headache

Poles' Ire at 'Label' Shows West Still Has an Inning

By Edwin D. Critz
Post Reporter

POLAND'S dramatic objection to the word "satellite" last week is regarded by observers here as a key to just where Poland now stands in relation to Russia and the West.

In line with this, it is emphasized that Poland has assumed special importance in recent months as one of the Soviet areas where anti-Communist resurgence is still being actively planned.

It wasn't just impulse that led Polish Foreign Minister Zygmunt Modzelewski to declare Chester H. Opal persona non grata for using the word "satellite" in a bulletin prepared by the United States Information Service.

Opal also was accused of promoting a steady stream of anti-Polish propaganda in his capacity as Information Service chief in Warsaw. But, it is pointed out, the outburst was touched off by the presently embarrassing word "satellite."

The Polish people, it seems, can't digest that word yet, and Polish Communists are reluctant to press the point in view of the country's still fluid political situation.

Quotes Dictionary

THE Polish government's official stand was made clear here by Ambassador Jozef Winiewicz in an interview which stressed that Poland is not and does not intend to be a "satelita" of any country.

Drawing from a dictionary before him, Winiewicz declared that it is insulting and utterly incorrect to regard Poland as "obsequious . . . dependent . . . servile . . . subordinate . . ."

In denying that Poland is taking orders from Moscow, the Polish Ambassador explained that Socialist-Communist elements in Poland simply look to Russia for guidance since Russia is, after all, the nearest and greatest example of a "socialist" state.

"Our trend," he said, "is to create a peaceful, cooperative socialist state. This does not mean, however, that we will be another Soviet Russia."

Polish socialism, he stressed, is a native movement many years old. Poland is adapting this Polish socialism, he added, to solve its problems "the Polish way."

"And we have a strong belief we are doing the right thing," Winiewicz declared.

Polish exiles and other informed sources here say, in contrast, that Poland is well on the way to a Soviet-type dictatorship, indifferent to the dignity and independence of the individual.

Information from more neutral sources pictures a Poland that is willing to work with the Western powers but is in imminent danger of becoming a dictatorship uncompromisingly hostile to capitalist nations.

Investments Permitted

POLAND'S economy now, as revealed in official government reports, is based upon "the coordination of public, cooperative, and private enterprise."

Public enterprise includes heavy industry and essential services. The cooperatives are in agriculture, trade, large housing developments and publishing. Private enterprise is found in agriculture also as well as in small industry, crafts and retail trade. In addition, Polish citizens are permitted to invest their capital in new large private enterprises, the government points out.

Since September, 1946, when the government's socialist program was started under the first Three-year Plan, Poland has nationalized such essential industries as coal, steel, armaments, textiles, aircraft and other industrial organizations employing more than 50 workers a shift.

Poland's socialism is characterized in official circles as a reaction to 150 years of foreign domination during the three partitions and 20 years of stagnation under the "szlachta" (the aristocracy) and the "colonels."

But whether this socialism will turn into Marxist-Leninist Communism may soon be determined by developments in Poland's agricultural program—a program which involves 68 per cent of Poland's nearly 24 million persons.

At present, the farmers are permitted to own farms of productive size, unlike in Russia where farm workers are given only a small, garden-type plot for their own use.

Co-ops Defended

POLISH farmers, however, are being pressed into joining farm cooperatives to increase production with modern equipment and scientific methods.

This cooperative program is described by the government as based on voluntary, private enterprise principles. But government critics, principally followers of former Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, regard this cooperative program as a forerunner of state collectivization along the lines of the kolkhozes in Russia.

Although the Poles officially profess strong antipathy to the collectivization, they may yet be swept into it by the growing power of the Marxist-Leninist United Workers Party (Polska Zjednoczona Partia Robotnicza). Now strongest in the government bloc, the party represents a merger of the Communist-dominated Polish Workers Party and the Polish Socialist Party.

Meanwhile, the leftist Peasant Party (Stronnocitwo Ludowe) has absorbed the Peasant Party of the New Liberation (Nowe Wyzwolenie) and is now taking in the remnants of Mikolajczyk's Polish Peasant Party.

The only remaining political unit of any significance is the ineffective Democratic Party, composed of shopkeepers, teachers, artisans, clerks and other white collar workers.

Traditional Hatred

OBSERVERS here report that the principal stumbling block to Polish sovietization is the organized opposition being generated by Mikolajczyk's followers and dispossessed aristocracy whose historic hostility toward Russia can only be matched by its hatred of the present Polish regime.

As for the Polish government itself—the individuals, their psychology—it is generally acknowledged that the benevolent socialist spirit of the immediate postwar period is steadily giving ground to strong Communist ideology.

The government, significantly, is being led by Boleslaw Bierut, who has served importantly as secretary general of the Polish Workers Party and who only recently, it is reported, was directed by Communist leaders to be more militant.

Stated officially and with greater subtlety, Poland is said to be "inclining" toward Soviet Russia because of "the unfortunate world situation in which emphasis is being placed on who belongs together."

Baffling to Count Jobless in Berlin

BERLIN (AP).—Trying to tally blockaded Berlin's unemployed has American officials here throwing up their hands.

If a housewife with six children and an employed husband wants to pick up a little money and applies for work, she's listed as unemployed by the Germans. In the U. S. she wouldn't be considered employable.

A totally disabled war veteran drawing a pension seeks a job which he can do sitting down with one hand. He goes on the list as unemployed.

An American official says: "I know a fellow who scrounges in the ruins for old furniture and repairs it. He's making more money than a lot of people who are officially employed. He gets layoff compensation and is listed as unemployed, but he wouldn't take a job if it came along."

Tongue-in-cheek American officials say about 100,000 Berliners are totally or partially unemployed now.

If a Berliner is totally unemployed because of the blockade, he gets up to 60 per cent of his ordinary wage. This is paid by the city through his last employer.

Flurry of Accomplishments Wound Up Forrestal Tenure

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

JUST about a year ago, America's first Secretary of Defense found himself approaching a crisis. A major split had developed within the newly unified armed forces over division of the defense budget.

Counselors urged Secretary James Vincent Forrestal to employ the latent powers of his high office and "crack down." Before him were these alternate recommendations:

(1) Fire the chief offenders, or

(2) Demand the resignation of Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, jr., and Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan and then ask President Truman to nominate each to the other's job.

Chief merit of the latter novel proposal was that it would make a martyr of no one and would be a signal warning for the services to cooperate.

Forrestal turned down both suggestions. He believed in "working with people," not getting tough. At his first press conference as Defense Secretary six months earlier, he had told newsmen he would issue few directives. "My concept of my job is that I am a member of a team working toward a common end," he said. "If I have to use authority I might as well get out of the job."

Within another six months—by last fall—Forrestal had changed his mind. He had adopted a fundamentally different approach on how to achieve unification, if not on the question of recent "cracking down." This has resulted in a series of orders and recommendations whose full significance has not been recognized either by the armed forces or the general public. They change the entire picture of Forrestal's regime.

Paradoxical Attributes

TODAY, as Forrestal steps down after 18 months as Secretary of Defense, a careful evaluation of this most controversial official seems in order.

Was he a success or a failure?

How far did he bring unification of the services?

What were his accomplishments and fumbles, his strengths and weaknesses?

What manner of man is he, anyway? He's been called all manner of contradictory things: "Tough and dictatorial" as well as "soft;" a "great" and a "very poor" administrator; a man of unusual integrity and a scheming, warmongering spokesman for big business.

MRS. FORRESTAL
. . . An unfair target

First off, let's dispose of the last charge. Forrestal has been the victim of one of the most vicious, smear campaigns of recent years. He seldom answered his mud-slinging newspaper and radio critics, even when they questioned his personal courage and touched his family. He took the view that a man in public life exposed himself to this.

Moreover, some of the material used against him was almost impossible to answer. It was largely true, but derogatory only by innuendo.

He was a self-made millionaire, a "Wall Streeter," onetime head of an international banking firm and personally opposed to many phases of the New Deal. All this was reprehensible only in some circles. It made him a perfect target, however, for the "warmonger" charge of Russophiles.

He had, 20 years before, set up a holding company to lessen and postpone income tax payments. But there was nothing hidden or illegal about the practice and he paid the tax later.

He did bring to the Pentagon rich conservatives who were open to the same sort of charges. But one of Forrestal's chief troubles as Defense Secretary was inducing men of real ability to accept jobs here. Able men with "liberal" records are hard to find, though a number of Forrestal's most loyal aides fit this description.

Finance in the '20s

MANY of the accusations stem from the fact that Forrestal was president of Dillon, Read & Co., Wall Street investment bankers, before coming to Washington in 1940. During the '20s and '30s that firm, and others, floated bond issues and made loans to foreign governments—a role now taken over by the American Government.

Forrestal's press and radio critics charge that in this capacity he "armed Hitler," "financed the Chaco war" in South America and promoted the international cartel system before the war and helped to revive it afterward, and that he has oil interests in the Middle East.

The retiring Secretary has denied the last charge. He also has stated that he severed all connection with Dillon, Read nine years ago. On the "arming Hitler" accusation, aides say that Dillon, Read did support the Weimar Republic in the same manner and with the same motives the American Government now employs in Germany. The firm stopped its financial support of the Reich after Hitler came to power, however, they state.

Dillon, Read did make loans to Bolivia during the '20s, and probably some of the money went into armaments used in the Chaco war. But Forrestal's aides say the transaction was no different from other international finance of the period. Moreover, they point out, Forrestal did not become president of the firm until 1938.

On the cartel question and current American plans for the Ruhr, they declare that Forrestal has not taken part in decisions about Germany, but has left this to General Clay, the Department of the Army and the State Department.

Pro-Zionists Defend Him

THE Defense chief also has been accused of being anti-Zionist, of having used his position to promote the Arab and British position in the Middle East.

While the truth or falsity of this is difficult to establish, pro-Zionist friends of Forrestal insist that he never went beyond his duty as Defense Secretary in advising the President on the question of sending American troops to Palestine when the British threatened to pull out late in 1947.

They say that President Truman asked his Defense Secretary whether we could provide the troops. Military intelligence told Forrestal that 100,000 to 250,000 soldiers would be required. (The estimate was based largely on British appraisals and turned out to be inordinately high).

Forrestal then informed the President that we had only 29,000 soldiers available in the "strategic reserve," and that the remainder of the 100,000 minimum could be provided only by stripping our garrisons everywhere to the danger point and by abandoning plans to strengthen Alaska.

This position undoubtedly influenced our Palestine policy at the time, but these sources close to Forrestal insist that he only did his duty in presenting the Army viewpoint.

Forrestal's commentator-columnist critics also accused him of running out on President Truman in the campaign and "conspiring" with Governor Dewey to keep his job in the expected Republican Administration.

These charges have no basis. Forrestal stayed out of the campaign with Mr. Truman's consent for the same reason that Secretary of State Marshall made no speeches—to keep foreign policy and national defense out of politics. Senator Hatch, chairman of the Democratic Speakers' Bureau, said so flatly in a little noticed letter to Columnist David Lawrence.

There were some tentative dealings with Dewey backers before the election, looking toward an orderly transition of defense leadership from Democratic to Republican hands in the event of a GOP victory. But all such contacts were with Mr. Truman's full knowledge and consent.

Moved to Retort

FORRESTAL'S critics missed no opportunity to throw mud. When the Defense chief found that a number of agencies had responsibility for internal security, he urged that they be coordinated. From this, opponents concocted the charge that he wanted to abolish the FBI and set up a "Gestapo" under his own office.

Forrestal did deny this one, declaring it was so untruthful that he was "almost persuaded that it is malicious."

But he did not bother to answer two of the worst below-the-belt attacks. One reported that it was Mrs. Forrestal, a former fashion editor, who induced the famed couturier Mainbocher to design the Wave uniform. The column contended the uniforms cost more than the girls could afford, and gave the impression, without saying so, that Mrs. Forrestal and Mainbocher were getting a cut.

Actually, the two acted from the most patriotic motives and succeeded in giving the Waves the smartest uniform of all the services. They didn't benefit financially, as, of course, the uniforms were made and sold by tailors and manufacturers all over the country.

'Flight' Explained

ON ANOTHER occasion, Forrestal was accused of running out the back door of his New York home a dozen years ago and climbing a fence while thieves robbed his wife of her jewelry. Actually, the facts as reported in the New York papers the day after the robbery were far different.

The Forrestals had been to the theater with friends and he had gone home to bed while the rest of the party went supper-clubbing. A gang of jewel thieves followed Mrs. Forrestal home, snatched her valuables in front of their home and escaped. Forrestal did sneak out the back door all right, but it was the next morning when leaving for the office. There was a crowd of reporters and photographers out front!

All of this illustrates one of Forrestal's big weaknesses as Secretary of Defense. Part of his "bad press" has been faulty public relations.

He has had good men working for him in this field, but often he didn't take their advice. He honestly hates public appearances and speech making, and he was persuaded to hold press conferences only at long intervals. Nor has the Defense chief made himself available to individual reporters to the degree his job demanded. Other Washington officials avoid much trouble by taking the press into their confidence.

Shyness is mainly responsible for this attitude, though part of it may be traced to his background. Traditionally, Wall Street tycoons avoid reporters like the plague. There's little or no evidence of social snobbery in Forrestal, however.

In contrast, it is interesting to note that the Defense chief's congressional relations have been good.

Another weakness of Forrestal's has been administration. Like many top men of finance, he's used to dealing with people rather than with an organization. But that frailty has been somewhat offset by the efforts of assistants.

Almost Too Broad Minded

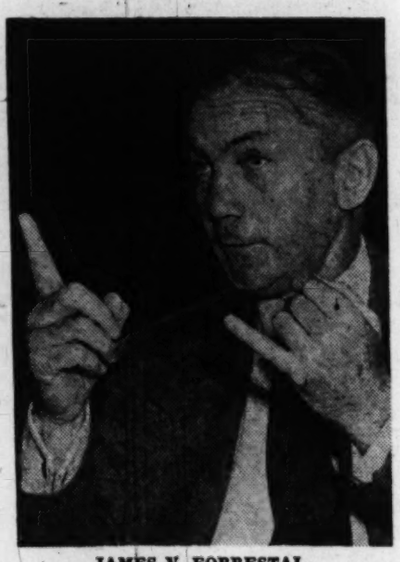
TWO OTHER things about Forrestal have been far more important in determining the success or failure of unification in the past year and a half. Each proved both an asset and a handicap, and they were largely responsible for his not cracking down on the warring armed services.

One is his breadth of viewpoint, which not only enables him to see all sides of a question but makes it difficult for him to act decisively.

The other was his service as Undersecretary and then Secretary of the Navy from 1940 to 1947. This experience was invaluable to him as Secretary of Defense. On the other hand, his approach to unification was somewhat compromised by his role in bringing the Navy into the "marriage."

Forrestal's breadth of mind, coupled with his great integrity and sincerity, score very high on the credit side of his regime. A man of great learning, who tempers a philosophical approach with practicality, he made no snap judgments. He worried over them.

It is an aphorism today to note that war is total and that preparation must cover our entire national life. In practice, however, it is sometimes different. Forrestal's imagination ranged all over the lot, searching for chinks in our armor.



JAMES V. FORRESTAL
. . . Weighs both sides of every question

He backed such varied projects as "man-made moons" and renaissance of our merchant marine when the Maritime Commission—charged with the job—appeared to be lagging.

An Oar in Diplomacy

DEFENSE PLANNING was his responsibility, and he forced action even when it got into other people's fields. Forrestal constantly stressed the need for intimate coordination of our foreign and military policies. This has led to far greater cooperation in this area than ever before—but has led some people to accuse him of sticking his nose into foreign policy.

And although steadfast in his view that a strong America can maintain peace, he saw the other side of the question, too. Forrestal raised and stressed the danger of overspending for defense.

This unusual ability to see every problem from all sides is also a handicap. He sometimes procrastinated and postponed necessary action because of worry that the other side might be right.

His other great handicap, stemming from his naval background, is not that which critics have cited. They say he favors the Navy. Actually, Forrestal has leaned over backward to avoid appearing a naval partisan, though his years at the Navy perhaps influenced him unconsciously.

It is interesting to note, however, that all except one of his chief uniformed assistants are from the Army.

Forrestal's naval background hobbled him in this way: As postwar Navy Secretary, he was largely responsible for getting the top admirals to accept unification. But he opposed the original "merger" plan.

Having led the Navy, largely against its will, into the compromise plan, he has been in an awkward position in having to press for centralized rather than autonomous control of the armed forces.

Gradually, Forrestal has been won over to the need for one Department of National Defense rather than the "federation" contemplated under the 1947 unification act.

A General Exodus

FORRESTAL steps down this week for several reasons. He is very tired and wants to quit, though he is doing so with "mixed emotions." His efforts in the field of foreign policy have caused resentment in high places, and there seems to be a trend to eliminate military men and bankers from key jobs in diplomacy and defense.

Furthermore, the job of carrying out Forrestal's proposals for further unification can be better handled by a newcomer.

What has been done in the past 18 months? These accomplishments can be written down:

1. A unified procedure for handling Defense legislative matters has been worked out, which gives the Office of Defense firm control.

2. Orders have been issued to abolish the Army, Navy and Air Force public information branches and set up a single office under the Defense chief.

3. Considerable progress has been made toward completion of a single budget and spending control system for the armed forces—a most complex job.

4. Air transport of the armed services has been merged, consolidation of sea transport is under way and similar planning for land transport is going forward.

5. Considerable progress has been made toward joint or cross procurement of supplies.

6. Preparation of a comprehensive system of civil defense.

7. Consolidation of military and naval hospitals and decision to merge the Army and Navy medical services.

8. Preparation of a modern code of military justice for all the services—now before Congress.

9. Drafting of a new pay system for the armed forces—the first major revision in 40 years—which bases compensation on responsibility rather than length of service.

10. Creation of a top-level board under the Secretary of Defense to evaluate independently new weapons and entire "weapon systems" sponsored by any one service. The group will make a separate appraisal of the merits of such moot projects as super-carriers, huge strategic bombers and UMT, including their relative worth in terms of probable results and cost.

11. Assignment of roles to the armed forces by the Key West and Newport conferences, such as primary responsibility for anti-submarine war to the Navy and strategic bombing to the Air Force.

12. A start toward an integrated, realistic Reserve program for the armed forces.

13. Initiation of long-range plans for fundamental unification by replacement of the "Franklin Field attitude" at West Point and Annapolis with a broader loyalty to the armed forces of the United States.

14. Rebuilding of the Army, Navy and Air Force from their weakened condition after demobilization.

15. Recommendations for strengthening of the Unification Act and the recall of General Eisenhower to be chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Forrestal regards the last-named action as the greatest single step taken to achieve unification.

Some Were Tardy

THIS is an impressive record of achievement. Could more have been done?

In hindsight, it appears that some of the above actions could have been taken earlier, that some things still undone could be well on the way. Eisenhower might have been brought in earlier—though there were obstacles in the way—to put life into the Joint Chiefs. A tougher policy might have prevented much of the interservice feuding.

On the whole, however, the record is good. History, we predict, will regard Forrestal as a statesman and one of the great men of the era.

Abysmal Fear Is Fuel of Communism

By Raymond B. Allen
President, University of Washington

FOR almost 200 years the American idea has brought hope to men everywhere. This is the idea that man must be free to work and play and pursue his destiny without fear of any man or any government of men. The American idea had wings, and for generations, with bloody interludes to prevent its destruction by tyrants, it has survived and grown strong as a beacon for those who seek human dignity and who yearn to express the idealism of the human spirit and to cultivate their souls as free men.

Today the beacon flames ever brighter in a storm-tossed world. But never in history has the idea faced more formidable, insidious attacks. No attack on the American idea has ever been so carefully planned and relentlessly pursued as that of the Communist movement during the past 100 years. The philosophy and strategy were spelled out by Marx and Engels in 1848 in the Communist Manifesto, and were implemented and refined by Lenin and Stalin.

Marx and Engels propounded the greatest historical and biological fallacy in man's age-old struggle for freedom. Observing the rise of the industrial state out of the ruins of feudalism, noting the avarice of men who exploited their fellows, they concluded that the worker was chained to the machine and was a slave to the owner. From this they derived their doctrine of class struggle and the idea that human welfare required that the worker must own the means of production. To accomplish this, the dictatorship of the working class (the proletariat) was a necessary prelude to socialism.

But they erred. While it is true that social tensions of varying degrees are products of normal as well as abnormal behavior, the central fallacy in their doctrine is that these tensions are rooted in social classes. Tensions occur, of course, but when they do it is between individuals and groups, not between economic classes.

As a matter of fact, there is far less class distinction and class consciousness under American capitalism, which the Communists seek to destroy, than under Russian Communism itself. The elite of Russia, a few Communists, perhaps 5 per cent of the population, are more class distinct and class conscious than any group of rulers in the world since the passing of the Nazis.

War Powers Incidental

IN MARX' day the American industrial giant was still a baby, scarcely able to walk. In America, with a genius peculiarly their own, a fearless, lusty and fun-loving people, whose Government was responsive to their will, expanded and pioneered a new kind of free industrial society by exploring new fields of science, technology and culture. Only a few minor blemishes mar their magnificent record of achievement, and these are being rapidly erased. Even the centralization of governmental power during two world wars failed to chain the spirit of these free people.

Theirs has been a social process resting firmly on the free and daring spirit of the individual, with government, expressing the people's will, writing the rules of the road. Their rule of law was never so rigid and inhuman, even in wartime, that men were reduced to the status of slaves of the state and of the machine they had fashioned. Rather, the industrial and governmental process has shown a resiliency and strength that men of little faith thought impossible.

Indeed, those of full faith were astonished at what free America had built even while

Raymond B. Allen (above), B.S., M.A., M.S., M.D., Ph.D., LL.D., has been president of the University of Washington since 1946. His previous connections as an educator were with medical schools. Last January, Dr. Allen became the center of a Nation-wide academic controversy when he recommended the dismissal of three of his professors for Communist activity. He said he did so because he believes that "a Communist is incompetent to teach the truth." The case is still having repercussions expanding its freedoms. And in the process a free people, moving almost at will throughout the social system, had widened, not narrowed, the spectrum of colorful and satisfying choice for anyone so fortunate as to be an American in 1949.

Here was the American answer to the tyrants whose blueprint of a better world was the fallacious doctrine of the Communist Manifesto, and to the would-be tyrants of the Communist Party of the United States.

The Urge for Security

BUT the men of no faith, the men of cynicism and fear are blind to their tragic error. Theirs is a fear and cynicism so bleak and abysmal that they can trust no one, not even themselves. Why? Because they have given up their souls to the cult of an all-powerful state. Lacking faith in themselves to protect their own welfare in a society of free men, having no faith in anything except their dogma of the materialistic state ("pie in the sky, by and by"), they drive themselves to the uttermost degradation of the human spirit. Over-reacting to the urge for security they share with all men, they end by giving up their very souls.

Make no mistake, this is not a cult that grows best on empty stomachs. Actually it grows best on empty heads and empty hearts. Its human products are faceless, soulless creatures chained by black despair to a hopeless future of mankind. In all Christian charity, its victims are profoundly to be pitied. To recover respectability and self-respect they must discover the meaning of honor, dignity and integrity, which are missing words in the lexicon of the Communist Party. We could not find either these words or the qualities they represent in our recent searching examination of the Communist Party at the University of Washington.

With the cunning of the damned, the Communists wage relentless war on every front. They fight cleverly, with all the tools of modern science. They play upon the fears and hates which lie hidden in all of us. They attack subtly now, boldly then, any institution of freedom, the church and synagogue, the school, the union, the club, the public forum, the press, the courts, and the government itself.

Can they win? Of course not. Their so-called political party, too craven to stand up and be counted for what it is, conspiring by night and sowing its poison by day, has only the strength of a band of outcasts. Are these fanatic cultists serious in their conspiracy? Ask a Pole, a Czech or a Latvian, and get your answer. Yes, they are serious, all right, in their utterly ruthless, humorless determination to achieve their ends by any means, however dishonorable.

If only they had a sense of humor! But, if this were so, they couldn't be Communists. No real Communist has the sense of proportion, the insight, the perspective which is the mark of an American, who can enjoy a good belly-laugh even at his own expense.

An Inherited Poison

THIS is why we can't laugh them off like other empty-headed crackpots. Theirs is a poison that will paralyze us completely if we permit it to do so. Alertness to this danger from within is the price of our freedom. The poison of hate and fear is part of our biological inheritance from our primitive animal ancestors with which the Communist would enslave us.

Fortunately, the antidote to the paralysis and defeat of fear and hate is close at hand. It is the human part of our inheritance as man. It is love and hope, love of our fellowmen and hope of better days. Proof of its effectiveness is all about us in the progress man has made in his age-long struggle to improve himself and his lot in the world.

This is today's battleground of an international civil war, a titanic struggle for the minds, loyalties, and the very souls of men. The American idea asserts that men of hope and faith and forward-looking minds shall be free and shall not be chained to their fears and hates. Our task in this struggle is to see to it that such men "shall not perish from the earth."

Each of us must make a fateful choice. It is ours to decide that America, "the last best hope of earth," will guard well its ideal of human dignity and brotherhood until, in God's good time, any man, anywhere, can claim it for his own.

The question is simply this: Do we want to be men, or will we succumb to our better instincts and passions, our fears and hates? The world already has our answer, a resounding reaffirmation of the dignity and worth of man, the same answer which every generation of Americans has given and will give whenever and wherever the challenge comes.

Gambling Expose

District Attorney Fay has struck a terrific blow at Washington's 100-million-dollar-a-year gambling business. Indications are that the raids carried out on Friday by 35 deputy marshals led by three former FBI agents reached into the headquarters of some of the city's foremost gambling rings. Several big operators appear to have been arrested along with many lesser cogs in the machine. But of much greater importance, as we see it, is the district attorney's comprehensive exposure of the extensive gambling business that is flourishing here.

Mr. Fay has not been content to arrest a few leg-men for the gamblers or to break up a few of the more obvious gambling establishments. Rather he has probed into the background of the city's gambling network. Operating with limited means and a meager staff of investigators, he has, nevertheless, uncovered 24 ticker drops or headquarters. He has run down the source from which several million numbers tickets were being supplied every month to the Washington area. More than 400 places operating in connection with the ticker systems for gambling purposes were located. Coincidental with the raids, the D. A.'s office asked the telegraph company to discontinue service to 25 ticker locations and the telephone company to disconnect 300 telephones used in gambling.

It is clear enough that instead of dealing with the "retail" end of gambling, Mr. Fay is trying to strangle the "wholesale" business. His plan also includes prosecution of landlords who are knowingly allowing their premises to be used for gambling purposes and a drive against the licenses of poolrooms, hackers and liquor dealers engaged in gambling. While it is impossible to stop all gambling, these methods can be used to drive out of business the organized gangs that are preying upon the community.

Mr. Fay has left no doubt as to the necessity of following this course if lawlessness in Washington is to be substantially curtailed. Gambling inevitably leads to more serious crime. It is an open invitation to hijacking, bribery, and numerous crimes of violence. The very fact that a big business of this sort must operate without protection of the law means that it must seek lawless protection, and that is the genesis of gang warfare.

The great unanswered question is why the police and the District Commissioners have permitted this huge lawless business to flourish here virtually unmolested. Even after the district attorney publicly announced a special grand jury investigation into gambling 10 months ago the big operators apparently continued to believe that they were immune to arrest. The far-reaching operations that Mr. Fay has now exposed without either the aid or knowledge of the police could not have continued with an alert police force conscientiously enforcing the law. We can see no escape from the conclusion that the police have failed in one of the primary duties of any municipal law-enforcement agency. More important than Mr. Fay's next move, therefore, will be the Commissioners' move, or, if they fail to act, the measures that Congress and the President may feel impelled to take.

Payment For Treason

The sentence imposed on Mildred Gillars is not extreme when measured against her crime. The British hanged William Joyce, "Lord Haw Haw," for his traitorous broadcasts during the war. Our court has sent Miss Gillars to prison for a minimum of ten years for the same kind of offense. The reason for the comparative leniency here, we suspect, is that neither Miss Gillars nor any other traitor in the recent war was able to do the United States real harm. We had no desertion comparable to that of Benedict Arnold, no trafficking with the enemy of the sort that was commonplace on both sides in the Civil War, no sabotage that crippled any part of our gigantic war effort.

Two oceans separated American soil from the fighting fronts, and made it harder for traitors to operate effectively. The traitors convicted up to now have been few in number and miserably futile in the work they did. In these circumstances we think it would have come as a shock if Miss Gillars had been sentenced to death, although the law would have permitted it. This wretched woman had a fair trial under the system she tried to defeat and destroy. The sentence imposed on her was severe enough, we think, to show that her treason, whatever its consequences, was a very grave crime.

Class Enemy

We have one little piece of information and advice for any of our readers who may be attending the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace, which is being held at the famous rendezvous of the working class, the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York. It will be all very well to express one's enthusiasm for Russian art and civilization as compared to that of the decadent West, to prove for example that the Russians invented printing a thousand years before Gutenberg; but whatever you say, be careful not to include among the glories of Russian culture the works of that warmongering tool of Wall Street, that prince of Red-baiters, that inspirator of the Marshall Plan and the North Atlantic Alliance, the late Fyodor Mikhailovich Dostoievski.

The party line on Dostoievski is that he was a "wicked, arrant enemy of the revolution and of revolutionary democrats," which, as you can see for yourself, virtually puts him in a class with Judge Medina of New York. Therefore, be warned by the example of Professor Kirpotin, who for having ventured a bit of praise for the author of The Brothers Karamazov, Crime and Punishment, The Idiot, The Possessed and so on, has been clapped into one of the party doghouses—doubtless the one lately vacated by Dmitri Shostakovich.

The precise dialectical reasoning whereby Professor Yegolin of the Gorky Institute of World Literature, who appears to speak for the party in these matters, discovered the reactionary and counterrevolutionary character of Dostoievski's novels is not now known to us. Probably the significant fact is that Dostoievski, the better to deceive his readers, posed as a revolutionary and even went through the farce of doing a little time in Siberia for his published opinions. He also had a good deal to say about the Slavic soul and the Slavic mission, which has doubtless encouraged a good many innocent persons, unacquainted with the sinister nature of ideas, to believe that he was a kind of nineteenth century Molotov.

The truth, however, seems to be that Dostoievski simply wasn't Americanized enough to be a good Russian, according to Soviet standards. He seems to have had no love for machinery, and certainly would not have approved of collective farming or for that matter of anything which the Russian peasant might tend to dislike. He believed that the moujiks possessed a wisdom superior to that of the bourgeois intellectuals, corrupted as most of them were by the materialism and rationalism of the age. Because the moujiks were poor he set a certain value on poverty; because they were intuitive he became an antirationalist; and because they were pious he became an ardent, if somewhat unconventional, Christian; and he has had, in fact, a tremendous influence upon subsequent European Christian thought.

In short, Dostoievski was at almost all points the very opposite of a bourgeois. Thus he was not and could never have been a sound Marxist. There is every reason to believe, had he lived to witness it, that he would have regarded the tremendous Soviet enterprise of transforming Father Zosima's Holy Russia into a combination of Gary, Ind.; Cicero, Ill., and Atlantic City, N. J., with utmost horror and that such a vision would have precipitated one of his famous epileptic seizures. And probably the last place in the world in which he would have felt at home would be the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria.

Rail Agreement

Almost a year has passed since the non-operating railroad employes presented their demands for third-round wage increases and introduction of the 40-hour week without reduction in pay. Just a week ago a settlement was effected, based on the recommendations of an emergency fact-finding board appointed by President Truman under the Railway Labor Act, after mediation efforts had failed following a strike vote. The recommendations of the fact-finding board were not only accepted by both sides but its members were called on to arbitrate certain disputed issues connected with application of the 40-hour week. It is a striking tribute to the fair-mindedness, patience and thoroughness of Dr. Leiserson, chairman of the fact-finding board, and his colleagues that an agreement was finally reached without any interruption to work, although the unions were legally free to call a strike in January.

In recent years the reports of railway fact-finding boards have been repeatedly disregarded when they failed to support union demands, and the workers have accordingly been encouraged to strike as a means of enforcing their demands instead of relying upon the procedures laid down in the Railway Labor Act for bringing about peaceful settlements. In the present instance the issues in dispute were extremely important and great skill and understanding were required to effect a compromise of differences. As The Post pointed out when the fact-finding board made its report last December, the roads were in no position to resist a demand for the 40-hour week, since it prevails in other major industries. But its introduction will be costly and will require many adjustments in working schedules. In recognition of these difficulties the board proposed to defer inauguration of the shorter working week till next September; it also recommended much lower increases in rates of pay than the unions demanded in order to reduce the financial burdens on the roads entailed by the change in working hours.

The success of this effort to work out a compromise acceptable to the disputants emphasizes the importance of selecting competent men to serve on mediation and fact-finding boards set up under the Railway Labor Act. To be sure, the present law needs to be strengthened to enable the Government to deal with railway strikes that create national emergencies. But such emergencies would seldom arise if the parties to a dispute were convinced that they could rely on the wisdom and sound judgment of the men who function under the Railway Labor Act.

Rating The Professors

The tables have been turned at the University of Michigan. Students have been afforded the opportunity of grading their instructors in respect of general teaching effectiveness, ability to arouse interest, clarity and thoroughness of presentation, and other characteristic tests of teaching ability. About 11,000 students have filled out about 50,000 questionnaires covering more than 400 faculty members and 1200 courses. The grading presumably reflects the considered opinion of the student body, and it is not at all surprising that the poll ratings are in accord with the opinions of department heads in respect of the teaching ability of their subordinates. Let's hope, too, that the department heads themselves got a glimpse of themselves as others see them.

As a means of checking or confirming the views of university officials who have the responsibility of hiring, firing, and promoting members of the faculty, student polls serve a highly useful purpose, provided they represent a large and representative body of student opinion. The chief danger from the regular employment of such means of testing teaching ability is that the polls may have an unfortunate effect on some instructors who in their zeal to get good marks from their students may strive for popularity at the expense of the kind of thoroughness that students sometimes fail to appreciate. Some outstanding scholars, for instance, lack the power to appeal to large numbers of students, while some very indifferent scholars may be able to hold large bodies of students by virtue of their oratorical skill or their ability to present a subject in predigested form.

There is always danger that the student body concerned about passing examinations and getting good marks will overrate the instructor whose lectures can be easily outlined for review and whose opinions are clearcut, not to say dogmatic. However, allowing for the fact that some distinguished members of a faculty may receive low teaching marks from an immature student body, it is, after all, the teaching that counts, and if a large proportion of the taught conclude that the instruction is below par, the burden of proof to the contrary rests with the university authorities.

Hope Diamond

Both the trend of the times and the American tradition of property are reflected in the coming sale of the Hope diamond and other gems of the late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean to pay claims against the McLean estate and to provide investment in presumably interest-bearing wealth. Some of the gem money may ultimately find its way into North Carolina real estate. At any rate, former Senator Robert R. Reynolds has asked permission of the court to use some of the inherited fortune of his 6-year-old daughter, Mamie Spears Reynolds, Mrs. McLean's granddaughter, to enlarge and improve the family home near Asheville.

Whether Mamie at 25 will find the world of 1968—when the will provided that the gems will be released from trust if not sold sooner to provide for the child—one in which jewels or the good earth will be more of an asset is hard to foretell. But most Americans would bet on the real estate, even though it is possible the McLean heiress may some day regret she cannot be adorned with the big pale-blue rectangular diamond once worn by Catherine the Great of Russia and Marie Antoinette of France. However, the elaborate formal entertaining that provided a fitting background for the estimated half million or more dollars' worth of McLean gems is not likely to return. What is more, few owners of gems can afford the personal taxes—$12,000 yearly for the McLean jewels—with no productive return other than esthetic enjoyment and social prestige.

There is also the problem of safety, now that society has become more exclusive and has so largely gone cafe, a problem that causes some owners of valuable gems to keep them in safe deposit vaults while they wear reproductions. Besides, Americans have never had the habit of putting their assets into noninterest-bearing jewels in the Eastern tradition. And the mass production of imitation gems, to say nothing of the promise of genuine ones by atomic miracle, makes it unlikely that they ever will.

PORTRAIT

MEN OF ST. DUNSTAN'S, London, England

His look remembers where the light has been,
Nor will forget . . . "One needs to be reminded,"
So runs the text, "that G.R.M. was blinded
In action at Guillemont, nineteen sixteen!
He works now at a trade, is quick and keen,
Makes mats and baskets, gardens and reads Braille.
One mat is special, has a heavy wale,
Inwoven with a pattern tan and green."

Have I beheld so luminous a night,
So proud and ruined citadel till now,
Such beauty and such manliness in plight?
Who looks upon this countenance learns how,
Enchained and shorn, but all unbroken still,
Eyeless in Gaza, Samson turned the mill . . .

"One House Veto"

The new home rule and reorganization bill just introduced in the Senate under the bipartisan sponsorship of eight members of the Senate District Committee is a good beginning in the current effort to restore local self-government to the citizens of the District of Columbia. However, it has a shortcoming which should be corrected as a result of the hearings scheduled for March 28 and further study.

This is the provision which in effect means that any legislative act of the elected District Council, beyond the limited ordinance making powers now held by the District of Columbia Commissioners, could be overruled by a simple vote of a single House of Congress, acting by itself and without regard to the wishes of the other House. That provision fails to accord the fullest possible measure of home rule and may create constitutional doubts.

A similar provision was included in the original version of the Auchincloss bill considered in the last Congress. Eminent constitutional authorities, including Dr. Corwin, Dr. Dodd and Mr. John W. Davis, as well as legislative counsel for the House of Representatives, concluded that the provision was constitutional. However, former Attorney General William D. Mitchell was of the opinion that the "one house veto" raised a constitutional question, and the provision was subsequently dropped.

Elimination of the "one house veto" from the new Senate bill and substitution of a full delegation of legislative authority over local affairs to the District Council, similar to that granted to the governments of Hawaii, Alaska and Puerto Rico, would dispel any constitutional doubt. There is nothing to indicate that the draftsmen of the Constitution intended to differentiate between the nature of the authority of Congress over the District and its authority over the Territories.

Full delegation of legislative power over local affairs would grant true home rule and really relieve Congress of its present burden of responsibility for local legislative action. At the same time, Congress would be free to assert its paramount legislative authority whenever it so desired. Full delegation would also eliminate troublesome questions as to whether particular acts of the District Council were legislative proposals subject to congressional veto or mere ordinances which need not be laid before Congress.

Mrs. Doyle's Resignation

The resignation of Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle from the presidency of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia came as a shock and constitutes a great loss to public education in the Capital.

Her leadership and constructive planning, coupled with her firm faith in the right, brought cohesion and concord into the deliberations of the board at all times. Mrs. Doyle presided with consummate skill and firmness, in her adherence to the dignity and importance of rules, procedures and deliberations governing an educational body once graced by the membership of Thomas Jefferson.

She was neither austere nor dictatorial in her dealings with her fellow members or the administrative staff. Her sincerity, fair dealing, and profound knowledge, combined with an elfish sense of humor, brought accord and cooperation from all sound thinking persons.

Evening Shopping

I was glad to see some stores getting back to Thursday night openings. Now my wife and I can make an evening of eating downtown, shopping together for a change, as we both work all day, and going to a movie. I hope this makes some of the other downtown stores do the same. Really, I can remember when Thursday nights had a festive air and it was fun doing the week's shopping in this mood. SAM C. WATKINS.
Washington.

The reversion to evening hours is, to say the least, a backward movement and I fail to appreciate the magnanimity of the so-called "public spirited merchants" who are so generously willing to serve the purchasing public. How about those required to sacrifice their evening hours?

I speak with understanding, having been a department store buyer in the old days when nightly hours were a practice. I campaigned for shorter hours and better working conditions—others joined with me and we finally secured decent hours and night closing. Now a group comes forward to break the humane practices that sales people and other store employes have enjoyed for a number of years. N. S.

Police Solicitation

May I compliment the Washington police force for a magnificent job in achieving and exceeding their quota in their Police Boys Club drive while at the same time managing to help Washington rank No. 1 on the FBI crime survey report?

Former District Police Chief Harvey Callahan, in testifying before Congress, said "soliciting funds by policemen for any purpose is not the job of police."

By and large the citizens of the District resent the use of a policeman's uniform as a club for raising funds even though the reason therefore is most praiseworthy.

If fund raising is to become part of the Metropolitan Police routine, may I respectfully suggest they lend their services to the National Symphony Fund, the Cancer Fund, the Arthritis Fund, the Community Chest Fund, polio, Easter Seal and many others?

ONE WHO GAVE.

Header Or Tedder?

In your Parade section picture quiz appearing March 20 is a question, "Just what kind of a job would you be performing if you were employed on a farm to drive a header?"

The answer at the bottom of the page states, "Turning hay which has been cut so that it will dry readily."

The questions states header and the picture shows a header. However, a header is used in the harvest of cereal grains such as oats, wheat, barley, etc., while the implement used to turn green or damp hay to dry more readily is known as a tedder.

Russian Treaties Vs. The Pact

In recent utterances the State Department and Mr. Truman have stigmatized Russia as a source of evil and as a "potential aggressor." We are told that the Atlantic Pact is designed to deter the Russians from committing an act of "armed aggression."

One was prepared, therefore, to read that the Atlantic Pact would recognize the menace of the Russian "monster."

But when the terms of the pact are considered we find that it contains a clause to the effect that it is not to conflict with any existing treaty. Thus the pact sanctifies two treaties of Russia, one with France and one with Britain.

Those treaties bind Britain and France not to enter into any alliance or coalition against Russia.

By sanctifying two alliances of Russia, the Atlantic Pact sanctifies Russia itself. It annoints Messrs. Stalin and Molotov, since they were the ones who made Russia's alliances with Britain and France. More important, the British-Russian-French alliances are directed, in effect, against the United States. They make it impossible for the United States to secure an effective ally.

The Atlantic Pact will not offer any binding commitment to the United States from Britain and France. Neither would be committed to aid the United States in a war originating outside the North Atlantic area. Britain and France would not even be committed to aid the United States if we should become involved in a war originating in the American zone of Germany.

If such a war should occur, the government of Britain and the government of France would each have before it two treaties. One, the Atlantic Pact, would authorize each to decide for itself whether an attack on the United States had taken place. The other, a treaty of alliance with Russia, would bind Britain (or France) not to enter into any alliance of coalition against Russia. Who knows who will be in charge of the government of Britain or France a year after the ratification of the Atlantic Pact?

Since, in our present mood, we are not likely to do what the Russians wish us to do, it follows that if they are to push us into a pro-Russian course they will oppose with vehemence a measure which they want us to adopt. Their campaign against the Atlantic Pact is now in full swing. But if the Russians were intent upon defeating the pact the recent convention of the Supreme Soviet could have officially proclaimed that the adherence of Britain and France to the Atlantic Pact would automatically cancel their alliances with Russia. But the Soviet convention preserved a death-like silence on the subject. In effect, it invited Britain and France to join the Atlantic Pact.

One concludes, therefore, that it is the interest of the Soviet leaders to have the United States sanctify Russia's alliances. They evidently wish to place us in the false, self-degrading position of entering into an alliance against Russia. Those who will be deluded and betrayed will be the American people, who are to undertake, for 20 years, to subsidize and arm the allies of Russia that are bound and pledged not to enter into any alliance or coalition against Russia.

If the United States is to adhere to the Atlantic Pact, the British-Russian-French alliances must first be voided, canceled and annulled.

Why The Pact Is Necessary

By Andre Visson

Hamstrung U. N.

THE WESTERN world has welcomed the North Atlantic Pact with both satisfaction and sadness. The realists welcome it as a return to balance of power. The idealists look upon it as the finish of a beautiful dream. The One World conception, with which so many well-meaning Americans approached the post-war world, has vanished.

Every thinking person knows, of course, who is responsible for the expiring of the One World conception. Gradually strangled by successive Soviet coups in eastern and central Europe, the One World idea finally choked to death in the Security Council of the United Nations, where the Soviet vetoes created a suffocating atmosphere.

To be sure, the North Atlantic Pact, as the Administration spokesmen rightly emphasize, is in no way a substitute for the United Nations. But it is equally true that if Soviet Russia had not blocked the normal functioning of the United Nations there would have been no need for the North Atlantic Pact. The pact does not weaken the United Nations. It is the dangerous weakening of the United Nations that made the pact indispensable.

An attentive reading of Soviet reactions to the North Atlantic Pact, echoed by identical reactions in the Communist press everywhere, reveals that the Soviets can hardly conceal their fear of the pact. This fear lurks behind the smoke screen of Soviet propaganda.

To be sure, when they scream about the impending third world war, it is with the purpose of scaring the still free peoples of western Europe. But one feels that they themselves are perhaps even more frightened than those they want to impress. One only wonders whether the men in the Politburo realize this; whether they dare admit to themselves that they have no one to blame but themselves for the situation they find themselves in.

ONE ALSO wonders, when they scream about "American imperialism," whether they know that the idea for a regional organization of western Europe originated not in Washington but in western Europe! Belgium's Paul-Henri Spaak began to advocate this idea as early as 1945.

But in 1945 Spaak's idea found little support in Washington. American policy-makers—whom Moscow now accuses of preparing for a third world war—had no enthusiasm for a regional organization of western Europe, because they were still hoping, despite the disillusionment in San Francisco and elsewhere, that the men in the Kremlin would see the light and follow the voice of reason.

It was only after the coup in Czechoslovakia, when it became apparent that Soviet aggressiveness, unless checked, would organize similar coups in western European countries, that Washington recognized that the world was hopelessly divided in two. And since the United Nations seemed helpless to prevent the gradual absorption of the weaker world by the stronger one, the only means of saving the weaker world was to so strengthen it as to make the balance of power lean the other way.

IT WOULD, however, be a dangerous illusion to believe that the North Atlantic Pact has automatically reestablished the balance of power in our favor. It has merely created the precondition indispensable for such reestablishment. And if the men in the Kremlin are really as fearful of a third world war and of our "aggressive plans" as their reactions would suggest, they can still prevent the race toward a military showdown.

The pact which their brutal and stupid policy inspired is here to stay. But the United Nations is still there, ready and eager to function if the Soviets will cease to block the work of its committees for disarmament and for the control of atomic energy.

It is now up to Moscow to slow down the opening race for armaments. Instead of pondering on whether it should react to the North Atlantic Pact in Finland, Iran or Yugoslavia, Moscow would do well to recognize that the only intelligent, efficient and constructive reaction can take place in the United Nations. A Macedonian-Albanian coup against Tito, preparation for which is reported from all European capitals, will be of little help to Soviet Russia.

First, it may fail and thus further weaken her position in the Soviet orbit. But even if it should succeed, it would not weaken the North Atlantic Pact. On the contrary, it would speed up its implementation on the military level. If Moscow is really afraid of the North Atlantic Pact and is anxious to render it "innocuous," she can do it only in the United Nations. If Moscow still believes in collective security as advocated by Maxim Litvinoff in the years preceding the Second World War, it is not yet too late to revive it.

The instrument for this—the United Nations—is very much weakened but still intact. But if Moscow misses this opportunity, it will find itself a few years from now, in a world in which all countries in both hemispheres—with the exception of the unfortunate nations dragged behind the iron curtain—are organized into a system of regional pacts approaching that collective security which the United Nations was unable to achieve because of Soviet Russia.

Ex-Senator Still Using His Frank

By Drew Pearson

BACK IN IDAHO the voters thought they were finished with Henry Dworshak, Republican, when they voted him out of office at the last election. But they reckoned without the bumptious nerve of the former Senator.

Though officially out of the Senate, Dworshak has had the effrontery to continue to use Senate stationery and has been sending out franked letters in a lobbying campaign against the proposed Columbia Valley Authority.

The Eightieth Congress, of which Dworshak was a member, officially expired last December 31. But on January 27, Dworshak circulated a letter on the letterhead of the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which he was once a member, and under his own free-postage frank, calling upon the citizens of Idaho to oppose the CVA.

"During the Eightieth Congress dominated by Republicans," said Dworshak, "there was little legislative response to such a Truman program (the Columbia Valley). However, with decisive majorities in both houses, the outlook is now entirely different.

"Early developments in the Eighty-first Congress reflect a tendency toward legislative acquiescence—probably stimulated by patronage appeal. If the President really wants the creation of a Columbia Valley Authority," continued Dworshak, "he can now command the necessary support to achieve his goal.

"Under such circumstances, opponents of CVA will be forced to act vigorously if they hope to defeat the current plan of the President for prompt legislative action."

Just how long former Senator Dworshak plans to use the prerogatives of a Senator is not known. But Democratic Senators are investigating.

NEGRO AMBASSADOR?—An undercover move is on in the State Department to appoint Ralph Bunche, the Negro diplomat, as Ambassador to Moscow . . . Two motives are behind the move: 1. Russian propaganda claims that American Negroes are lynched from every other lamppost. 2. Bunche proved himself a good diplomat under trying conditions in mediating the Palestine dispute . . . To send Bunche to Moscow, therefore, would disprove Soviet propaganda regarding the treatment of Negroes in the United States, and would reward him for his Palestine achievements . . . The plan may be blocked in higher quarters, but in any event Bunche will get some kind of a promotion.

Backstage Diplomacy—Austria has protested to the United States against the American policy of getting chummy with Yugoslavia in order to secure an Austrian peace treaty. Foreign Minister Karl Gruber has emphatically rejected a so-called compromise which would have set up an autonomous republic in the Austrian Province of Carinthia. This scheme was hatched at London by Sam Reber, the American delegate to the Austrian Treaty Conference, and Alex Bebler, the Yugoslav Foreign Minister. In turning down the plan, Austria reminded the United States that it pledged to guarantee Austria's present frontiers.

The Diplomatic Pouch

TWO ATOMIC ENERGY scientists have been sent to Mexico City to investigate reports that a small cylinder of uranium was discovered strapped to the leg of a young Mexican. Mexico City is reported to be the center of a thriving uranium black market, but apparently no atomic secrets are involved . . . Winston Churchill will make the most important speech in history on the atomic bomb—in Boston April 1 . . . The State Department is laying its plans secretly but efficiently to resume full diplomatic relations with Franco. Paul Culbertson, United States Chargé d'Affaires in Madrid, is being called home to mastermind the strategy . . . The real inside about Dictator Peron's application for a United States loan was that Herbert Gaston, chairman of the Export-Import Bank, would have nothing to do with it. Despite Harry Vaughan's medal, Gaston promptly ruled that Argentina was not a good credit risk . . . Jack McCloy, president of the World Bank, was somewhat more amenable to Argentine loan suggestions, though it looks as if the World Bank wouldn't tumble for Peron, either.

Backstage With the Filibuster

BOTH SIDES in the Senate are maneuvering to bring the new 64-vote rule to a test.

Southerners have let it be known they won't fight too vigorously against an antipoll tax law, but will oppose to their last breath a fair employment practices act. Therefore Republicans are angling to bring up the antipoll tax—to prove that their compromise rule will work. Administration Democrats, on the other hand, are trying to bring up fair employment—to prove that it won't.

Meanwhile, here is the inside story on how a phony peace feeler to end the filibuster kept Administration Democrats from ending it before it ever came to a vote.

By this clever strategy, a showdown was held off until the GOP-Dixie coalition could bring up its compromise. This was the compromise by which 64 Senators must sign a cloture petition before debate can be cut off. Truman Democrats charge that it is next to impossible to muster 64 votes against a controversial issue, and that the new rule has put the Senate in a worse straitjacket than ever.

The truth is that this GOP-Dixie compromise would never have some to a vote if Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas hadn't been misled, and if the coalition hadn't thrown out its phony peace feeler.

Crowded by a backlog of legislation and unable to come to terms with the Southerners, Lucas was ready to throw in the towel. He intended to drop the filibuster, wipe the legislative slate clean and start over again at a later date.

But at the last minute he got a peace feeler via quiet-spoken Rules Chairman Carl Hayden of Arizona. Hayden reported that he had received word from Michigan's Senator Vandenberg that Senator Byrd of Virginia, cospokesman for the South, was ready to give in. Byrd would agree, Lucas was told, to shutting off debate by a simple two-thirds vote—with one exception, that any further tightening of the rules would require 64 votes.

So Lucas held off his motion to take up other business, thereby dropping the filibuster—a motion which the South in the end would have been obligated to support. Instead, he agreed to another recess. But when Lucas met with Republican and Southern leaders next day, Byrd claimed he had been misunderstood. This gave the Republicans and Southern Democrats time to continue the filibuster and work out the compromise solution.

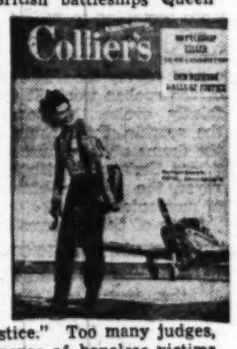
AN ITALIAN naval exploit of December, 1941, comes to light for the first time in Collier's. It is the story (told by Burke Wilkinson) of the successful invasion of Alexandria Harbor by Italian torpedo men and how they sank the British battleships Queen Elizabeth and Valiant and a tanker.



The wreckage accomplished that night by six Italian torpedo men could have had far-reaching effects. When the two British battleships shuddered under the blasts, the Axis gained overwhelming naval superiority in the Mediterranean, gun for gun, for the moment.

It meant the Italian navy could safely carry supplies to the troops of Rommel in Africa—had the Axis known. The torpedo men were taken prisoner and the secret was kept. The Italian high command concluded that the daring attempt had failed.

Collier's also comes up with the first part of a two-part article by Morton Sonthelmer on "Our Reeking Halls of Justice." Too many judges, says the author, try for laughs at the expense of hopeless victims of circumstances, while others "seem to revel in gutter talk."

Most authorities believe in sterilization only after every avenue of treatment and training has been exhausted. Pesent laws vary widely, but some are scandalously inexplicit about who can be sterilized and who is to make the decision, Miss Stern shows.

Matter of Fact

Taft Betting on GOP Orthodoxy

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

THE simple act of turning to page 169 of the Congressional Directory is enough to disclose one of the really significant political facts of the moment. Senator Robert A. Taft is up for reelection in 1950.

The directory does not add that the Senator's opponent will probably be Ohio's appealing and progressive Democratic Governor, Frank Lausche, but that is also worth remembering.

Such coming events commonly cast their shadow before in rather trivial ways. Congressional fencebuilding is a homely, often inglorious and seldom earth-shaking activity, having mainly to do with patronage and pork. In this case, however, the policy of the Eighty-first Congress and the future of the Republican Party are both certain to be intimately affected by Senator Taft's oncoming fight to hold his seat.

As for the Eighty-first Congress, it is dominated by the restored coalition of Southerners and conservative Republicans; and the coalition is dominated in turn by Senator Taft, whose superior industry, strength of character and ability daily increase his hold over his like-minded colleagues. The Senator would not be human if he did not trim his sails, which are also the sails of the coalition, with the 1950 election always in his mind. He is frankly doing so, and on a particularly interesting principle.

Why Dewey Lost

THE principle is simply that the last election did not represent a popular protest against the "worthless, do-nothing Eightieth Congress," and that Dewey could have won by campaigning as Senator Taft himself would have campaigned. Taft has elaborate figures to explain away the fact that Dewey ran far ahead of his ticket in the crucial States of Ohio and Illinois, although Governor Herbert, Governor Green and Senator C. Wayland Brooks all loudly took their stand as Republican conservatives.

As far as foreign policy is concerned, Taft's personal effort in this new Congress will be largely a rearguard action—he is demanding a cut of only one billion dollars in the ERP—unless he gets drawn into the fight against sending arms to Western Europe. As usual, his main scene of action will be domestic policy. And here he feels very confident he will be able to put his own program through.

Fairly thorough modification, but emphatically no repeal, of the Taft-Hartley Act is the main point on the program. The Democratic leadership already privately concedes that Taft has the votes to win this one..

For the rest, Taft hopes to pass his own housing act, to secure acceptance of a moderate plan for aid to education, and to do something, again rather moderate, about minimum wages. He is determined to ignore completely President Truman's requests for new taxes and economic controls.

He's Following Through

IN ACCORDANCE with the Taft principle above stated, this represents no more than the completion of the job Taft undertook when the Republicans carried the House and Senate in 1946. The voters may think the Eighty-first Congress a little different from the Eightieth. It will deal with more welfare legislation and be a little less of a lobbyists' carnival ground. But it is still true that where many Senators would have run hard for cover after the voting last November 2, Taft is standing pat.

Since President Truman won the election by a slender margin and then threw away the initiative with both hands, it is only queer, and not at all surprising, that Taft should lead this Congress. What is much more interesting is the fact, frankly acknowledged by Taft himself, that "1952 will depend on 1950."

In other words, in Ohio in the Taft-Lausche contest, and to a lesser degree in the other States where there are other contests, the voters will at last be squarely presented with the issue Dewey agilely ducked. Dewey merely stood for "unity"—a singularly misty concept. But now the voters will be bluntly asked whether they are for or against Republican orthodoxy, isolationism included. This is what Senator Taft consciously desires.

The Keystone Contest

OBVIOUSLY, Taft will be the central figure in this drama. If he is beaten as a result of the record the Eighty-first Congress, stand-pat Republican orthodoxy will instantly cease to be a serious political factor. If he wins, on the other hand, he quite clearly means to have a fourth try for the Republican presidential nomination. And since the majority of organization Republicans share his view that Truman's victory was Dewey's fault, he will have a good chance of geting the prize he has sought so often.

In the sleazy aftermath of the Truman triumph, it begins to seem like a good idea to find out what American politics is all about. At any rate, what Senator Taft is doing will give us this sadly needed item of information.

Looking at the South

'Double Feature' Fights Syphilis

By Hodding Carter

WITHIN the next few months a half million or more Mississippi Negroes will see a double feature movie and receive comic books, all free of charge.

The twin movie bill consists of a boogie-woogie musical short and a less entertaining but more instructive film entitled, "Feeling All Right." The boogie-woogie is a come-on, but the latter two attractions are part of the State board of health's comprehensive campaign against syphilis which infects an estimated 20 per cent of the Negroes of Mississippi.

It's a unique program. The movie was made in our country with an all-local Negro cast, and it is acted with a realism and simplicity that makes it far more effective than a Hollywood production. I won't give away its plot nor that of the comic book, but their themes are identical, and they make crystal clear the causes, the effects and the proper treatment of syphilis.

'Bad Blood Spies'

IT IS improbable that as extensive a campaign against syphilis is being waged anywhere else in the Nation. The movies and the comic book are only one maneuver in this campaign. Mobile blood testing units are touring the Mississippi counties and health department representatives—whom the Negroes call "bad blood spies"—are ferreting out infected persons and seeing to it that they go to one of the State's five rapid treatment clinics.

There is no charge for transportation, food, lodging or treatment during the six-day period at the clinics, which have been in existence for some six years. The principal difficulty heretofore has been to educate the Negroes as to the dangers of the disease, and to overcome the general public's indifference or prudery. That's where the movie and Little Willie come in.

And if looks now as if they'll do the job. Our county will be the first in which the movie will be shown and already 50 schools, churches and commercial theaters have been signed up. The comic book already has had a wide distribution and a copy will be given additionally to everyone who attends. The mobile unit, which has gone into eight counties thus far, is now in our county, where it is expected that at least 30,000 citizens of both races will voluntarily take the tests.

The immensity of the control problem is apparent from the findings in the eight counties. The lowest rate of incidence was 18 per cent, the highest 28 per cent. But in every section converts are making the job easier by persuading their friends and relatives to go to the rapid treatment clinics.

THIS is the kind of Southern story that doesn't make the headlines, a hopeful battle against a long-disregarded scourge for which ignorance, poverty and apathy have served as deadly hand-maidens. No one is making any speeches in Congress in its favor. None of the militant critics of the South is joining in the campaign. No one included a venereal disease plank in a civil rights program.

But Little Willie and a 30-minute movie will be plugging away now in thousands of little schools and churches and theaters in Mississippi, doing first things first where they need to be done the most.

The Gallup Poll

76% of Voters Approve of Pact

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion
(Copyright, 1949, by American Institute of Public Opinion. All rights reserved.)

THE principle of the Atlantic Pact, hailed as one of the most vital steps in American diplomatic history, wins wide support in all sections of the United States.

As the text of the alliance heads for consideration in the Senate, more than seven out of every ten voters interviewed by the institute express their approval of the idea of a defense alliance between the United States and the North Atlantic countries.

The majority is larger than that favoring the Marshall Plan at the time of its adoption. The Marshall Plan was one of the most popular steps taken by our State Department in recent years.

Interviewers questioned voters representing a cross-section of all the 48 States. This issue was put to each voter:

"Do you think the United States and such countries as Canada, England, France, Norway, Holland and other North Atlantic countries, should join together in a mutual defense pact—that is, agree to come to each other's defense immediately if any of them is attacked?"

The vote follows:

Should	76%
Should not	14
No opinion	10

Making allowance for an average error of 4 percentage points in sampling survey results, the ratio of those who approve to those who disapprove would still be 4 to 1, or 72 per cent in favor to 18 per cent opposed.

The interviewing was conducted during the period March 5-15, and thus reflects opinion on the general idea of the Atlantic Pact before the text itself was made public March 18.

Midwest Agrees

WILL Senate debate on the pact stir up old isolationist sentiment around the country?

At this stage of discussion there is no evidence that the Midwestern States—once thought to be the stronghold of isolationist thinking—are less in favor of the Atlantic alliance than the rest of the country. In fact, today's poll finds the East and West Central sections voting about the same as the rest of the country.

Today's survey finds all sections approving the principle of the alliance by a vote of better than 3-to-1, as the following table shows:

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opin.
N. Eng. & Mid. Atl.	74%	15%	11%
E. Cent. & W. Cent.	78	15	7
South	63	20	17
Far West	85	9	6

Thus far the discussion of the pact has shown little tendency to follow political party lines. In today's survey the persons who voted for Governor Dewey have approximately the same attitude toward the issue as those who voted for President Truman.

The vote follows:

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opin.
Truman voters	80%	12%	8%
Dewey voters	77	16	7

Voters of all education levels support the idea, although those who have had college training are somewhat less favorable than others.

The vote by education follows:

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opin.
College	71%	22%	7%
High School	75	16	9
Grade School	78	10	12

English Alliance

THE idea of a defense alliance in peacetime has appealed to the average voter for a long time.

As early as September, 1943, an institute survey found more than six out of every 10 voters in favor of establishing a mutual defense alliance with England after the war.

After the Marshall Plan went into effect, discussion arose over the possibility of a military alliance between the United States and the nations participating in the Marshall Plan.

The public's reaction to this idea, a forerunner of the Atlantic Pact, was first tested in May, 1948. Nearly two out of every three voters expressed approval.

Here is the trend of opinion on an alliance with the Marshall Plan countries:

"Do you think the United States and all the Western European countries participating in the Marshall Plan should join together in a permanent alliance—that is, agree to come to each other's defense immediately if any one of them is attacked?"

	Approve	Disapprove	No Opinion
May, 1948	65%	21%	14%
Dec., 1948	68	19	13
Feb., 1949	67	16	17

Soviets Decree Better Movies

MOSCOW (AP).—The Soviet motion picture industry has now been working for several months under a new system. The Soviet government ordered it to produce fewer but better pictures.

In the early part of the year film studios produced some cinemas which were criticized by Soviet reviewers as not up to the standards set for artistic works by the Communist Party.

While the full text of the revised cinema plan has not been published, some of its aspects can be discovered by attention to new films. In the first place, Soviet films, it was apparently decided, must deal predominantly with contemporary issues and subjects.

Most important, each Soviet film must from the point of view of the Communist Party and the Soviet government be ideologically positive. It must be a film which will inspire members of the Communist Party and ordinary Soviet citizens to great accomplishments, to patriotic feats, and increase their faith in and admiration for the Soviet system.

Third, the film must be technically of high quality.

Fourth, it must be assured the largest possible audience. This means it must be advertised.

Plight of Nation's Mayors

Rural Tail Is Wagging City Dog

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A DELEGATE at last week's United States Conference of Mayors meeting here defined in these blunt terms the problem of the Nation's big cities:

"We don't want any damned State Legislature to get between us and the Federal Treasury."

The strange looking map accompanying this story illustrates part of the reason. It shows that this is predominantly an urban Nation. Yet the 59 per cent of our population which huddles close together elects only 25 per cent of the members of our 48 State Legislatures.

The result: city problems have tough sledding at State capitols where rural legislators rule. Under our Constitution, State governments are supreme over local governments. A city cannot tax or spend or do anything else without sanction of the State.

Bypass 'Enemies'

TODAY'S population distribution makes this setup an anachronism, a holdover from horse and buggy days. Many cities are more important than the States in which they are located and the boundaries between cities and adjoining communities are highly artificial.

As a result, the cities try an end run around the State capitols, which are firmly in the hands of their "enemies." The cities go to the Federal Government for help. This help they have been getting in increasing measure—for housing, roads, airports and many another project.

The mayors who met here last week passed a batch of resolutions, practically all of which called on Washington for help: a larger share of Federal highway funds, money to build new schools, enactment of the Fair Deal slum clearance and low-cost housing program, advance planning on public works projects, extension of financial aid for private rental housing builders, extension of rent controls.

In none of these fields can the cities count on the rural-dominated State Legislatures for help, or certainly for enough help. Only the Federal Government has the taxing power to pay the bill and the inclination to help.

Lopsided Legislatures

THE United States Senate, as is rather well known, is in effect, a system of over-representation for the sparsely populated areas of the Nation. But here are less well known and shocking figures given by the mayors' conference for some of our key communities:

In New Jersey, eight urban counties with four fifths of the State's population have 8 State Senators. The 13 rural counties with one fifth the population have 13 Senators.

In California, Los Angeles County, with 39 per cent of the State's population, has 2½ per cent of the State Senators.

In Michigan, Wayne County (Detroit), with 40 per cent of the State's population, has 27 per cent of the lower house membership.

In Illinois, Cook County (Chicago), with 51 per cent of the population, has 37 per cent of the Legislature's membership.

In Maryland, Baltimore, with 47 per cent of the population, has 29 per cent of the Legislature's membership—6 of 29 to the upper house, 36 of 120 in the lower.

Hits 84 Million

WHAT started out in our early history, the mayors' conference declares, "as a little under-representation, a minor slight to a small urban minority, has become today a gross injustice to 84,000,000 people"—the present urban population.

The only way to alter this "under-representation" is for the State Legislatures themselves to reapportion their own seats. But, since an elementary rule of politics is that those holding power do not easily surrender it, progress by this route is extremely slow.

Instead, the Nation's mayors, the heads of our urban centers, come to Washington for help. To them the old arguments about States' rights hold little water when the States, in turn, won't give the cities enough "rights."

It is very likely, politics and local government being what they are in this country, that the mayors will continue to get a better reception in Washington than in their own State capitals.

The 'Bottom' Boasts A Picturesque Past

nickel fare. It was a period when kids still yelled "Git a horse" at the drivers of primitive automobiles, and when everybody stared aloft at the incredible sight of an airplane.

Lamplighters — usually fast-walking Italians with small ladders—were still commonplace. So were pink-eyed fighting dogs, peg-leg trousers and women's dresses that trailed in the dust. The high cost of living seemed to have arrived with a vengeance when the Circle Theater opened at 2105 Pennsylvania ave., and charged 10 cents admission.

In those days, the older men in the neighborhood still referred to the area as the "First Ward"—a hangover from the time when Washington voted for city officials. Policemen wore helmets (black in the winter, gray in the summer) and knee-length coats. They carried long night sticks and had plenty of provocation to use them.

One of the best known cops in the city was a mounted officer named Pat Creigh, sometimes called the "Mayor of Foggy Bottom." He had a horse which had been trained to break up crowds, and also to use its teeth to hold a prisoner by the coat collar.

A contemporary of Creigh's was James R. Stringfellow, who patrolled the Bottom on a bicycle. He is now a Secret Service agent at the White House.

'Foreigners' Discouraged

LIKE MOST of Washington's neighborhoods at the time, the Bottom was clannish. It took a brave lad indeed to go calling on a girl down there if he hailed from Swampoodle, Mount Pleasant or some other section. Some one-time dudes like George Durno now boast that they did go calling there, but their talk isn't convincing. A stranger usually was told to "trot," and trot he usually did.

The Bottom youngsters had various ways of earning money—carrying market baskets, selling or delivering newspapers (all of which then sold for a penny on weekdays, 5 cents on Sunday) and hustling extras on the occasion of something like the Titanic disaster. But the bonanza came on Easter Monday when the White House grounds were thrown open for the traditional egg-rolling.

Adults could not get into the grounds unless they were accompanied by children. The boys from the gashouse district solved this by allowing themselves to be adopted for a fee. A score or so trips through the White House gates, holding hands with adults willing to pay 25 cents a head, ran into important money.

If Foggy Bottom was tough, it was also religious. The area abounded in churches. Bearded rabbis moved from one Jewish home to another on Saturdays. On Sunday evening the melodious voices of Negro evangelists could be heard for blocks. Catholic boys who missed mass at St. Stephen's, in the days when Father (later Monsignor) Joseph H. Cassidy was pastor, had difficulty, sometimes, in getting their more devout pals to even talk to them.

The section produced a notable heavyweight prizefighter in Marty Gallagher, who won a knockout victory over beefy Tony Galento. Marty was a teetotaler and a nonsmoker. Bee Bee Washington, the Negro middleweight, is a more recent Foggy Bottom product. In an earlier day, the section had a good marathon runner in Jim Mahoney.

Judge Nathan Cayton, chief judge of the Municipal Court of Appeals, came out of the Bottom. So did Jimmy Kirkland, the lawyer, and a number of other professional men. The majority of the boys, however, learned trades, and, like their fathers before them, played their part in the building of Washington.

Aegis of Lincoln

FOGGY BOTTOM really began to look up when Congress, in 1913, chose its southern reaches as the site for the Lincoln Memorial. There was a furious battle over this location, one argument being that it was too lonely, too isolated. The cornerstone was laid in 1915, and the shrine was dedicated in 1922.

In the years since Congress battled over that, there have been amazing changes in the region. Government buildings have sprung up, and also apartment houses and such handsome structures as the new George Washington University Hospital. Constitution ave. has been laid out and adorned with handsome buildings. Potomac Park has been linked with Rock Creek Park by one of the most beautiful driveways in the world.

And now the gas tanks are going, thanks to the action of the Washington Gas Light Co., in switching over from manufactured to natural gas. Whether this ground will be given over to "luxury type" apartments, or will be developed by the Government, remains to be seen. At any rate, Uncle Sam has in mind something grand for this general area—something that is now merely on paper and is called the Potomac Shores Group.

Truly, then, Foggy Bottom is a neighborhood with a future as well as a past. Who knows? Some day a treaty may come out of the State Department and go down in history as "The Pact of Foggy Bottom."

German System Of Civil Service Is Caste-Ridden

BERLIN (AP).—Germany's caste-bound civil service system is due for a shakeup in the American zone, but officials are finding the going tedious. Dr. E. H. Litchfield, director of the civil administration division, American Military Government, admits the problem is knotty.

"We are trying to democratize a system established in the time of Frederick the Great and which continued in force until the end of World War II," he said.

Originally, Litchfield said, the German civil service system was set up as an exclusive organization for members of the better families.

To be a member of the "Beamte," the elite group which exercised autocratic control over the system, an individual had to be specially trained in special schools.

Hitler played along with the "Beamte" members and used them, Litchfield adds. "This civil service caste group literally ran the public machine," he continued, "and they ran it the way they wanted to."

The United States authorities have been trying for nearly a year to adopt a new civil service code embracing American-instituted reforms. So far nothing has been done.

"It isn't a question of opposition," Litchfield says, "but rather they don't seem to be able to understand the true concept of civil service."

Litchfield says there has been no change in the American Military Government's insistence on a democratic policy and said there will be none. If the Germans continue to move slowly or haltingly, he intimated, the United States Military Government may be forced to more direct action.

Churchill's Best

Eloquence Suffers in Cold Type

By Frank L. Dennis

MAXIMS AND REFLECTIONS. Selected utterances from the writings of Winston S. Churchill, by Colin Coote and Denzil Batchelor. Houghton, Mifflin. 176 pp. $2.75.

OF ALL his splendid qualities, none has been greater than Winston Churchill's matchless ability to imbue others with his thoughts and emotions.

His eloquence includes the power to explain when explanation is vital, to persuade when persuasion is necessary, and to inspire when inspiration is crucial.

Only Shakespeare certainly, and Lincoln possibly, has so supremely utilized the capabilities of the English tongue.

This volume is a skillful compilation of the best of Churchill. Each quotation is followed by a laconic note fixing it in time and place and pertinence. It is a reminder that one of the rewards of living in this generation is to have been a contemporary of Churchill, whether an admirer or not.

The authors have classified the quotations in convenient divisions according to subject.

The only real defect is the limitations of print. Cold type cannot convey the true eloquence of the spoken word. It can only faintly evoke the somberness, the sparkle, the lurking humor, the drama of the Churchill tone, whose timbre so faithfully conveyed the varying atmospheres of momentous times.

Some of the passages follow:

ON THE BRITISH PEOPLE

WE HAVE not journeyed across the centuries, across the oceans, across the mountains, across the prairies, because we are made of sugar candy.

ON RAMSAY MacDONALD

WE KNOW that he has, more than any other man, the gift of compressing the largest amount of words into the smallest amount of thought.

ON BERNARD SHAW

IF THE truth must be told, our British island has not had much help in its troubles from Mr. Bernard Shaw. When nations are fighting for life, when the palace in which the jester dwells not uncomfortably is itself assailed, and everyone from prince to groom is fighting on the battlements, the jester's jokes echo only through deserted halls, and his witticisms and condemnations, distributed evenly between friend and foe, jar the ear of hurrying messengers, of mourning women and wounded men. The titter ill accords with the tocsin, or the motley with the bandages.

ON SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS

NEITHER of his colleagues can compare with him in that acuteness of energy of mind with which he devotes himself to so many topics injurious to the strength and welfare of the state.

ON RUSSIA

RUSSIA is a riddle wrapped in mystery inside an enigma.

ON TROTSKY

IN THE deepest depth he sought with desperate energy for a deeper. But—poor wretch—he had reached rock bottom. Nothing lower than the Communist criminal class could be found.

ON PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

THAT great man whom destiny has marked for this climax of human fortune.

ON THE PROSPECT OF WAR

DEATH stands at attention, obedient, expectant, ready to serve, ready to sheer away the peoples en masse; ready . . . to pulverize, without hope of repair, what is left of civilization. He awaits only the word of command. He awaits it from a frail, bewildered being, long his victim, now—for one occasion only—his Master.

ON DUNKIRK

WARS are not won by evacuations.

ON BRITAIN

WE SHALL not flag or fail. We shall go on to the end. We shall fight in France, we shall fight on the seas and oceans, we shall fight with growing confidence and growing strength in the air We shall defend our island, whatever the cost may be. We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills. We shall never surrender; and even if, which I do not for a moment believe, this island or a large part of it were subjugated and starving, then our Empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British fleet, would carry on the struggle, until, in God's good time, the New World, with all its power and might, steps forth to the rescue and the liberation of the old.

ON EUROPEAN AFFAIRS

SKELETONS with gleaming eyes and poisoned javelins glare at each other across the ashes and rubble heaps of what was once the august Roman Empire.

ON POLAND

THERE are few virtues which the Poles do not possess and there are few errors they have ever avoided.

ON PREPAREDNESS

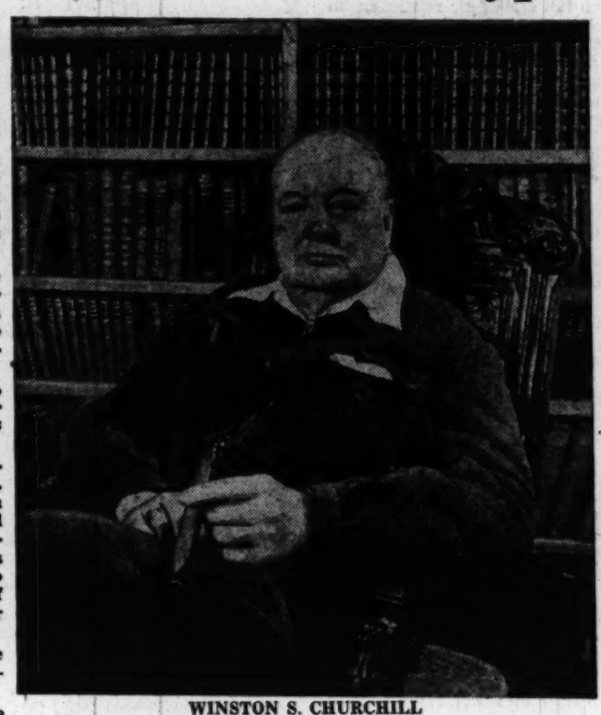
IT is better to be frightened now than killed hereafter.

ON BEING BOMBED

LEARN to get used to it. Eels get used to skinning.

ON THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN

NEVER in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few.



WINSTON S. CHURCHILL
. . . Explains, persuades, inspires

ON HIS POLICY AS PRIME MINISTER

I WOULD say to the House, as I said to those who have joined this government: "I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat." . . . You ask: "What is our policy?" I will say: "It is to wage war by sea, land and air with all our might, and with all the strength that God can give us: to wage war against a monstrous tyranny, is our policy. You ask: "What is our aim?" I can answer in one word: "Victory!" Victory at all costs, victory in spite of all terror, victory however long and hard the road may be; for without victory there is no survival.

ON BRITISH DUTY

IF we can stand up to him (Hitler) all Europe may be free and the life of the world may move forward into broad, sunlit uplands . . . Let us, therefore, brace ourselves to our duties, and so bear ourselves that, if the British Empire and its Commonwealth last for a thousand years, men will say: "This was their finest hour."

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

MAYBE it isn't true that every man has at least one book in him, but Ellery Sedgwick, former editor of the Atlantic Monthly, in the current number of the Library of Congress Quarterly Journal tells the story of a centuries-old "boy" who literally did.

The book in question is a rare copy of a Buddhist classic, "The Wonderful Law of the Lotus Sutra," printed about 1160 A. D., probably at Hangchow, China.

On a visit to Japan in 1930, Sedgwick visited the great center of Buddhist art, Nara, which was the capital in the eighth century. There he was impressed by a wooden statue of a praying boy saint, Shotoku Taishi, Great Teacher of Divine Virtue.

Six years later he again visited Nara, and found the cherubic little statue gone. Querying the Japanese art dealer Yamanaka about it, Sedgwick was shown a statue which the astute dealer refused to say was either the original or an imitation.

Sedgwick bought the statue, which is now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. When it had been in the museum two years, it was discovered that it "rustled."

Treating idols like cornerstones was an old Oriental custom, and this little statue put up in a Nara temple in 1292 was no exception. Inside were bits of writing, several miniature deities and the "Lotus Sutra," which Sedgwick has given to the Library of Congress.

REPRINTING of "Eisenhower Was My Boss," by Kay Summersby, in Dell's pocket editions, brings to mind the sour review the book received in The (London) Times Literary Supplement last month.

At the risk of quoting out of context: "This book has little to do with General Eisenhower. It is a success story cut to the pattern of this decade—the simple tale of a European girl who wanted to get to the United States . . . Indeed, this book has one distinction; it is, up to date, the least attractive book written about the war . . . She reserves none of her compliments for Field Marshal Montgomery."

WAC Captain Summersby concluded her book by describing General Eisenhower as having at the war's end "become the world's most famous and honored general."

The Missing 400,000

FIRST LIEUT. WILLARD SAVOY, USAF, of 3811 Jay st. ne., is the author of a first novel, "Alien Land,' to be published by Dutton April 6.

Savoy—who attended Howard, Fiske and the University of Wisconsin, and who describes his education as "itinerant," is working on another novel.

Of "Alien Land," he says that his story of a Negro who passes the color line to live as a white man had its genesis when he learned several years ago that "there was a loss of some 400,000 Negroes, or persons described as Negroes on their birth certificates, and the records did not show that they had emigrated or died.

"I wanted to tell in my book the force that made them go, and the force that seemed to be at the root of all our troubles today. My conclusion, after a lot of thinking, was that it took a considerable force to make a person give up all his previous experience and begin anew."

The "rustle" inside the statue of Shotoku Taishi was a Buddhist classic printed about 1160 A.D.

A Timely Symposium

Information Can Fill A Foreign Policy Role

By J. R. Wiggins

PUBLIC OPINION AND FOREIGN POLICY. By Lester Markel. Harper. $3.50.

THIS foreign policy symposium could not have been released at a more appropriate time.

The theme of this collaborative effort is borrowed from a statement by Francis Russell of the State Department, which the authors quote:

"If the Department of State is to fully represent the American people, a far greater number of Americans than in the past must individually inform themselves on foreign affairs, think through their decisions, and make their views known."

At the moment of issue the State Department, as though tardily heeding the injunction, is hastening to inform the American people about the Atlantic Pact.

Only 14 out of 100 Americans could explain the purpose of the Marshall Plan when it was adopted, according to the authors of this book. We ought to get a better score on the pact.

Job for Public

TO GET it, the nine contributors to this study have a lot of suggestions. They want better schools and colleges, better press and radio and better Government information operations.

So far as the press and radio are concerned, that, in their view, is mostly up to readers and listeners. It is in the area of Government information they have most to suggest.

They would start at the beginning and have the information officers of State Department in on policy decisions and discussions. Then they would give the Assistant Secretary of State in charge of information a better and bigger staff.

They point to the million persons engaged in propaganda work inside Russia; to the 210 hours weekly Soviet short wave broadcast to Europe alone. They find that "the sums which Congress has thus far appropriated are wholly inadequate."

A brief summary of the "propaganda" services performed by nongovernmental agencies of information surveys the press wire services, newspapers and periodicals circulated abroad, motion pictures sent abroad, books for foreign markets. They would like to have private enterprise develop "an increased awareness of international responsibility."

Recognition First

VIEWS of all the contributors are summarized by Lester Markel, Sunday Editor of the New York Times. He sees as primary needs:

1. Recognition of the importance of the public opinion operation.

2. More effective Government information programs at home and abroad.

3. More representative news and information in private agencies operating abroad.

4. Better coordination in all information efforts.

5. Concentration of functions of informational intelligence and information dissemination in a single Assistant Secretary of State.

6. More leadership attention to public opinion factors.

7. A foreign policy supported at home and accepted abroad as well-motivated.

Insidious Affliction

THIS is a worthwhile contribution to discussion of this country's information effort in the foreign policy field. The case for a more aggressive and better directed program certainly is not overstated. At some points the authors themselves exhibit the same gingerly timidity for which they condemn the rest of the country.

The book emphasizes anew the strange reluctance of a people who have excelled all others in disseminating information about commodities to plunge into an aggressive program to distribute information about ideas. After all this time, American efforts in the field are still tentative, indecisive, apologetic and unsure.

A Long Conversation With Shaw

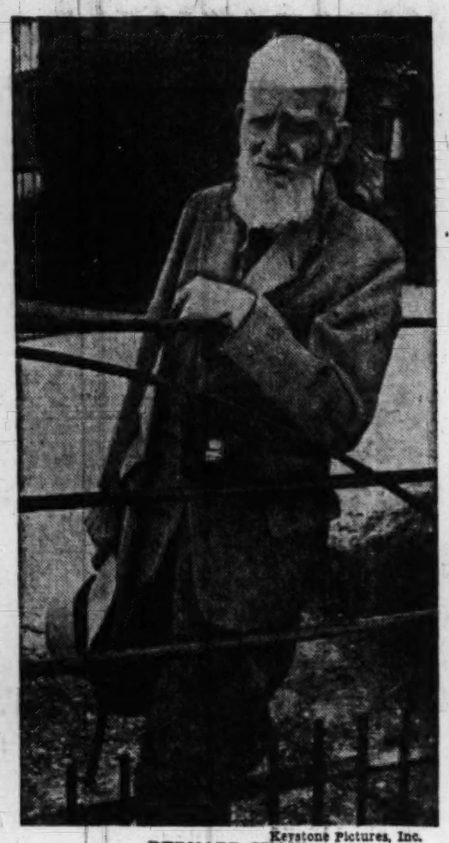
By Richard L. Coe

DAYS WITH BERNARD SHAW. By Stephen Winsten. Vanguard Press. 327 pp. $3.75.

A WASHINGTONIAN can hardly say that conversation is a lost art, though precisely what kind of conversation may have to be strictly qualified. In the British hamlet of Ayot St. Lawrence, conversation of high, stimulating order has been going on for some years between an astute philosopher, his artist wife and one of the most provocative men of the century, Bernard Shaw. ("The name George has a bad sound," said G. B. S. "I don't like it. I tried to discard it long ago.")

The philosopher-neighbor is Stephen Winsten, the artist his wife, Clare, and it is indeed fortunate that so worthy a Boswell has been on such neighborly terms with G. B. S.

The playwright-philosopher-prophet has been in the habit of dropping in on the Winstens at all hours, going for walks with him and admiring Clare's artistry to such a degree that, at his own suggestion, she made busts of him and St. Joan (for his garden) and painted him. Obviously there's trust and respect between these three.



Keystone Pictures, Inc.

BERNARD SHAW
. . . "The name George has a bad sound"

A Lonely Old Man

WINSTEN EVIDENTLY has kept careful notes of their conversations and the result is like a long, scattered interview on all manner of topics, though one would like to know more of Winsten himself. Open "Days With Bernard Shaw" at any page and you find yourself in the midst of stimulating talk in which, somehow, you manage to edge in a word of your own now and again.

The Shaw who comes through is the same contradictory mind the world has long known, hammering away at the paradoxes of life. But he also is something more: gentle, kindly, lonely in his old age. Above all, Winsten's G. B. S. is the great man the thinking world has so long admired.

"Keeping fit" is a G. B. S. fetish: he performs all kinds of exercises, washes his eyes carefully, combs his celebrated beard. Nothing is left to chance.

He has no patience with the improvident artist. "Money represents health, strength, honor, generosity, beauty as undeniably as the want of it represents illness, weakness, disgrace, meanness and ugliness. Not the least of its virtues is that it destroys base people as certainly as it fortifies and dignifies noble people."

Substitute for Sex Appeal

"YOU MUST understand that people who understand nothing about art, and that is the very vast majority, judge a thing by its cost and the cost of the film ('Caesar and Cleopatra') will determine its popularity. You see, there is no sex appeal in my film and we have to make up for it by tonloads of sand and appealing sphinxes and great crowds. The Muddleditch Repertory could never afford such things. If I were starting my dramatic career again, I would run to every extravagance in production and stop at nothing, because I know the films can go to any length, anywhere and everywhere."

He's practical about his will and gives it great thought, and he remarks that "I have been living the simple life for years, but I had to marry money to do it."

He shoots off all manner of nuggets: "Dare to tell the truth and you are at once accused of being an outrageous liar.". "I am expecting a visitor . . . The trouble about her is that she lacks the power of conversation but not the power of speech." "Marriages should be prohibited to people in love. Marriage is a partnership of equals if you like, but let love come between them and all is lost." "Quotation is the homage paid by the ignorant to wisdom."

Which is an appropriate place to close a review of this latest addition to Shaviana, an exhilarating visit with a man of 92 who relishes each day the passion for learning, be it how to prune a tree or how to bring peace to a neighboring factory.

Enthusiasts Cut Loose

Fuel for a Quiz Show Or Political Palaver

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

NEW COMPASS OF THE WORLD: A Symposium on Political Geography. Edited by Hans W. Weigert, Vilhjalmur Stefansson and Richard Edes Harrison. 365 pages with index and 22 maps. Macmillan, $5.50.

THIS collection of 23 papers on geography and world politics is as fascinating as its publishers claim it to be. For one thing, it is a gold mine of information not usually found in a single volume. An attentive and retentive reader could use it to stump the experts on a quiz program.

What, for example, is the biggest city north of the Arctic Circle? What is the key spot on the Danube for building a dam to harness waterpower? Has uranium been discovered in the Antarctic? What strategic materials can we get from India? Why is Stalin more conscious of the Far North and its possibilities than, for example, Harry Truman? (The answer, in case you don't know, is that Stalin spent years of exile in the Arctic, and Truman didn't.)

Apart from its facts and figures, the book contains some well-written and well-reasoned discussions of important political subjects. The best of the lot, in this layman's opinion, is a chapter by Robert J. Kerner of the University of California on the Soviet Union as a sea power. Professor Kerner thinks that "it will take decades for the U.S.S.R. to catch up with its size," and that unless the atomic bomb, air power and submarine totally revolutionize warfare, "an isolated U.S.S.R. cannot for years fight a successful world war." Excellent maps by Richard Edes Harrison show to what extent the Soviet Union is an ice-locked power.

Light on Pact

A TIMELY chapter by Hans Weigert, on strategic bases, is helpful to an understanding of the islands involved in the new North Atlantic defense arrangements. Another, by that veteran geographer of North America, J. Russell Smith, argues that Asia's greatest need is not food but birth control, and that if India's food supply were increased by 50 per cent, the population of India would reach 750 million within 30 years.

The trouble with this book is that so many of its authors ride a cavalcade of hobby horses. Owen Lattimore, for example, mounts his hobby of the Yakut Republic, in the Soviet Arctic, and rides it for a fare-three-well; he spent a few days in Yakutia with Henry Wallace in 1945.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer, has traveled and lived for years in what he calls "The Friendly Arctic," and his conclusion should therefore command more respect. He contends, correctly, that the United States and Canada can learn many lessons from the Russians in the development of Arctic resources.

Yet even he goes far when he argues that "the love of Soviet women for the North is a true sign of popular enthusiasm about their frontier." The exile system in Russia has many gradations, from the "corrective" labor camps to the homes of ostensibly free men and women living in the Arctic wilderness. It would be interesting to get Stefansson's estimate of the number of Soviet Arctic citizens who are forbidden for political reasons to live in Moscow or the other leading cities.

New Underbelly

A READER in this book can sample many other enthusiasms. Thus an informative chapter on the Antarctic by Lawrence Martin, geographer of the State Department, is spoiled when its author points a trembling finger at the South Shetland Islands, "the tactical center from which an enemy might strike at Chile, at Argentina or at the Falkland Islands by surface ship, submarine or airplane." What would Dr. Martin have us do? Fortify the South Shetlands?

Disraeli once said that if you gave the generals a free hand they would fortify the moon; he might have included the political geographers. The present book restates Gen. William Mitchell's prewar dictum that "he who holds Alaska will hold the world," and General Spaatz's remark that "whoever controls the Arctic air lanes controls the world today." It echoes the shopworn thesis of Sir Halford Mackinder that "who rules eastern Europe commands the Heartland; who rules the Heartland commands the World Island."

Mackinder was sure of himself, but he never wrote anything more dogmatic than the chapter in this book by Prof. J. Wreford Watson of McMaster University at Hamilton, Ontario. "We live in a longitudinal world," he tells us, "and not, as in the past, in a latitudinal one"—whatever that may mean.

He tries to explain by saying that "the Arctic may become to the future what the Mediterranean was to the past—the axis of world power." Finally he makes everything perfectly obscure by announcing that "a polar world postulates one world."

The dazed reviewer is tempted to ask, "Who wants the polar world, anyway?" In spite of this chapter, it is an excellent book, worth reading and remembering.

Witchcraft and Water Wheels

Satiric Poet Scraps the Machine

WATCH THE NORTHWIND RISE. By Robert Graves. Creative Age Press. 290 pp. $3.

ROBERT GRAVES, like most contemporary poets, hates his own age. He has therefore frequently abandoned the present for the past in such distinguished historical novels as "I, Claudius" and "King Jesus."

ROBERT GRAVES

In his latest book, however, he escapes not into the past but into the future in a delightful, satirical Utopia which should particularly fascinate all poets, philosophers, students of witchcraft and diabolism.

That the inhabitants of "New Crete" some hundreds of years in the future could not possibly live the idyllic life here portrayed, is somewhat beside the point.

The economic system of this dream-ridden, happy, erotic, goddess-worshipping state suggests little improvement over that of China today. Having forsworn all technology beyond the water wheel and ox-drawn vehicles, and having further burdened his feudal theocracy with three comparatively idle "estates"—the captains, the recorders and the poets-witches-and-wizards—Robert Graves is hard-pressed to prove how the commoners and servants could so much as feed the community.

But more importantly, the Utopia Graves has dreamed up would not be the happy place he pictures for a purely philosophical reason. Superstition breeds distrust and hate. "Witchcraft" breeds witch-burning. Bigoted worship of even a goddess breeds cynicism and agnosticism. Passionate and static religious credos breed movements of protest and revolt.

Robert Graves hates the worship of speed, time and money in modern society, so in "New Crete" he does away with all three. No airplanes, the only train is an ox-drawn affair on ancient tracks left over from the unhappy atomic age, no calendars, no clocks and, finally, no money.

Life is one long festival. War has been sublimated. Poets have practically forsworn carnal love (alas). The good can be reborn again. And all power stems from the witch goddess, who, like so many pagan supernal beings, seems to have most of the human vices and few of the human virtues.

Unlike Plato, More, Bellamy and even Aldous Huxley, Graves refuses to come to grips seriously with problems of government and economics. This weakens an otherwise charming dream of a "happy" future world. But as a sly criticism of our own age, "Watch the Northwind Rise" has few equals.—STERLING NORTH.

Spring Book Lunch Set

A VERSATILE group of authors, who combine writing with other occupations, will be guest speakers at the spring Book and Author Luncheon sponsored by The Washington Post, to be held Wednesday, April 6. They are Vera Bloom, Alan Villiers, the Rev. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale and Lajos Zilahy.

Vera Bloom, daughter of the late Representative Sol Bloom, has composed songs in addition to writing two popular books. Miss Bloom's book, "There's No Place Like Washington," was a best-seller last year. Her new book, "The Entertaining Lady," which will be published by Putnam April 6, is a witty and informal guide to good living.

Alan Villiers has sailed most of the world's oceans in the ships of several nations. Mr. Villiers' recent book, "The Set of the Sails" (Scribner's), is his first in eight years. It chronicles almost three decades of his life at sea.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale is the pastor of Marble Collegiate Church in New York, the oldest Protestant church in America. Dr. Peale, author, lecturer and editor of "Guidepost," is one of the Nation's most effective preachers. His recent book, "A Guide to Confident Living" (Prentice-Hall), has been a top seller for the past year.

Lajos Zilahy, Central European novelist, is a relative newcomer to the United States, after years of dodging the Nazis in his native Hungary. His current best-seller, "The Dukays" (Prentice-Hall), is a dramatic account of the life of high Hungarian nobility between the world wars.

The luncheon will be held in the Presidential Room of the Hotel Statler at 1 p. m. Wednesday, April 6. Tickets, at $3 each, are on sale at the book departments of Kann's and Woodward & Lothrop and at the following book stores: Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Better Mouse Trap, Chequire House, Community Book Store, Francis Scott Key Book Store, David Pearlman's, Paul Pearlman's, Pursell's, Savile and Whyte's.

In a Nutshell

WALK THROUGH THE VALLEY, By Zelda Popkin. Lippincott. $3.

KATHERINE BREWER'S husband dies suddenly one morning, and leaves her a middle-aged, attractive and inconsolable widow with a son and daughter nearing marriageable age. This is the story of her efforts to overcome grief that is almost a disease, and to compensate for the irrecoverable happiness of her married life. It is written with feeling, but also with wit, in an over-the-back-fence sort of talk that is real and convincing. And the friends on whom Mrs. Brewer would like to lean are life-like.

EMILY WILL KNOW. By Nancy Rutledge. Crime Club. $2.25.

CHAD SEVERN is such a monster that he would have killed his own son if the baby had been old enough to know what Chad was doing when he smothered rich, old Horace Trimbal. But Emily, Chad's wife and Horace's daughter, is his only remaining difficulty, and he goes right to work on that. Miss Rutledge's handling of Chad's thought processes is faintly reminiscent of "Lost Weekend," although money is Chad's intoxicant. Emily's thought processes are explored thoroughly, too, and do they grind slowly! There's no mystery, but the author sustains the suspense right up to the last 500 words.

WE, OF THE AMERICAS. By Carlos Davila. Ziff-Davis. $3.50.

THE one-time provisional President of Chile contends that the United States is endangering the Western Hemisphere by spending billions to rebuild Europe and neglecting the development of Latin America. He urges the economic, political and military integration of the Western Hemisphere so that it may be strong enough to control world affairs instead of moving with them. But he does not suggest how that integration might be achieved.

CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS: Commentary and Documents. By Leland M. Goodrich and Edvard Hambro. 710 pp. World Peace Foundation. $4.75.

THIS edition, revised in the light of three sessions of the United Nations General Assembly, is a vast improvement over the original volume, which was necessarily theoretical about application of the Charter. This book goes into all actions taken by the U. N. or any of its organs under the 111 articles, and does it objectively. The historical material goes back to the League Covenant, and all pertinent documents are included, from the Covenant to the Charter itself. There is an excellent bibliography.

THE FREEBOOTERS. By Robert Wernick. Scribners. $3.

JOHN BLACK, a Negro soldier, and two white friends, the daft, irresponsible Dibby and the serious-minded narrator, belong to an anomalous outfit which operates in the rear somewhere in Africa, Italy and finally France. The story begins prosaically, and then wings away into the realms of wild imagination, where the real and unreal overlap. Dibby, the freebooter, is the prize of the lot, but there are other choice characters, such as Colonel Jopling, who is high-minded as long as it costs him nothing; MacPherson, who leaves spitting images of himself all across Europe, and a grand assortment of women, mostly disreputable. This is a fantastic yarn of how we didn't even try to win the war.

SPIT AND THE STARS. By Robert Mende. Rinehart. $3.50.

AT first, you don't like the title. Then you start reading about Gregg Haber, a kid of the Brooklyn slums, and his sisters, his hard-working parents, his friends Iggie, Rupturehead, Peanuts and Slim, and their girl friends. Then a brother-in-law introduces Gregg to the world of books, and he stubbornly stays in school while supporting the family with a part-time job. Finally, Dynamite and Gregg, swinging their legs over a dock edge under a sky "filthy with stars," overcome your feeling about the title. This appealing romance is reminiscent of Saroyan.

ANOTHER SUN, ANOTHER HOME. By Ruper Croft-Cooke. Holt. $3.

AFTER a long and useful life in India, Colonel Wilkes returns to London to buy a little place in the country and enjoy an idyllic retirement. In his non-combat station, at Bulapur, he had run things properly, kept his troops spic and span and won the natives' affection. But always he had yearned for English soil. Back home, he finds the old days are gone. The old pub is glaringly up to date, the country gentleman is hedged about by restrictions, inspections and other Socialist devices. Indeed, it's an effort for a man to recognize his own son. This is Rip Van Winkle in modern dress. Croft-Cooke's honest interest in his subject arouses the reader's interest, too.

THE DURABLE MONUMENT, HORATIO NELSON. By Admiral Sir W. M. James. Longmans, Green. $4.

JAMES was inspired by the experience of using Lord Nelson's old flagship as a headquarters office in World War II, to record once more the words and deeds of the half-blind admiral who spiked Napoleon's dream of conquering England. He records them briefly and simply, and slices away much silly tradition. Lady Hamilton he sees as a drag on his hero, and the cause of his few ignoble acts. But the plain truth only heightens the wonder of a man whose mere presence could turn a mutinous crew into a band of brothers.

Magic Prose From Africa

CEREMONY OF INNOCENCE, by Elizabeth Charlotte Webster. Harcourt, Brace. 248 pp. $2.75.

An enchanting piece of magic is this importation from South Africa where it won a literary prize.

The prose is of rare beauty. The theme of the novel is highly unusual and in less skillful hands would have come forth as something crude and irritating.

The story is about Syhil, the novice who joins an Anglian convent in South Africa. She possesses strange powers. She is clairvoyant. Thus she knows it is decreed that she is to mother a child, a great child.

This was the author's first novel. Some years of illness handicapped her in completing it and she died two weeks after it received the literary award.

Art Volume Skips Some Milestones

MILESTONES OF AMERICAN PAINTING IN OUR CENTURY. By Frederick S. Wight. 50 illustrations including 12 in color. Chanticleer Press. $5.

THE title of this well gotten-up little book is rather high flown, considering that there are some surprising omissions. Georgia O'Keeffe, for example, is a conspicuous absentee.

The work is the product of an exhibition organized by Frederick S. Wight of the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston, with a foreword introduction by Lloyd Goodrich, associate director of the Whitney Museum of American Art and a specialist in the history of American art. Mr. Wight presents a brief survey of American painting, beginning with the artist-reporters at the turn of the century and bringing it down to the present day.

The book contains a documented list of the 50 individual paintings chosen and there is a short biographical sketch of each artist opposite the full-page reproduction of his selected work. The book presents facts, colored with opinion, in readable style. Reproductions are good.

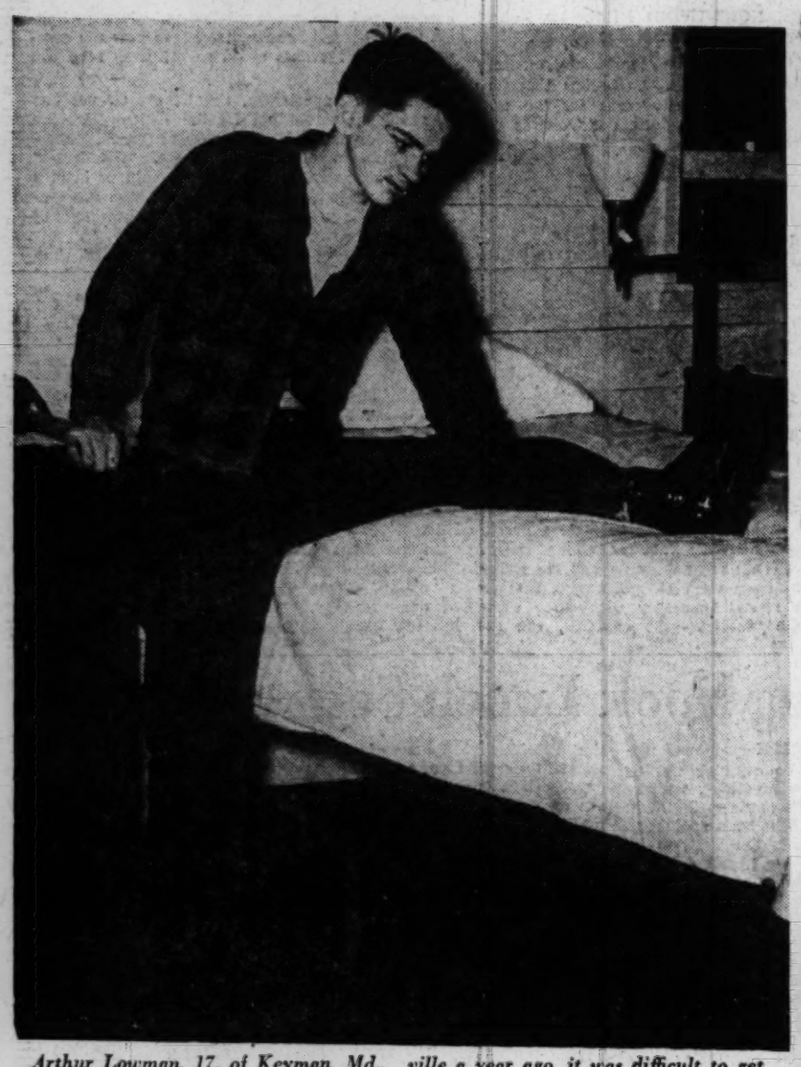
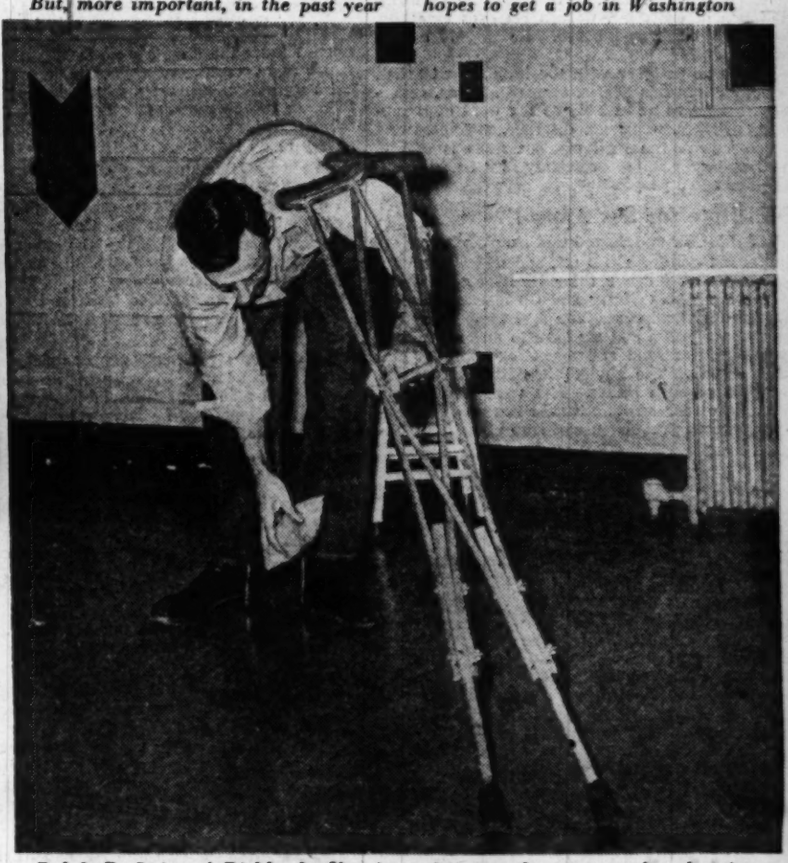
Pioneer Virginia Rehabilitation Center to Treat D. C. Disabled



Arthur Lowman, 17, of Keyman, Md., was paralyzed from the waist down when his motor scooter crashed into an auto. When he arrived at Fishersville a year ago, it was difficult to get out of bed, with help. Now he demonstrates how a trained paraplegic can get into bed, without help

Mrs. Josephine Holloman of Portsmouth, Va., is the wife of a disabled war veteran. So when she herself was paralyzed from the waist down in an auto accident a year ago, it looked bad for 4-year-old daughter Joan. So functional training for her is to learn again to do kitchen work on the crutches and long braces, which she must use as long as she lives

Alice Armes, 21, of Danville, Va., a polio victim, has learned to get about on crutches and braces after two years in a hospital and one year at the center. But, more important, in the past year she has taken a secretarial course to enable her to make a living. Miss Armes, shown taking dictation from R. H. Wilson, supervisor of training, hopes to get a job in Washington



Ralph R. Swim of Richlands, Va., is the "prize" client at Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center. Paralyzed from the waist down in a coal mine accident in 1944, he is now a trained watch repairman and even goes deer hunting. Here he demonstrates one of the most difficult feats for a paraplegic—picking up a small sandbag from a slippery floor

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON'S severely disabled citizens may soon be admitted to Virginia's pioneering State rehabilitation center, at Fishersville, it was learned yesterday.

Arrangements for such care were begun early this month by David Amato, chief of the District of Columbia Rehabilitation Service, at a regional meeting of State directors of vocational rehabilitation at the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center there.

Amato disclosed yesterday that contracts have been prepared and require only formal authorization before District patients may be entered for intensive, long-time treatment at the center. The District, he emphasized, has no comparable facility for treatment, reeducation and training of the severely crippled.

Six or nine District patients will be entered at the center before the end of next month, Amato said. Likely candidates include a young man bent almost double with arthritis, a 19-year-old youth paralyzed from the waist down by an automobile accident, and Washington's own Dorothy Kilmer, 20, similarly paralyzed when accidentally shot by a policeman last July.

Spur to Other States

THE center, which began operations some 15 months ago, has already gained national prominence in its specialized field. Its progress will be exhibited pictorially for the Nation's doctors at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association at Atlantic City in June.

A joint State-Federal presentation, the exhibit will be featured twice daily at the AMA's scientific exhibit, according to Dr. Josephine J. Buchanan, presiding medical officer for the center. Dr. Buchanan and Dr. Charles L. Newberry, assistant chief medical officer of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, Federal Security Agency, will collaborate in the AMA presentation.

Purposes of the exhibit, its sponsors said, are to stimulate other State vocational rehabilitation agencies to follow Virginia's lead in setting up a practical, inexpensive rehabilitation program in one central unit, and to show physicians just what can be done with the severely disabled through physical therapy coupled with functional job training.

The center offers most phases of physical medicine and educational services essential to carry a disabled man or woman well up the long hill from uselessness and dependency to self-sustaining employment. Major surgery and acute medical needs are not handled at the center but are provided, when needed, through special arrangements with State hospitals.

Hunts on Crutches

THE Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center is currently treating and training 120 disabled persons ranging in age from 16 to 62 years. It has a present capacity of 350 clients (the word "patients" is taboo) in its 52 buildings.

Essentially what is done at the center, Dr. Buchanan explained, is to bring to the disabled person the fullest use of his physical powers, and then provide training in suitable fields of employment.

Just a few case histories:

Ralph R. Swim of Richlands, Va., was disabled in a mining accident in 1944. His spine was snapped, and he became paraplegic. He will never walk without crutches or canes and braces, physicians have told him, but he goes deer hunting now on crutches.

Swim is now completing a watch repairing course at the center that taught him how to use those muscles he can still control. He expects to operate a trailer shop at Richlands in good weather and in Florida during the Virginia cold and snows.

Mrs. Josephine Holloman of Portsmouth, Va., is another ready testimonial-giver for the good work done at the center. An auto accident a year ago paralyzed her from the waist down. She is going through the most strenuous physical therapy, and it takes that extra dint of spirit to keep going.

These days, Mrs. Holloman is learning to walk with braces. She leans heavily on the parallel bars to keep from falling. But by this time next year she hopes to be keeping house for her disabled veteran husband and their 4-year-old daughter.

ALICE ARMES, 21, of Danville, Va., is there because polio paralyzed her five years ago. Right now she can take care of her own needs, and is finishing up a secretarial course.

"She'll be able to take a good job, and get to and from it," said Dr. Buchanan.

Frank H. Davis of Hillsville, Va., is a high double amputee—he lost both of his legs near the hips. Today, Davis sits in his wheelchair learning how to make a living as a shoe repairman.

The list could go on and on. Recently, six paraplegic miners crippled by rock and slate falls were entered at the center, beneficiaries of the United Mine Workers Welfare Fund. Seven others are scheduled to be admitted soon, fund spokesmen said.

Some 40 per cent of the clients pay part of their own way, either from savings or from money they earn in work done at the center. One source of paying work there, it was explained, is the preparatibn and printing of "Easter Seals" and accompanying brochures.

The printing is contracted for with the Virginia Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc., a charity which solicits donations through the seals, much like the tuberculosis associations sell Christmas seals.

Built by the Army

THE center comprises 52 buildings and 270 acres of land, part of the former six-million-dollar Woodrow Wilson General Hospital which was built and operated by the Army during the war. The hospital, with its 158 buildings and 400 acres of land, was turned over to the State, virtually without cost, in July, 1947. The other buildings and land are used for educational facilities, including a regional vocational school and a consolidated high school.

It is located midway between Staunton and Waynesboro, Va., and is principally supported by Federal and State funds. The center supervisor is Frank O. Birdsall, while State supervision is exercised through Corbett Reedy, director of the Virginia State Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

D. C. Restaurant Worker Has Dramatic Cloak-and-Dagger Past

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

THE man is tall and wiry, his face lean and sensitive, his thinning hair receding, and a vein stands out in his temple.

He has been an espionage agent, he tells you, and he looks the part. There are no dramatics in his precise, accented voice as he tells about his battle of wits with the Gestapo. He is very matter of fact.

His name is Erwin Schneider, he is 36, and he is now living in Washington, at 1129 New Hampshire ave. nw. He wants to become an American citizen and he wants a regular job.

Now, go back to a night more than 10 years ago, in December, 1938, when clouds misted across the face of the moon. It was the sort of night for a man to slip unseen across a frontier.

Schneider was such a man. Only then his blond hair was dyed black, he had taken the name of Harry Reiner, and he was an accredited agent of the Belgian government.

In the months that followed, he was a hare chased by the Gestapo hounds. Before the Allied armies smashed Hitler's legions, he was to experience Gestapo brutality and the concentration camp.

Floored SS Man

SCHNEIDER was born in Rodheim, Germany. He was a member of the German army when he was 16. In the army he became a radio operator and code clerk.

In 1934 he was stationed in Marburg, and there he touched off a brawl between enlisted men of the Reichswehr and SS men of the new Hitler regime.

An SS man stopped a soldier in the street and demanded he produce a pass. Schneider, in civilian clothes, was a bystander. He told the SS man to mind his own business.

"He became nasty, so I knocked him down," says Schneider.

Soon other SS men and other soldiers, about 100 in all, were fighting. The battle moved into the Marburg city hall.

Schneider says the SS men lost that engagement. Many of them were tumbled out of the second-story windows.

After the fight Schneider decided it was no longer safe for him to remain in the Reichswehr. He had been active in boxing and long distance running, so he complained of heart trouble and asked for a discharge. A doctor listened closely to his heart, and asked sharply, "What is the matter with you?"

"Nothing is the matter with me, except that I want to get out," replied Schneider. "It is the SS."

The doctor was sympathetic, and certified that Schneider had an enlarged heart.

Death Vengeance

AFTER his discharge Schneider spent several months traveling. Then, one day in September, 1934, while he was at the home of his grandparents in Rodheim, he was arrested. The policemen were in civilian clothes.

Schneider was asked if he had taken any secret papers from the army. Was he planning to leave the country? He won his release six weeks later through the efforts of a judge who had known him previously.

Schneider returned to Rodheim and found his grandmother dying. She had suffered a stroke at the time of his arrest.

"I vowed then," Schneider says, "to work against the Nazis."

His chance did not come until January, 1936, when he won an appointment to the customs service. His first assignment was near Aachen, where the borders of Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg merge.

A number of German Jews escaped into the Netherlands with Schneider's help. Then smugglers contacted Schneider. Would he help smuggle coffee into Germany? He would if they would place anti-Nazi propaganda in their shipments. They did.

One night a particularly large shipment was scheduled to cross the border. Schneider needed a confederate, so he confided in another customs agent. The agent agreed to help—then called the Gestapo. The Gestapo set a trap which misfired. Schneider escaped into the Netherlands.

The Lesser Evil

HE considered the situation. Smuggling itself would not merit too serious a penalty. But if the Gestapo learned that an anti-Nazi propaganda campaign was involved, there certainly would be retaliation against his family.

Schneider returned to Aachen, surrendered to customs officials and apparently convinced them he was guilty of nothing more serious than smuggling. He was sentenced to two years in a labor camp and fined 25,000 marks. "I never paid the fine," he says.

Schneider was nearing completion of his sentence when he learned that the Gestapo had ordered that he be returned to Aachen for further questioning. Escape became imperative. He made plans with another prisoner, but the man told camp authorities. Schneider was placed in a special detail.

This proved a blessing in disguise. Among his guards was an old army comrade. The guard showed Schneider a plan of escape. This time Schneider found another prisoner whose desire to escape was as intense as his own.

On the morning of September 28, 1938, Schneider and his companion edged near a river which ran by the place where they were working. When they were unobserved, they jumped into the river, swam around a bend and crept into the woods. They waited until dark, then "borrowed" a car and drove to Rodheim, where Schneider's grandfather supplied them with clothing and money.

Schneider knew that a careful watch would be kept along the border, so the two men drove to Berlin, then to Frankfurt, where they parted. Schneider took a room near police headquarters in Frankfurt and stayed there for several weeks.

A Job for Belgium

FROM Frankfurt, Schneider went to Aachen and stole across the border into Belgium. In Brussels he contacted a Jewish refugee he had met in the labor camp.

The refugee put Schneider in touch with the Belgian Secret Service and its chief, a figure identified by Schneider as "The Little Man." Schneider's first assignment was to return to Germany and obtain certain information.

At a little Belgian town near the border he went to a beauty shop and had his hair dyed black. That night two Belgian officers placed him in the hands of a smuggler who got him across the frontier.

Schneider's destination was Cologne. He worked closely there with another German who was an agent of the British Secret Service.

The parents of the Jewish refugee in Brussels also lived in Cologne. He called upon them one night. There were loud raps on the door and a demanding voice announced:

"This is the police. We want to talk to Erwin Schneider."

Schneider shinnied down a rainpipe from the third to the second floor and rapped on the window.

"I was repairing an antenna and the roof was wet; I slipped," he told the tenants.

He left the apartment, rode a streetcar for a block, then took a cab to the railroad station. He reached Brussels without further incident.

Handy Uncle Harry

THIS is one of the ways in which Schneider contacted his sources of information:

A man he had met in the labor camp worked in the I. G. Farben war plant in Cologne. He had a son in the German army. The father undertook to supply information about the war plant and his son obtained what information he could about the army.

When the son had information, he would use the phrase, "Greetings to Uncle Harry," in a letter home. Schneider would then telegraph the son that his wife was ill. The son would get leave, return home and pass along the information.

January, 1939, found Schneider again returning to Germany from Belgium. He was to keep a rendezvous with his friend of the British Secret Service. This time the Gestapo was waiting for him. There was an exchange of gunfire in the garden of a house just inside the German border. But it was dark and Schneider was not hit.

The following month the Gestapo arrested Schneider in a restaurant in Frankfurt. They wanted him only for crossing the border illegally. He was jailed until May, 1940.

Four months later, Schneider was again picked up by the Gestapo. There were three months of questioning and beating. Finally he was confronted with his chief, "The Little Man," who had been taken prisoner in Belgium.

"I never saw him before," the Belgian insisted at first. Finally, he admitted he had once seen Schneider in Brussels. He said Schneider had approached him and told him he wanted to get out of Europe to escape the impending war. He said he had advised Schneider to go to the Red Cross.

"Why did you give him false papers?" persisted a Gestapo questioner.

"But he didn't," Schneider interrupted. "I bought them from an agent of the Gestapo."

Schneider named a man in Brussels whom he knew to be an agent of the Gestapo. He learned later that the Gestapo arrested the man.

"They probably shot him," Schneider says simply.

Back to Aachen

SCHNEIDER was convicted of knowing foreign espionage agents and was given a three-year sentence. With time off for good behavior, he was released in November, 1943. But the Gestapo did not let him go. He was returned to Aachen for more questioning. Although there was no charge against him, Schneider remained in jail there until he escaped in January, 1944.

He fled to Coblenz and was recaptured there. His next stop was the Sachsenhausen concentration camp at Oranienburg, where a war plant manned by prison labor was producing Heinkel bombers. Within three months, Schneider, a good mechanic, was supervising body building on the bombers.

"When plans came through for a new type bomber," says Schneider, "I was able to alter the blueprints. When they tested five of the new bombers, four of them fell apart in the air."

Just before the war ended, Schneider and other prisoners were started on a march to Czechoslovakia to man war plants taken over by the Germans. The SS guards abandoned the prisoners in Czechoslovakia. Schneider returned to Frankfurt and contacted the United States Counter Intelligence. That was June, 1945.

What happened in the months that followed cannot be told now, says Schneider. Later, his entrance into this country was approved and he arrived in April, 1947.

Since that time he has been employed as a food checker in a restaurant, as a private chauffeur and as an auto mechanic. He has been in Washington about a year.

Two Dodger Rookies Blank Nats, 4 to 0

My Story . . . By Joe Louis

Max Baer's Poor Showing Surprises Louis

Eighth of 15 Installments

THE MOBS never got one cent off me. I didn't even know they had tried to cut in on me, not when it was happening. I only heard about it later. My managers just let me go ahead with my training for Carnera. Chappie Blackburn hunted around for the biggest sparring partners he could find. He figured if I was going to take on a giant he would train me on giants. The fighters he brought in were Seal Harris and Ace Clark and Leonard Dixon. Each one was bigger and heavier than me.

I worked harder for that fight than for any fight before, because they told me my first New York fight could make me or break me. I did a lot of roadwork but I had fun, too.

I like fun, but most people don't know it. I like people around me to make me laugh. When I train I like to fool around some. I like to give the foot to fellas doing road work with me. I come in off the road and pull the covers off the boys who are still in the hay when I get back. If that don't wake them I like to give them the water treatment. I get laughs out of things like that.

Come June 25 I was in good shape for Carnera. When I climbed in the ring and looked around I saw the most people I ever saw in one place at one time. There was more than 60,000. This was my first fight in New York and this was the night I remember the best in all my fighting. If you was ever a raggedy kid and you come to something like that night, you'd know. I don't thrill to things like other people, I only feel good. I felt the best that night.

CHAPPIE told me how to start. He said for me to work on Carnera's body until I had him weak there, with his guard down, before I try for his head. I got some hard ones in before the end of the first round, but mostly he just moved and feinted. Carnera tried to scare me with his weight. In the fourth round we come into a clinch and he tries some of that weight lifting on me. I got him first. I lifted him clear and swung him around.

I see his jaw come open and a funny look on his face. No one ever lifted him before, like that. Before he got his jaw closed I hit him on the head and his eyes went glassy. I got in more body punches in the next round. I hear his breath stick in his throat. He tried to cover his body. In the sixth I got the nod from Chappie. I went after Carnera's head. I got him on the jaw again and he went down. He

This Morning

To Whom It May Concern:

VERO BEACH, FLA., March 26.—The newest gimmick in the Brooklyn ball factory here where 670 players are being processed is a special gray-colored cap worn by players with slight injuries . . . so the coaches won't crack down on them for not hustling . . . scarcely a day passes when Branch Rickey is not visited by a representative of another big league club eager to buy one of the Brooklyn products, and his sales will cover the $200,000 cost of the training camp.

POVICH

The complete regimentation of the army of Brooklyn players hit a new high this week when the bulletin board posted the warning that if they went onto the basketball court they could take only set shots—no running, that might weaken the legs . . . and it was officially suggested also that children of the players must not be taken into the camp's pool parlor.

The only building on this big former naval air base not put to use by the Dodgers is the rig . . . mechanical pitchers serve up strikes in batting practice; special cannon loft flies to the outfielders; and the ultimate in gadgets has been achieved in the form of a tube that carries balls from the outfield back to home plate—a move to save the outfielders' throwing arms.

THE MAN who was talking wasn't exactly a Buck Newsom admirer, but after Newsom pitched three hitless innings in a row against the Nats the other day, he said, "I don't know how they'll dispose of the rest of his body but they ought to put that pitching arm in the Cooperstown Hall of Fame" . . . When Satchell Paige missed the Cleveland Indians' bus in California the other day and didn't show up for an exhibition game, Manager Lou Boudreau cracked down with a stern warning, recalling that last year he fined Satchel Foot $50 for the same offense.

When C. Girard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of Interior ignored protests of poor operation of the D. C. municipal golf courses and re-awarded the concession to S. G. Loeffler, he didn't know that his own private secretary was one of the signers of a petition to take the courses from Loeffler.

Joe McCarthy, who told Bob Carpenter, owner of the Phillies, to "get the hell out of here," will draw no rebuke from Commissioner Chandler inasmuch as Carpenter had no right to invade the Red Sox bench and attempt to call down McCarthy for failing to bring his regulars to Clearwater.

TED WILLIAMS' skill does not end with his hitting Technicians now declare that Williams can tie and produce fishing flies better than most skilled craftsmen of the art . . . In the Detroit Tigers' camp, Coach Dick Bartell has been given a mission to bestir some fire and dash in lethargic Dick Wakefield. Bartell has been lashing Wakefield verbally for weeks but thus far has succeeded only in earning the player's hate.

The last time a Brooklyn Club played Washington, in 1945 at Griffith Stadium in a war-relief game, the Dodgers lost one of their promising rookie pitchers for all time. Leroy Pfund, fastballing righthander, slipped and fell while making a pitch, wrenched his knee, never pitched for Brooklyn again.

Manager Red Rolfe of the Tigers has given up trying to buy Jerry Priddy from the Browns after observing, "We offered them twice as much as he is worth" . . . Outfielder Barney McCosky of the Athletics has a back condition akin to Charley Keller's and is a doubtful starter . . . despite James J. Carroll's widely publicized pennant race odds quoting 6 to 5 against Cleveland and 7 to 5 against Boston, the Red Sox are rated favorites to win the pennant.

THE MONTREAL CLUB has put in a claim for John Simmons, outfielder drafted by the Nats, who paid $10,000 for him but must sell him back for $7500 if he is released . . . The Dodgers are claiming their second base-shortstop pair of Jackie Robinson and Pewee Reese surpasses the Indians' Joe Gordon-Lou Boudreau combination . . . They clicked off six double-plays against the A's in their last two games, and figured in four pick-off plays at second base . . . "Boudreau is the greatest shortstop in the world," says Manager Burt Shotton, "But as a double-play pair I like my boys better."

Despite the 670 players in uniform here, the Dodgers are unable to dig up an acceptable first baseman and are turning the job over to Bruce Edwards, a converted catcher . . . To Ray Scarborough, the Nats' top pitcher of 1948, will go the honor of starting Washington's opening game on April 18, but if Manager Joe Kuhel were picking his man on exhibition game performances it would be Sid Hudson, without question.

Bobo Newsom takes a dim view of the Nats' prospects for 1949. He admits the club's pitching is pretty good but adds "these pitchers can't drive in enough runs."

Milo Candini And Weik Belted for 2 Runs Each

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Vero Beach, Fla., March 26. The Brooklyn Dodgers interrupted mass maneuvers for their 600 ball players today and detached a small detail for the job of mopping up the visiting Washington Club. They did, 4 to 0.

The Nats could have spent the afternoon more profitably gathering sea shells at this seaside resort. They were a futile crew against two rookie Brooklyn pitchers, the Messrs. Morris Martin and Jack Banta, up from St. Paul and Montreal, respectively.

Pitcher Milo Candini emerged as the batting star of the Nats. He whacked a three-bagger in the third inning, the only blow of extra-base dimensions by the Nats, who collected only seven hits all day.

Candini, Weik Each Give 2

Candini and Rookie Dick Weik shared the Washington pitching. The Dodgers failed to make any distinctions, however and thumped them both for a pair of runs.

Martin, the Dodgers' starting pitcher, a southpaw, not only pitched nicely, but convalesced nicely. It was his first outing since being bedded down for 10 days with a sinus affliction and he shut the Nats out for five innings.

Jackie Robinson was the villain of Candini's five-inning pitching act. The husky star of the Dodgers' infield drove in their first run with a single to center in the opening inning, after Cal Abrams led off with a single, and then stole second just to show he could do it, perhaps.

In the third inning, Robinson upped his production with a two-bagger to left. Gene Hermanski caught the spirit and doubled to right, and the Dodgers had a 2-0 lead.

Coan's Miscue Results in Homer

They made it 4-0 against Weik quite suddenly in the seventh. Bruce Edwards whacked a long drive into center field and Gil Coan backed up and staggered under it 'n a butterfly flutter only to drop the ball. Edwards beat it out for an inside-the-park homer.

That unsettled Weik a bit, because the rookie immediately pitched a two-bagger to pitcher Banta. He scored a bit later on Carl Furillo's single to right.

Gil Coan, the Nats' spring hitting sensation, had a horrible time of it against the Brooklyn rookies. He didn't get a hit, and he struck out thrice in his four times up. Twice he took third strikes with his bat on his shoulders, to draw reproving looks from Manager Joe Kuhel.

The Nats didn't get any kind of a hit until Candini tripled to deep center with two out in the third. Coan's strikeout stranded him. The Nats, didn't get another man to third base until the eighth when with two on, Ed Stewart singled to right. San Dente, trying to score from second, was cut down at the plate by McMormick's throw.

YOUNG WEIK made an emergency appearance in the last three innings. He pitched after a hurried warm-up. Forrest Thompson, originally scheduled to work, jammed a finger in a pepper game before the contest . . . Weik waled only one batter, and struck out three, and altogether was impressive . . . the Nats climbed into their bus for the 105-mile return trip to Orlando after the game and have a date with the Tigers tomorrow.

Johnson Steals Show From Terps' Mighty Mo'

The Whites beat the Blacks, 37-6 yesterday in the season's first regulation football scrimmage at the University of Maryland.

Coach Jim Tatum was all smiles over the play of Bud Johnson, who plunged over the rain-soaked field to tally three touchdowns for the Whites. Johnson, a halfback, comes from Baltimore.

One of his scores was on a 28-yard pass from Andy MacDonald, Baltimore, and another was on a 13-yard run. A third was on a pass from Quarterback Joe Tucker of Washington.

"Mighty Mo" Modzelewski, Maryland's triple threat back from Harbrack, Pa., scored two touchdowns on plunges from the Blacks' 10-yard line.

Easter's Homer Helps Padres Beat Chisox

San Diego, Calif., March 26 (AP).—Bucky Harris' local Padres, blasting Bob Kuzava for seven runs in two rounds, outlasted the Chicago White Sox 9-8 in a 12-inning marathon today.

Luke Easter, who played with the Washington, D. C., Homestead Grays, hit a home run to help the Padres.

Knicks Oust Baltimore, Face Caps

Special to The Post

New York, March 26.—The New York Knickerbockers eliminated the Baltimore Bullets from the BAA playoffs, 103-99, in an overtime game at Madison Square Garden tonight before 9625 fans.

The victory gave the Knicks the series, two games to one, and the right to meet the Washington Capitols for the Eastern division playoff title.

The two out of three series with Washington begins Tuesday night in the D. C. National Guard Armory, moves back to New York Thursday and returns to Washington for a third game, if necessary, on Saturday.

The regulation game ended at 89-89 as Connie Simmons, of the Bullets, threw in two free throws in the last nine seconds to force the five-minute overtime.

Just before Simmons was fouled tempers flared and Carl Braun and Chick Reiser went at each other.

A free-for-all then developed and special police had to be called onto the court to separate the battling fans and players.

Paul Noel's one-hander from the side, after one minute of the extra period had gone by, set the Knickerbockers in front and they never lost the lead.

The game was the roughest played in the BAA this season with 100 personal fouls and three technicals being called. The Bullets were charged with 53 personals and lost six of their ten men via the foul route and had three others charged with five. New York had five players ejected for personals and one other had five.

The overtime session was the roughest of all the periods as each team pressed for possession.

Villemain Gets $7274 And Sympathy

New York, March 26 (AP).—Somewhat happier over the warm support he received from the press, France's Robert Villemain showed up today to collect his $7274 pay check and make arrangements for another bout in Madison Square Garden.

The French middleweight was flabbergasted when he lost a split decision to Jake La Motta, Bronx middleweight contender, in a Garden 12-rounder last night.

Two officials voted for Jake and the third for Villemain. Ten of 11 boxing writers polled at the ringside said the squat little Frenchman won breezing.

Eddie Eagan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, said he believed Villemain won too. And Eagan said last night "the commission is going to look into the matter."

Eagan is going to get an official protest from Jean Bretonnel and George Kanter, comanagers of Villemain, some time this week.

The decision won't be changed but the Frenchmen said they wanted to put their protest into the records.

After handing Villemain his money, Harry Markson, managing director of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, said he would feature the scrappy Villemain in a May program against an opponent yet to be determined.

Besides getting the undeserved decision, LaMotta received $7980.

Reider, Terps Lose Southern Ring Finals

Special to The Post

Columbia, S. C., March 26.—South Carolina's Jim Briggman scored a stunning upset over Maryland's Eddie Reider here tonight in the Southern Invitational boxing tournament finals and it helped cost the Terps the team title.

When Lloyd Jones, Louisiana State 165-pounder, decisioned Bob Gregson, of Maryland, in the following bout it gave LSU a total of 26 points to 24 for host South Carolina and 22 for Maryland.

The tourney ended in almost a complete washout for Washington area representatives in the finals when Georgetown's previously unbeaten Capt. Ray Larrow was knocked out in 1.30 of the third round by Bill Ohlandt, The Citadel's defending Southern Conference heavyweight champ.

Maryland, with four finalists, was favored to take it all tonight but three of its representatives were defeated. Lone Terp to register five points was Spencer Hopkins. The 130-pounder decisioned Joe Stringer of South Carolina.

Reider, unbeaten in two years, had a unanimous decision go against him despite flooring Briggman in the second round. He lost a point for a low blow in the same round but it did appear that his two-fisted attack had won the fight. However, that wasn't the way the judges called it.

Don Oliver, Maryland's 145-pounder, lost his fight to South Carolina's Ray Avant by a decision.

Only other bout besides the unlimited that didn't go all the way was the 135-pound verdict chalked up by Tad Thrash, LSU. He stopped Georgia's Charlie Lee in 1.22 of the second.

SUMMARIES

125 POUNDS—Wilbert Moss (LSU) decisioned Pete Campassi (South Carolina).
130 POUNDS—Spencer Hopkins (Maryland) decisioned Joe Stringer (South Carolina).
135 POUNDS—Tad Thrash (LSU) TKO'd Charlie Lee (Georgia), 1:22, second round.
145 POUNDS—Ray Avant (South Carolina) decisioned Don Oliver (Maryland).
155 POUNDS—Jim Briggman (South Carolina) decisioned Eddie Reider (Maryland).
165 POUNDS—Lloyd Jones (LSU) decisioned Bob Gregson (Maryland).
175 POUNDS—Carl Bernardo (Miami) decisioned Dale Matthews (Citadel).
UNLIMITED—Bill Ohlandt (Citadel) knocked out Ray Larrow (Georgetown), 1:30, third.
FINAL TEAM TOTALS—LSU, 27; South Carolina, 24; Maryland, 22; The Citadel, 12; Miami, 10; Georgetown, 4; Georgia, 4.

Red Sox Win; Yanks Lose

Boston Homers Beat Reds, 10-7

Tampa, Fla., March 26 (AP).—Pitcher Jack Kramer and Center Fielder Tommy O'Brien hit grand slam homers during separate five-run innings today as the Boston Red Sox downed the Cincinnati reds, 10-7, before 1227 fans.

O'Brien's round-tripper came in the fourth after the Sox had loaded the bases on two walks and Third Sacker Grady Hatton's error.

Redleg Rookie Harry Perkowski took over from Starter Johnny Vander Meer in the fifth and Boston promptly filled the bases on two singles and a walk to set the stage for Kramer's blow over the left field wall.

Giants Buy Hank Behrman

Vero Beach, Fla., March 26 (U.P.).—Branch Rickey today announced the sale of Pitcher Hank Behrman, long a Dodger problem child, to the New York Giants for an estimated $40,000.

It was a straight cash transaction and the exact sum was not announced.

Behrman, 28-year-old righthander, won 11 games while losing five for Brooklyn after coming out of service in 1946. He was sold to Pittsburgh on a conditional basis for $50,000 in 1947 but was returned.

Last season he was optioned to Montreal where he won eight and lost two before Leo Durocher recalled him over Branch Rickey's objections. He won five and lost four for the balance of the National League season but was continually in the Rickey doghouse for off-the-field escapades.

Manager Burt Shotton meanwhile made the first cut in the squad, optioning First Baseman Preston Ward to Fort Worth, Tex.

Braves Sock Bombers, 5-3

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 26 (AP).—The Boston Braves rallied for five runs in the seventh inning today to come from behind and defeat the New York Yankees, 5-3.

Alvin Dark drove in two runs in the big frame with a triple, and Catcher Bill Salkeld added another pair with a double. Clarence Marshall was the victim of the Boston uprising, giving up all five runs.

WHAT you would like to know about some of the girls and boys in the National Celebrities golf tournament, June 4-5, at the Army and Navy Country Club—

Grace Lenczyk, United States women's amateur champion, will play in the British women's championship, May 23-27, then fly to Washington in time to tee off in the Celebrities.

Jack Dempsey, in town for a Variety Club show today at Constitution Hall, said last night: "I'll whack off that first tee, then be honorary caddie for somebody." OK, Champ.

Clark Griffith, writing from the Nats' training camp at Orlando, Fla.: "I expect to hang up a good score as I am now starting to hit that ball." Hope you shoot your age, 79, Griff.

Harry Wismer, who will MC the Celebrities again, is quite ill in Detroit of a virus infection, but expects to be fit to MC the Masters at Augusta, April 7, and the National PGA at Richmond, May 25-31.

Francis Ouimet, who will be one of golfdom's "Elder Statesmen" in the Celebrities, is the only American player who has been on every Walker Cup team, dating back to 1922. He captains this year's team.

From Hollywood Radio Commentator Jimmy Fidler: "Looks like Hope and Crosby Red Cross golf tour is off." They had planned a cross-country swing but Hope's doctor says Bob's heatlh might not stand the strain. But both plan on being here for the Celebrities.

Jug McSpaden, who teamed with Byron Nelson as the "Gold Dust Twins" some years ago, will be among the new faces in the Celebrities. He will begin a 13-week television show (WBAL-Baltimore) Wednesday at 7 p. m., on "How to Improve Your Game."

Frank Stranahan, like Grace Lenczyk, will fly back from England for the Celebrities, if he can possibly make it after defending his title in the British Amateur Championship, May 23-28.

Grantland Rice, most respected and admired of all American sports writers, is coming to the Celebrities for the first time. "But my golfing days are about over." Just so you're here, Granny.

Frank Parker Wins

Alexandria, Egypt, March 26 (AP). Frank Parker of Los Angeles, today defeated Pedro Massip of Spain, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2, for the singles title in the International Tennis Tourney here.

Field of 13 Named for Bowie's Rowe 'Cap Tomorrow

Miniature Baseball

Alexandrians Build Park For Kids

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

A SCALED down version of big league baseball is coming to Alexandria this summer, complete with a miniature stadium and miniature players.

The program is sponsored by the Recreation Department. The townsfolk are pitching in to build the ballpark; and the players, 12 years and under, will be plucked by scouts off "farm teams" in the Alexandria elementary schools.

The playing field was measured off last week by Irvin Lindsey, assistant principal of George Washington High, and his math class.

It's scaled to two thirds the size of the big league diamond. Distance between the bases is 60 feet, and from the pitcher's box to home plate 40 feet, 4 inches.

Tomorrow, Luckett Watkins, Alexandria's city engineer, will begin grading the field. Herbert Bryant, former University of Virginia heavyweight boxer, now an Alexandria businessman, has donated grass seeds and fretilizer.

A Naval Ordinance outfit near Alexandria is contributing the lumber for the 4-foot fence which will enclose the field, and be curved 185 feet from the plate in left, center and right fields.

FRANK SIMMONS, an electrician, has been elected president of the board of governors over the four-team "Little League," and the elementary school farm clubs.

He's rolled up his sleeves too, and will wire and install an electric scoreboard atop the centerfield wall. And T. W. Robinson, a coal and fuel distributor, is pouring the concrete for two dugouts, each if which will accommodate 25 plyaers.

Unless a spell of bad weather sets in, the stadium, with its 300 seats, will be ready by May 2, the opening day. The park is located adjacent to the Alexandria Municipal Stadium.

The league teams have a "world series" berth to shoot at too. They are affiliated with other leagues operating under United States Tire and Rubber Co. auspices in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Florida and New Jersey, and State champions will play off for the "series" title.

Father of the lilliputian leagues is Carl Stotz, United States Tire and Rubber Co. official in Williamsport, Pa. A stadium similar to the one planned in Alexandria was erected in Williamsport 11 years ago.

Last winter, Stotz passed the idea along to Lee Fones, Alexandria's Recreation Department supervisor. And the idea has caught the fancy of all the Alexandrians.

RUSS HERRICK, Nats scout, George McQuinn, former Yankee first baseman, and other Alexandrians with baseball backgrounds will tour the elementary schools in April and instruct the youngsters. They'll pick the best 72 to play in the "Little League."

Under the league rules, each team will play two games a week at the stadium. Each game will be of six innings duration. Each team will be restricted to 10 players, who are 12 years old. The remaining eight players on each team must be younger. And no pitcher is allowed to work more than six innings per week.

Franchise fee is $300 to any businessman, who wants to sponsor a team. Already, the Fairlington Merchants Association, has chipped in, and has jurisdiction over boys in the Chinquapin, Fairlington and Parkfairfax region. The money is used for uniforms, bats and balls.

The league has received the written congratulations of Commissioner A. B. Chandler and Clark Griffith. Even the newspapermen like the idea. A press box is included in the stadium plans.

Irisen Slight Choice Over Ring's Entry

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

After an absence of three months, almost to the day, thoroughbred horse racing returns to the Capital area tomorrow with Bowie opening its thirty-fourth year of the sport at the old stand out Defense Highway.

The inaugural program for the 12-day meeting is topped by the $10,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap and a pair of sprinters probably will draw the chief play in the six-furlong test.

Irisen, owned by Mrs. O. L. Nyberg of Baltimore, and Rare Jewell, the property of Gustave Ring of Washington, are expected to furnish the major portion of contention, with the former a slight favorite.

Despite the far advanced training of horses that wintered hereabouts, they are being sidestepped for Irisen and Rare Jewell, both stars during Florida campaigning. The former turned in four victories down beneath the sheltering palms, while the latter won six times in two months of coral campaigning.

Two Other Ring Horses

Charlie Feltner, the Ring Stable trainer, has two other guns he may fire in the Rowe—Kitchen Police, top weighted at 116, and Top Pilot, the horse Walter Winchell made famous.

Irisen's backers believe the mare "likes the Bowie track," having won the W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap over the course last autumn.

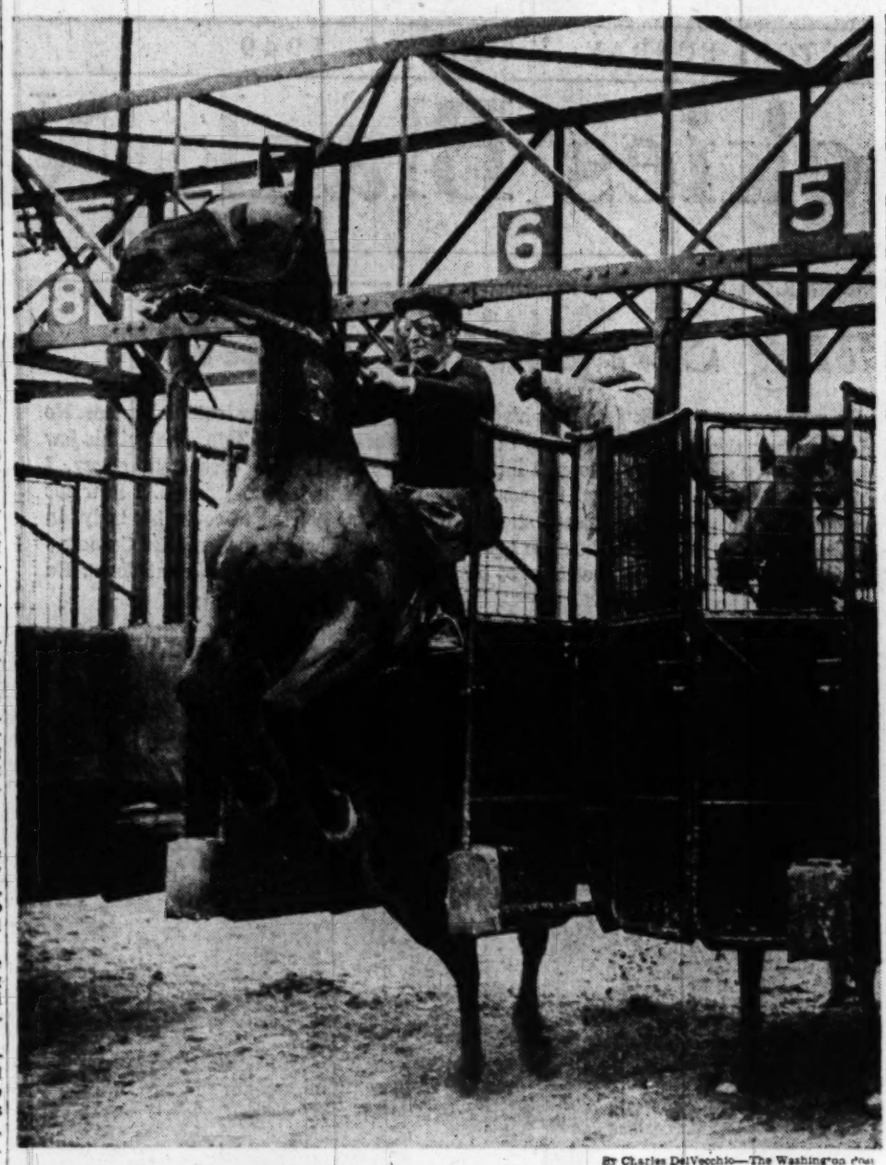
In all, 13 of the 16 original nominees for the handicap appeared on the entry list. The group also includes such well-known sprinters as Bobanet Stable's King Midas, Bomar Stable's Piet and Dion K. Kerr, jr.'s Flying Weather.

Others named were Rarco Stable's Darby D'Amour and Tight Squeeze; Clarence Hartwick's Flag Drill; Grandview Stable's Erigeron; C. C. Tanner's Nearway; P. A. Rothfuss' Gain A Foot.

New Record Possible

The Bowie running surface is in the best condition in years and, if the going is fast, a new record might be chalked up for the event first contested in 1930. Whitey Abel's Honey Cloud set the present mark of 1.11 4/5 in the 1940 renewal.

Given good weather the program is expected to draw upward of 15,000 fans. Post time for the first race is 2 p. m. with the daily double on the first and second races closing at 1:45.



By Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

BOWIE HORSE EAGER TOO—Turf fans in this area can hardly wait until Bowie opens tomorrow and the same feeling apparently is held by the thoroughbreds. At least, G. R. Watkins' Decoy, pictured above, was in such a hurry yesterday that she banged her way through the gate before the bell rang for this practice start. Jockey Eddie Smith, of Washington, appears to be in charge despite the rodeo maneuver of the 5-year-old mare

Cards Slug Phils, 12-11

Clearwater, Fla., March 26 (AP).—A five-run eighth inning uprising featuring a homer by Ron Northey gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies today.

Northey's three-run blast off Russ Myer tied the score at 6-6. Then, after two were out Del Ennis dropped a fly and Nippy Jones tripled home the winning run. He tallied a moment later on a single by Tommy Glaviano.

Northey's home run was the third for the Cards, Stan Musial and Joe Garagiola having connected off Charlie Bicknell.

Burbank, Calif., March 26 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates bombarded four pitchers for 18 hits today and coasted to an 11-to-4 victory over the St. Louis Browns. It was the Smoky City crew's eighth straight in Citrus Belt competition.

A two-run triple by Ed Stevens in the first inning started the Pirates on their way and the Browns were never in the contest. Stevens also contributed a homer in the eighth.

Browns Hold Off Eviction Of Cardinals

Burbank, Calif., March 26 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns have decided not to evict the St. Louis Cardinals from Sportsman's Park pending a court decision on their suit to break the lease. Previously, the Browns said they would file eviction notice April 1.

William O. Dewitt, president of the Browns, in a formal statement said the Dodier Realty & Investment Co. had offered use of the park to the Cardinals.

The Browns, through the Dodier Co., owned the ball park.

Notice of forfeiture of lease was filed against the Cardinals in Circuit Court February 28. The action is based on a change in the corporation name of St. Louis National League Club when ownership was transferred from Robert Hannegan to Fred M. Saigh, jr.

The Cardinals' lease runs through 1951 with a 10-year option which the Redbird management has taken up. This means the Cardinals can stay in Sportsman's Park until 1961 unless the court decides the lease forfeiture case in favor of the Browns.

Navy Plays Duke, Columbia at Home

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The Naval Academy announced today it is moving two "home" football games next season back to its own Thompson Stadium here.

Capt. Howard Caldwell, director of Athletics, announced Duke will be met here October 8 and Columbia on November 12.

Columbia was the last 11 to play Navy in Thompson Stadium in 1947. Navy's other two home football games with Notre Dame October 29 and Princeton November 1 will be played in Baltimore's Municipal Stadium.

Lacy Runs Record Point Total to 2199

Denver, March 26 (AP). — The Loyola Grey hounds from Baltimore wiped out a nine-point deficit in the last four minutes tonight to defeat St. Benedict's of Atchison, Kans., 71-70, for third place in the National Catholic Invitational basketball tournament.

Jim Lacy, the Loyola forward who set a new four-year college scoring record in this tournament, won the game for Loyola on a free throw with 30 seconds to play.

Lacy scored a total of 21 to run his four-year count to 2199 in the final game of his career and left that hefty mark for succeeding players to shoot at.

Yardstick Wins Gracias Trophy With 15 Points

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Yardstick, owned by Mrs. R. H. Hawkins, native Washingtonian, outclassed a large field of foxchasers over the sticky going of the Potomac (Md.) hunt country yesterday to annex the Gracias Trophy for championship honors at the annual Potomac Hunt Hunter Trials.

Yardstick, a gallant, free-moving chestnut gelding, probably making his last public appearance for his gracious owner-rider, who is expecting to accompany her husband abroad in the near future, captured first place in the Elinor Exnicios Trophy event for Potomac members. Then Yardstick just missed top honors in the coveted Masters Plate, the featured foxchasers class, and the speedy endurance test of the Tally-Ho class for a total of 15 points.

Raymond H. Norton's Night Breeze, and his son's Canadian Breeze, tied for the reserve position in the championship duel. However, Canadian Breeze received the recognition on the toss of a coin.

JUNIOR PLATE—1, Bill Earnest's Ivan the Terrible; 2, Nancy Kelly's Maryland Miss; 3, Alfred H. Smith's Nannette; 4, Bette Barron Smith's Bluemont.

TRAVILAH PLATE—1, Claude Owen's Sky's Shadow; 2, Mrs. Ray Norton's Light Breeze; 3, Oliver Durant's Odd Man.

THE HANDY—1, W. Halbert Poole, jr.'s Good Night; 2, Ray Norton, jr.'s Canadian Breeze; 3, Mrs. Ray Norton, sr.'s Light Breeze; 4, Al Earnest's Dickie Boy.

SENIOR WHEELER ENNICIOS TROPHY —1, Mrs. R. H. Hawkins' Yardstick; 2, Samuel Bodley's Shady Lady; 3, Dickie Boy; 4, Canadian Breeze.

MASTER'S PLATE—1, Ray Norton, sr.'s Night Breeze; 2, Yardstick; 3, Canadian Breeze; 4, Tickle.

FOXCATCHERS PLATE — 1, Maryland Miss; 2, Yardstick; 3, Mildred Gaines' Ironing Socks; 4, Mildred Gaines' Symphony.

TALLY-HO—1, Alfred Smith, jr.'s Nanette; 2, Yardstick; 3, Odd Man; 4, Tickle.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY PLATE (pair of hunters)—1, Light Breeze and Night Breeze; 2, Dr. "Pete" Moran's Doolittle and Canadian Breeze; 3, Tickle and Yardstick; 4, Dr. James N. Greer, jr.'s Starlight and Shady Lady.

THE POTOMAC PLATE (pair of three hunters)—1, Ivan, Dickie Boy and Doolittle; 2, Maryland Miss, Blackie and Sky's Shadow; 3, Tickle, Nanette and Yardstick; 4, Shady Lady, Canadian Breeze and Starlight.

CHAMPION—Yardstick, 15 points.
RESERVE—Canadian Breeze (won on a toss with Light Breeze).

Stranahan Holds Lead at Greensboro

Greensboro, N. C., March 26 (AP).—Amateur Frank Stranahan, the Toledo, Ohio, strong boy shot a two-under par 69 today to cling to his one-stroke lead at the 36-hole mark of the $10,000 Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Defending Champion Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago remained in second place with another 69 for a total of 136 which was matched by Dick Metz, Virginia Beach, veteran who posted his second 68.

They, in turn, were only one stroke ahead of three other players, South African Bobby Locke, Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and George Schneiter of Ogden, Utah, the PGA tournament bureau manager.

But the real fireworks of the day's play over the 6630-yard Starmount Country Club course were touched off by the largest player in the tournament and one of the smallest.

Burly Clayton Heafner, 235-pound Charlotte professional, and 140-pound Jerry Barber of Los Angeles exploded record-breaking 65s for 138, they were joined by Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., who fell off to 71 today.

In all, 18 players checked in under par for 36 holes. Eleven were no more than four strokes off the pace as the field headed into tomorrow's final 36 holes. Sixty players qualified for the final play with 150 the qualifying limit.

Stranahan went over par for the first time in 26 holes when trapped on the short eighth. He turned in 35. He birdied the thirteenth with a 4-foot putt, the fourteenth with a 10-footer and the sixteenth with a 6-footer.

Heafner's 65 was made despite a 2-over 5 on the short third where he was trapped and needed 2 to get out. He more than got those strokes back with birdies on five, six and eight to turn 1 under at 34.

Then he went to work. After three pars on the back nine he racked up three birdies and an eagle for a 31 finish.

came up slow and wobbly and I got him with a left hook and a right cross to the head, and he went down again.

He tried to pull himself up by the ring ropes, but I could see by the way his mouth worked he wasn't coming up again. When they count my end that night it was $60,000. Mr. Roxborough told me that was the biggest money ever made by a fighter who was pro less than a year.

I got a rest for a couple of weeks. Then I went to Chicago to fight King Levinsky in Comiskey Park, August 7. I didn't use more than 10 punches to put him out in one round. I come out of that fight with better than $53,000.

THEY matched me up, after that, to fight Max Baer in Yankee Stadium on September 24. I went back to Pompton Lakes and Baer went to Speculator in New York. Mr. Roxborough said he was counting on the Baer fight for my biggest build-up because Baer only lost the heavyweight title a few months before to Jimmy Braddock.

When Baer came in the ring he looked in good shape. I felt him out with my left and a jab got his nose bleeding. He had a hard punch, but I don't know what happened to him that night. I don't call no names, but he didn't put up the fight I thought he would. He threw wild punches. He left himself wide open.

When I come in from the first round Chappie said, "You got him. Just keep up like you're doing. He won't last." Chappie was right. Baer started backing up and kept backing up, but I got to his head and his body. In the fourth he came out weak, with no fight. I got him with a hard left and a hard right. He went down and he stayed down. He was the second former champ I knocked out.

When I trained for the Ramage fight in Trafton's gym on Randolph st. in Chicago, Gerard Hughes—he's a friend—come by with Marva Trotter. She watched me work. She was a stenographer in Chicago. She'd been through high school and some college, but we got along good.

I didn't do much talking, but I could make her laugh, and I like people who laugh easy. I took her to a banquet in the Grand Hotel and we danced good together. She said I had good rythm. I told her about my fighting and asked her could she come out to my mother's new house in Detroit, for a visit. I fixed it so she could live at Mr. Roxborough's. My mother and my sister Vunies took to her right off.

WE TALKED about getting married. I told her Mr. Roxborough and Mr. Black and the writers said I would get to be something big in fighting. I said if she married me, I would get her everything—cars, houses and clothes. She talked it over with her mother—she was in a family of 10 children—and her mother said it would be all right, but her mother died before we were married.

Her brother, the Rev. Walter Trotter, was the preacher at our wedding. It was a few hours before I went out to fight Max Baer. We were staying at 381 Edgecombe ave. in Harlem then. The halls were filled with reporters and camermen, and lots of neighbors. I couldn't come through the crowd to Lucille Armstead's apartment, where Marva was, so I came down by the fire escape from the fifth floor. We had the wedding in Lucille's place. Marva saw me beat Baer that night. We had a little party, nothing special.

We went back to Chicago after I beat Baer. Ten thousand people stood in the street around the house. They cheered and hollered until Marva and me came out on the porch.

I DIDN'T like that, but we had to show. I threw my hat down to the crowd and there was a fight for it, for a good-luck souvenir. Marva and me had to stay pretty close to the house. When we went out we drew crowds.

Marva and me didn't have much honeymoon, not until we went to Europe in 1948. We had just a few days together, then I went to New York to train for the Paolino Uzcudun fight, December 13. Chappie worked me pretty hard for that one.

This Uzcudun was a croucher, hard to hit. I opened him with left jabs. In the fourth I hit him with a right. Writers said that was the hardest I ever hit a man. It busted Uzcudun's face right open. I was glad the referee stopped the fight.

Max Schmeling told sportswriters he had noticed something that night. He didn't say what, but he meant I dropped my left when I threw a hard right. He used that tip-off against me in our first fight. I'll come around to telling about that fight, but it's one of the things I like most to forget.

He's So Young

Hoya Coach Margarita Hasn't Had Time to Become Pessimist

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It's refreshing to talk to the Nation's youngest head football coach at a major school—he hasn't had time to become a chronic pessimist.

After two weeks of spring practice, Georgetown's 28-year-old Bob Margarita remains quite affable. Although obviously aware of the many problems confronting any new coach, young Bob isn't letting the responsibilities get him down.

In his office yesterday, he smilingly said, "We've got a bunch of wonderful boys here. They're hard workers and the spirit of the squad is fine."

At the moment, Margarita and his assistants are trying hard to evaluate the ability of boys they've never seen play. Although 25 lettermen form what would seem to be a good nucleus, the new coaches have open minds. Each of the 50-odd aspirants has an equal chance to make the varsity.

Margarita plans to use a straight T-formation offense with a man in motion instead of last year's single wing. And that won't make his already difficult job any easier.

It means that the vital quarterback spot may have to be entrusted to one of three sophomores.

So far the leading candidate appears to be Jack Juen, 12-letter athlete from Illinois. Margarita says he has been impressed by the youngster's smooth ball-handling. Behind Juen are the more publicized Bob Deacon and Charlotte Hall's Jack Mattingly.

Another soph back who has been impressive is Warren McFague, hard runner who was high scorer on the freshman 11.

With Dick Barba, Billy Conn and a host of other seasoned backs returning, Margarita is concerned mainly with welding a formidable line.

"We seem to have a million backs but hardly are able to field two lines," Bob admitted. "Perhaps we'll try to convert one of the surplus ball-carriers."

Bill Battles, burly line coach, thought Tackle Gene Stack and Guard Joe Quiring the yearlings who have looked most promising.

Methodical Margarita keeps daily form charts on all his players. The figures are bound to be more revealing after scrimmages with Navy at Annapolis next Friday and Saturday.

Gonzales Beats Talbert for Indoor Net Title

Pancho Goes Four Sets For Victory

New York, March 26 (U.P.).—Richard (Pancho) Gonzales, a 20-year-old "powerhouse" from Los Angeles, wrapped up the "triple crown" of amateur tennis today by defeating Billy Talbert of New York, 10—8, 6—0, 4—6, 9—7, in the men's singles finals of the National Indoor Championships.

In the women's finals, witnessed by an estimated 3000 fans at the Seventh Regiment Armory, Gertrude (Gussie) Moran of Santa Monica, Calif., whipped Nancy Chaffee of Ventur, Calif., 6—2, 6—3.

Gonzales, who captured the clay and grass court titles last summer, needed every shot at his command to turn back Talbert, the tournament's defending champion. But it was his all-round power that produced victory for the Cali-California youngster.

Talbert, a 30-year-old campaigner, looked more at ease on the boards than Gonzales, who was appearing in his first indoor tournament, and matched his younger opponent stroke for stroke in a torrid first set.

Talbert regained his strength and his strokes in the third set, chasing Gonzales all over the boards with his neat placements. Raw courage and court savvy enabled Talbert to extend the fourth set until Gonzales was able to break through in the fifteenth game.

With an 8-to-7 advantage in games, Gonzales then poured in four straight points, the last shot blazing in to the right-hand corner to give the Los Angeles youngster the match point.

Miss Moran also teamed with Gonzales earlier in the tournament to take the mixed doubles title and last night she teamed with Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Buck of New York to gain the doubles crown.

The men's doubles title was won by Talbert and Don McNeill of Glen Oaks, N. Y., who turned back Gonzales and Frank Shields of New York in the finals, 6—4, 3—6, 6—0, 9—7.

Louis Sets Title Fight For June 22

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, March 26 (AP).—Promoter Joe Louis, with a fine sentimental touch, today announced the Ezzard Charles-Jersey Joe Walcott bout for his vacated world heavyweight crown will be fought June 22 at Comiskey Park.

Director Louis of the International Boxing Club 12 years ago at the same place and on the same date flattered Jim Braddock for the championship. The 35-year-old Walcott and 25-year-old Charles each will get 25 per cent of the receipts.

The other 50 per cent goes to the IBC, which should be a good fat take with the television folk all clamoring for rights on the bout.

Besides, the IBC will have the Charles-Wolcott winner committed to a title defense, within 90 days, against Lee Savold, or Britisher Bruce Woodcock or Freddie Mills.

The Charles-Walcott meeting has the blessings of the National Boxing Association as a title affair. But the non-NBA New York Athletic Commission scorns it as such, recommending that Joe's title should be pitched up for grabs in an elimination series.

It well may be that the showdown between the two Negroe battlers will draw as well as the Louis-Braddock title match on June 22, 1937. Comiskey Park, hard by Chicago's biggest Negro sector, was filled by 45,500 persons that time. They paid a gate of $715,470.

Cmbridge Crew Wins

London, March 26 (AP).—Half a million Britons yelled with carnival abandon as eight husky Cambridge lads defeated Oxford in the annual boat race on the Thames today.

The underdog Cambridge crew flashed into the lead for the first time only 50 yards from the end and won by a quarter of a length. It was the closest finish since an Oxford man broke his oar in 1877 and the crews finished in a dead heat.

This was Cambridge's 51st victory in the 95 times the classic has been rowed. Oxford has won 43 times.

Air Force Squash Finals Here Today

Finals in the National Air Force Squash Tournament will be staged today at the Bolling Air Force Base gym, starting at 2:30 o'clock. Col. N. E. Powell, Military Air Transport Command, plays Lieut. Joel Millery.

Maryland Lacrosse Team Beaten, 7 to 2

Baltimore, Md., March 26.—Mount Washington Club's National open champion lacrosse team overpowered the University of Maryland, 7-2, in the winner's opener today.

Scoreless until late in the third quarter, Maryland's Lew Kimball whipped the first visiting tally past Goalie Pete Chesney unassisted.

'There's No Real Champ'

Dempsey Here, Sees Louis A Flop as Fight Promoter

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

A 53-year-old man, who looks quite capable of winning back the championship he held for seven years, breezed into town yesterday and led with a verbal haymaker to the effect that the heavyweight boxing situation is in "horrible shape."

Jack Dempsey pulled no punches. The Manassa Mauler, still sporting coal-black hair and walking cat-like on the balls of his feet, likes no part of the picture since Joe Louis retired as champion.

In his outspoken manner, Dempsey openly scoffs at Louis' promotional aspirations.

"The public won't accept the winner of an Ezzard Charles-Jersey Joe Walcott bout as champion," Dempsey said, forgetting for the moment his role as publicist for the Coast Guard Inter-Faith Memorial Chapel Fund.

"Charles is too small and Walcott never was very good. I don't know who'll win the June 22 bout in Chicago, but there is no question about Charles being the best of a bad lot.

"Joe Louis is going to find out that he can't get as many people to watch his promotions as he could draw to see him fight, unless, of course, he comes up with better fighters than are available now."

Dempsey says he should know about promoting. He points out that he tried it after losing his title in the first Gene Tunney fight in 1926. Even with good fighters, his promotional drawing power was something less than sensational. He flopped, as a matter of fact.

"The heavyweight division is going to be in horrible shape," Dempsey said, "until a real champion comes along. Then everything will straighten itself out."

Asked if he wishes he was young enough to try a comeback against the present mediocre crop of heavies, Dempsey laughed and said:

"I just wish I could take some of these contenders back to my day to fight them. At that time you could keep some of the money you made fighting."

American U. Opens With Wesleyan

Dick Taylor, who won four games and lost one last year, and George Glorius, a former McKinley Tech hurler, will start for American University when the Eagles open the local college baseball season in a double-header with Wesleyan College of Middletown, Conn., tomorrow.

The first game will start at 1:30 on the Friends School field. The teams originally were listed to play one game.

Middies Win, 11-7

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—The Annapolis Lacrosse Club opened its season with an 11-7 victory over Washington College here today.

Michigan Hurdler Ties U. S. Record

Lafayette, Ind., March 26 (AP).—Garion Campbell of Michigan Normal tied the American indoor record for 60-yard low hurdles tonight, beating out a fast field in the Purdue relays.

Campbell's 6.8 seconds for the short barrier race matched Harrison Dillard's best times of the last three seasons. Dillard's American mark, made under Baldwin-Wallace colors, also is the Purdue relays record.

Fred Johnson of Michigan State pushed Campbell to the tape in spite of knocking down the first hurdle. Sprinter Horace Smith of Michigan State beat Notre Dame's Bill Fleming for third.

C. U. Boxers Trim Virginia By 4½-3½

Catholic University kept its undefeated record intact last night at the Brookland gym by defeating University of Virginia boxers, 4½-3½. Heavyweight Charlie Rohr pulled the victory out for the Cards by gaining a decision over Allen Smith.

The score was tied at 3½-3½ by a very upopular verdict in the 175-pound class. Then Rohr came out with his long left jab in Smith's face and followed it up with flurries to the midsection and head.

In the third his right hands to the head had Smith in trouble.

Tom Cronin, Catholic's Intercollegiate Boxing Association champ, took the opening fight and then Jack Redmond made the crowd of 3000 wonder how Allen Hollingsworth of Virginia, ever gained his IBA crown. He pummelled Hollingsworth and led clearly through the fight to take the decision.

What Virginia needs is more Miragliotta brothers. Both of them, Basil in the 145-pound class, and Joe in the 155, earned KO's over their opponents.

It took Basil until 1:30 of the third round to finish off Rich Snyder, but brother Joe Miragliotta only needed 1:30 of the first to put away Ray Calnan, subbing for the hospitalized Bucky Ennis. This one was a slugfest as long as it lasted but Cardinal Coach Eddie LaFond stopped the bout when Miragliotta cut Calnan's mouth and nose with his hard punches.

125 POUNDS—Tom Cronin (C) decisioned Leonard Coiner.
130 POUNDS—Jack Redmond (C) decisioned Allen Hollingsworth.
135 POUNDS—Grover Masterson (V) decisioned Joe Incarnato.
145 POUNDS—Basil Miragliotta (V) TKO'd Rich Snider, 1:30 of third.
155 POUNDS—Joseph Miragliotta (V) TKO'd Ray Calnan, 1:30 of first.
165 POUNDS—Billy Maher (C) TKO'd Abraham Levin, 1:45 of third.
175 POUNDS—Clifford Sisler (C) and Lamont Atwell drew.
HEAVYWEIGHT—Charlie Rohr (C) decisioned Allen Smith.

Virginia Triumphs

Charlottesville, Va., March 26.—Tom Phillips, University of Virginia outfielder, singled, doubled, tripled and scored five times in the first two innings to pace Virginia's 7-2 win over Springfield (Mass.) College in their season's opener

Radio Surrenders. Right of Criticism

By Red Smith

BALTIMORE, MD., MARCH 26 (NYHT).—In Baltimore, Robert Villemain whipped Jake LaMotta handily, cutting him open and draining his veins, beating him eight to the bar. It came over the radio as a good fight, a lively job of brawling between the aging bull of the Bronx and the younger, busy mauler of the Montmarte.

"Villemain," said Don Dunphy at one point, "is now the fighter Jake LaMotta used to be."

That's the way it sounded.

"I think he's winning his fight," Bill Corum said after one of the late rounds.

And that's the way it sounded.

Red Smith

Then the decision was announced, and LaMotta was the winner because two of the spectators in Madison Square Garden said so. The other spectators in the Garden—or those whose voices came over the air—said something else altogether, and threw things into the ring.

Bill Corum said well, a fellow had to be honest and so he must honestly confess that the decision had come as a surprise to him. But, he said, the official decision was official, and that was that. He said Villemain was standing up there as though stunned, but was being a good sport about it.

YOU HAD to remember, Bill told his audience as the crowd continued to boo, that LaMotta was an unpopular fellow. Also he pointed out that Villemain had been the underdog, meaning this as an explanation of some of the booing, for everyone knows that many in the crowd always favor the underdog if he can make it the least bit close.

Moreover, Bill said, you had to remember that LaMotta had unquestionably landed the heavier blows. Still, Villemain had been the aggressor all night.

Now, this member of the radio audience certainly does not intend to second-guess the officials. Maybe their judgment was sound, although the fact that Eddie Eagan asked later on to see their round-by-round scores suggests that the chairman of the State Athletic Commission didn't see eye to eye with them.

Bill Corum wasn't second-guessing, either; he had called his shot before the officials turned in their ballots. Yet he felt, probably correctly—because he is not a green hand on radio—that he had to apologize for being in disagreement.

This was just another illustration of the fundamental weakness of radio coverage of news events. Radio and/or television can deliver an eye-witness account of what is going on far more swiftly than any other medium. If radio employs able and honest reporters, it can furnish an accurate account. But radio surrenders the indispensable right of criticism.

THE SPONSOR wants to sell goods. He is terrified of offending anyone, lest it diminish his sales. So he discourages the tendency of honest employes to express an honest opinion. It is 100 to 1 that neither Corum nor Dunphy has been asked by the sponsor to mind his P's and Q's. But they do mind 'em, because that's radio.

Certainly it has not been their practice to hop up a bad fight as other announcers used to do, trying to make a waltz sound like Armageddon in order to hold the listeners' attention and thus peddle more of the sponsor's cod cakes.

On the contrary, they are able and honest reporters. Bill Corum is a guy who writes what he thinks in the newspaper. He is not a timid guy; he just happens, when he gets on the air, to be messing around with a timid industry.

The radio account of this fight sounded like an honest and accurate report. The crowd's response to the decision supported this impression, indicated that the other witnesses agreed with Corum and Dunphy as against Harry Ebbets and Harold Barnes, the referee and judge.

There is something organically wrong with an industry whose operatives, having turned in a job marked with integrity and high quality, to have to apologize for doing so.

But Kiner Gives Them Punch

Bucs Carry Too Many Years To Hold Up in Stretch Drive

(This is the last in a series of articles on the prospects of major league baseball clubs for the coming season.)

San Bernardino, Calif., March 21 (AP).—Take about three years off the average age of the Pittsburgh Pirates and it would be necessary to pick them to win the National League pennant.

Maybe they'll do it anyway. But most of the smart baseball men out this way think Manager Bill Meyer's outfit — especially the pitching staff—is a little too old to win out in a stretch drive against either Brooklyn or Boston.

They point out, for instance, that TrTruett (Rip) Sewell, who won 13 last year while the Pirates were pushing up into fourth place, is crowding 41. And they wonder how much longer even the old "blooper ball" specialist can keep it up.

Next they note that Hugh Casey, on whom Meyer is counting for some flossy relief chucking in the late innings, has observed his thirty-sixth birthday. So has Ernie Bonham, another member of the staff.

Kirby Higbe, who pretty much carried the Pirate curving corps last year, is 33. Bob Muncrief, obtained from Cleveland during the winter, also is 33. Murry Dickson, the hard-working little righthander bought from the St. Louis Cardinals for a reported $125,000, is 32, along with Elmer Riddle of the starting pitchers.

All of which doesn't make them ready for the sun deck at the home for aged ball players. Yet it points up the fact Meyer's staff, as his rivals like to reason, will be toting a lot of years around when the double-headers pile up and the temperature zooms.

Also, there is the matter of the outfield. Dixie Walker, long one of the great ones, has reached 38 and can be counted upon only for piecework from here on. Walt Judnick, obtained from Cleveland to share the chores with Dixie, is 32. So is Johnny Hopp.

Danny Murtaugh at second base is a veteran of 31, and Les Fleming, who has come back from a big year in the minors to battle Ed Stevens for the first base job, is 33. They're no longer youngsters with the bit in their teeth.

Clyde McCullough, the former Chicago Cubs catcher who will carry the burden for the Pirates this year, is 32, and he has been crouching behind the plate professionally for 14 years.

Comparative youth is represented on the pitching staff by Bob Chesnes, 28, who was a freshman sensation last season after he recovered from a sore arm; Vic Lombardi, 26-year-old southpaw, and Bill Werle, a 27-year-old sinkerball artist who is coming up from San Francisco.

Ralph Kiner, the club's brilliant homerun hitter, is only 26. And Wally Westlake, his rugged outfield mate, is but 28. Star Rojek at short is a spry 28, same as Joe Bockman, who is getting first shot at filling the shoes of the departed Frankie Gustine at third. Ed Fitzgerald, promising sophomore catcher, is only 24.

Perhaps because of this question, neither Manager Meyer nor General Manager Roy Hamey is ready to predict a pennant. Both, in fact, strongly advise against it.

Trout Bite Briskly... but for Women Only

THE BEST-STOCKED trout stream in North Carolina is Neel's Creek, Route 80 near the Mount Mitchell Game Refuge. Don't rush down there men because there's a "Women Only" rule. Only the fair sex can fish because the speckled babies are so thick it's almost impossible to miss catching the limit . . . Dr. Ernest Blanche, whose new book "You Can't Win" comes off the presses this week, says it is easier to get a flush than a straight in draw poker although, according to Hoyle, a flush beats a straight. However, stud—five cards—is a different proposition, a flush being a 508-1 shot and a straight only 254-1 . . . Lieut. Col. Louis B. Magid, jr. of 1955 39th st. nw. landed a 20-pound barracuda and a 7-pound, 1 ounce snapper to get on the honor roll of the Metro Miami Fishing tournament. His catch was witnessed by Maj. James McCullough of Andrews Air Force Base . . . Publicist Browie Leach writes that he's sending me a copy of "The Kentucky Derby Diamond Jubilee, 1875-1949," which I have heard is the best book ever published by a race track. The press run is limited to 35,000 and Churchill Downs will send a complimentary copy to each boxholder—but try and get a box for the Derby these days.

Haight

WHEN BOWIE OPENS tomorrow it will have the Teletimer, which flashes the fractional times of each race on the results board, for the first time . . . Answer to inquiry: Billy Conn didn't lose the light heavyweight title but resigned the crown to fight heavies in 1941. He made some dough but no progress with the big boys, although he turned in an excellent battle against Joe Louis . . . It wasn't a little bird who told me a new trotting track will be voted by the Maryland legislation at at present session. It will be mighty close to the Baltimore City line . . . I was wrong about Jockey Clarence Picou being with Brookmeade Stable. He signed with the C. V. Whitney barn . . . Fire, and not a falling off of the betting, is still the No. 1 fear of horse owners and race track operators. Virtually all tracks now have their own fire departments. Atlantic City is the most fireproof plant in the East with cinder-block stables, etc. . . . Bowie has several block and concrete stables and will build more.

A STAR CLASS SAILBOAT enthusiast was trying to interest a friend in the sport but got this reply, "Don't talk boats to me. I hate boats. I've been on a Coast Guard Cutter all my life. When I get out of service, I'm going to hoist an oar on my shoulder and start walking west. When I get so far inland that some fellow asks me what I'm carrying., I'm going to settle down there for the rest of my life" . . . everybody's trying to get in on the act. Halls of fame are popping up in all sports—fishing and football are the latest. Looks like we'll have to go in for super halls of fame, then super-super, etc. . . . the new generation of Bowie officials are on their toes and have come up with a dilly-dally in complimentary tickets. Instead of the usual, easy to lose badges, the track has issued individual tickets numbered for each day of the meeting. This eliminates the customary delay in tearing off slips at the tax window and various gates. Other tracks should take notice . . . James J. Corbett in 1889 was the first boxer to specialize in a left hook, a weapon used effectively by Joe Louis . . . Miss July Johnson, topflight horse trainer and expert rider, is the only girl ever to be issued a jockey license in Maryland. She rode a few steeplechases during the war. Miss Joan Randle is one of the several lassies who have worked out horses over the Bowie track and probably could give a good account of herself in an actual race . . . 36 hours until Bowie.

Oxon Hill Races Draw 330 Names

William E. Miller, president of Oxon Hill, Maryland's Rosecroft Raceway, has announced 330 nominations for 14 early closing events of the Rosecroft Trotting and Pacing Association's 20-night inaugural meeting.

Total purse value for the 14 races would be $27,400. Opening date is May 26.

Roimond Takes 2d by 8 Lengths

By Bill Macklin

Aintree, England, March 26 (AP).—An unsung 9-year-old gelding named Russian Hero, a 66-to-1 shot sired by a plug his owner picked up for $150, today captured the 103d Grand National Steeplechase by eight lengths.

His trainer didn't figure the horse had a chance—even debated with his owner about starting. The owner, William Fearnall Williamson, reasoned otherwise. Months ago bookmakers thought so little of Russian Hero that Williamson was able to get 300 to 1 on a $40 bet.

Russian Hero snatched the lead on the next to last fence and scampered home in front of Roimond, a 22-to-1 shot. His $37,868 purse joined the $12,000 Williamson tapped from his bookie.

The totalisator payoff on Russian Hero, picked only by the morning Communist paper, The Daily Worker, was $81.10 for a 40-cent bet—nearly 203 to 1. The bookmaker price of 66 to 1 represented a drop from 100 to 1, quoted at the final callover on the horse last night at London's Victoria Club.

Another length back of Roimond in third place was the 18-1 chance, Royal Mount, with the 7-1 favorite, Cromwell, a well-beaten fourth.

The hundreds of Americans present in the great crowd, estimated at 300,000 to 500,000, got only a short run for their money out of two Yank entries.

Replica, in the blue and red silks of Richard K. Mellon of Ligonier, Pa., tumbled at the fifth jump. Then Caddie II, making his second national try for owner Paul Mellon of Washington, succumbed to the murderous seventh barrier.

Only 11 horses out of the field of 43 starters lasted through the suicidal run of 4 miles, 856 yards—the world's toughest racing test.

One of those which failed, the 11-year-old Bora's Cottage, was killed in a tumble at the eleventh of the 30 fences.

Flaming Steel was injured when he stepped on a sharp post in one obstacle, but gallantly finished fifth. Six more chasers completed the rugged course in this order: Happy Home, Tonderman, Lucky Purchase, Bricett, Clyduffe and Perfect Night.

Most of the bookmakers in Britain were just as happy about Russian Hero's victory as though they owned him. They stood to lose vast sums if Cromwell won because the gelding had been coupled in thousands of "spring doubles" with Fair Judgment, 7-to-1 winner of last Saturday's Lincolnshire.

Publinx Hearings Set Tuesday

12 Witnesses Listed By Public Lands Unit

A special Public Lands Subcommittee opens public hearings 10 A. M. Tuesday in its investigation of the operation of the local municipal golf courses.

Representative Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.), chairman announced a list of 12 witnesses, representing the four principal parties in the highly complicated, controversial matter.

At the moment there's not a public golfer on it

It was Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.) who got the ball rolling when he introduced a resolution calling on the House to look into the situation. Later he offered a bill to stop the Department of Interior from renewing the contract of S. G. Leoffler, concessionaire since 1921, until the congressional investigation is completed.

Rivers has followed through by suggesting a course of procedure to Chairman Redden. The gentleman from South Carolina has asked the subcommittee to delve into the full contents of the contract relationship and the revenues derived.

He also has asked that all contending parties be given an opportunity to state their cases.

Those requested to appear in Room 1324 of the new House Office Building Tuesday include:

James E. Milton, L. A. Farr, A. L. Thomas, employes of the present operating company, and its head, S. G. Leoffler, sr.;

From the Interior Department,

All 4 Contending Parties Represented

Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and A. E. Demaray, associate director of National Park Service;

Harry S. Wender and James E. Schwab, sr., of the D. C. Recreation Board;

Ray C. Alvis, local representative of the Cleveland Concession Co.;

Robert W. McCullough and William O'Connell, attorneys, and Edward Costigan, businessman.

Other members of the congressional subcommittee include J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.); Lloyd M. Bentsen, jr., (D., Tex.); Wayne N. Aspinall (D., Colo.); Wesley A. D'Ewart (R., Mont.) and Norris Poulson (R., Calif.).

Ken Stribling Favored in Hansbury Bout

Johnny Hansbury, 21-year-old local middleweight, goes after another of his "upsets" in the featured ten - rounder at Turner's Arena tomorrow night.

Hansbury will meet his District rival, Ken Stribling. Young Johnny has a habit of knocking off the favorites, his most convincing win coming early last fall at Turner's over Laverne Roache, who had given Middleweight Champion Marcel Cerdan a merry battle before losing to him in Madison Square Garden.

Hansbury also was 4-1 underdog the night he fought Frank Lacey in Baltimore, and wound up with a draw. Last June he was pitted against Al Wright, a 6-1 favorite, and finished off Wright in the first round.

Stribling, however, has a habit of not losing to the local rivals at Turner's. He beat Lacey at the Arena and more recently won practically every round of a ten from Smuggy Hursey, once the king of the local middles.

The supporting card shows Jimmy Jones against Ike Martin, of Baltimore, in a five, and in fours Ralph Gonzales against Al Harris, Eddie Woodson vs. Little Dynamite, Gene Garber, of Baltimore, against John Sullivan and Joe Bickle against Ben Harrison.

Terp Matmen Top AAU Meet

The University of Maryland grabbed most of the honors last night as the annual District AAU wrestling tournament ended at Ritchie Coliseum.

The Terps' A team scored the most points, 55, and their 175-pound co-captain, Bob Marsheck, who pinned Catholic U.'s Ralph Hubert in 2:20 for the title, was named the tourney's outstanding performer.

Trailing in team points were: Gallaudet A, 31; Georgetown, 18; Maryland B, 16; Catholic U., 11; Gallaudet B, 5; YMCA, 1; Navy Quarters K, 1; Woodward Prep, 1; and St. Albans High, 0.

Navy Nine Opens With 12-2 Victory

Annapolis, Md., March 26 (AP).—Lee Rensberger, righthanded fastball artist, opened Navy's baseball season with a 12-2 victory today over Colby College.

Rensberger gave up five hits and one run before retiring at the end of the eighth. Three Colby hurlers were unable to stem the Navy deluge in a contest that started and ended in a drizzle.

The roof fell in on losing Pitcher Frank Gavel when Navy erupted with a four-run fourth inning.

National Arena Host Today to Roller Classics

Skating stars of four cities will see action in the collegiate dance roller skating competition today at the National Arena, 17th and Kalorama rd.

Some 30 teams will represent the National, Alexandria, Richmond and Baltimore Arenas in the event. Eliminations will be held from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., semi-finals from 5 to 7 and the finals are slated to begin at 9 p.m.

National is entering 12 teams, the largest representation among the rinks. The teams will be led by the husband-and-wife combination of Ann and Bill Burgart, the local arena's outstanding entry in the sectional and national dance events last year.

The nearby Virginia rink will be represented by six teams, including Edgar Swinney and Irene Schneider, 12-year-old juvenile pair champions of Maryland.

Boxing Finals at Turner's

Marshall, Grant Seek Second Straight AAU Titles Tuesday

A pair of 1948 senior champions and two novice winners from the same tourney will seek senior titles and places on the Washington team competing in the Nationals when the District of Columbia AAU boxing chapionships wind up Tuesday night at Turner's Arena.

The seniors seeking repeats are Eddie Marshall, 160-pounder from Police Boys Club No. 2, and Eddie Grant, Apollo Club heavyweight.

Marshall, a heavy hitter, won the light heavyweight championship last year. However, he fought in the national championships as a middleweight after hitting the scales at only 158 in Boston.

Marshall Meets Kennett

In this tourney Marshall elected to forfeit all claim on his 175-pound title to compete as a middleweight. In the quarterfinals Marshall outpointed Tommy Harrison, the Army's Far Eastern champion, and in the semifinals he whipped Jimmy Finley, recent victor in Golden Gloves novice competition.

Tuesday night Marshall opposes rangy Eddie Kennett, son of the Barney Neighborhood House coach, who reached the tournament finals last year.

Eddie Grant is defending his heavyweight championship. At the same time he is bidding for a clean sweep among the local amateurs inasmuch as Grant is the 1949 Golden Gloves senior heavyweight ruler.

Grant's Won One

The big boy, who promised himself another trip to the national championships after dropping his first fight there last year, has made only one tourney appearance in his title defense, defeating semifinalist Thurman Moore. He faces Fred Samuelson, St. Mary's Club, in the titular battle.

Willie Davis and Herbert Stowe, winners of the novice class lightweight and middleweight crowns, respectively, last year, have both reached the finals in their debuts in the senior sector. Davis, an Apollo entry, faves Dave Robinson, Olympic Club, in the 135-pound duel. Stowe, unattached, now campaigning as a welterweight, will meet Connie Wilkins, Police Boys Club No. 2, in the 147-pound finals.

Final round pairings:

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Impact of Atlantic Pact

The North Atlantic Pact may be an important economic signal: The gradual reduction of United States arms expenditures, the gradual reduction of taxes, and the gradual reduction of the national debt. It may mark the start of a fiscal era like that which followed the First World War, when Andrew Mellon was Secretary of the Treasury and the proud reducer of the Federal debt.

Livingston

Mellon was able to cut both the debt and taxes. And without deflation. As Mellon paid off Government Bonds, holders used the money for industrial expansion and for investment in other securities, including common stocks. State and local governments built roads, sewage systems, schools, etc. As the Federal Government ceased spending, local governments expanded expenditures. It was an era of peace and prosperity.

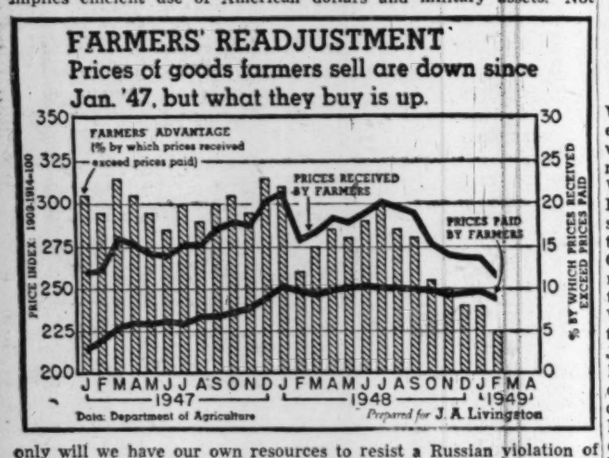
So far, commentary on the pact has emphasized the dangers of war, the intensification of international discord. Yet the pact could have a quieting effect. As the London Economist shrewdly observes, "Hitler had in 1939 the certainty—in the black and white of the neutrality acts—that America would not intervene if he went to war. Mr. Stalin in 1949 has the certainty of the exact opposite." Hitler's certainty led to the rape of Czechoslovakia, the invasion of Poland. Stalin's certainty may lead to negotiations and peace.

A little-noticed paragragh in the recently issued State Department White Paper takes this optimistic view. It states that the pact "defines the security of the North Atlantic area and the consequences of infringement" and "should thereby enhance the likelihood of reaching peaceful solutions."

The pact hasn't worsened United States relations with Russia. It merely accepts them as they are. Nor has it increased the prospective cost of the United States military commitment. If the Kremlin decides to continue the cold war, then we'll be exactly where we were. In his budget message on January 10, President Truman indicated he would ask Congress for funds to provide military supplies to aid western European nations. The Atlantic Pact activates that statement. It doesn't add to it. And, conceivably, it could—in time—subtract from it.

Pooled Resources, Not Dispersed Strength

Now that a defensive alliance has been signed, the military forces of western Europe will be unified, instead of divided, independent and dispersed—as when Hitler attacked the Low Countries. Belgium won't be holding out, refusing consultation to the last minute. Which implies efficient use of American dollars and military assets. Not only will we have our own resources to resist a Russian violation of the Truman Doctrine, but now we can rely on the help of others, of pooled resources. Thus, the ultimate United States burden is diminished.



All the foregoing is based on an assumption that even for the Russians the cold war is too expensive to be perpetuated. The Russians have to maintain a large military establishment at the expense of civilian consumption. And they are barred from importing from the United States much-needed machinery. As a counter move, they're reducing exports of manganese to the United States and are even threatening to reduce shipments of furs. This last is cutting off the nose to spite the face.

The Farmer's Position

The markets of the world may be taking an optimistic view of world conditions. The decline in lead prices followed by zinc quotations indicates that the acute shortage in nonferrous metals is at an end, that increased war needs are discounted. Copper producers foresee a drop in price before the year is out. The price of scrap steel has slipped anew, and Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., a leading manufacturer of alloy steels, has shut down one electric furnace and two open-hearths at Brackenridge, Pa., just outside Pittsburgh. Obviously, stell is in easier supply.

Farm prices had reflected the shift in the world supply-demand position much earlier. Since January, 1948, the products farmers sell have been declining (see chart), partly because of increased production of grains in Europe. When industrial prices continued to rise, the farmer lost much of his postwar advantage in buying power. Now, as prices of metals, durable consumer goods, etc., decline, the farm dollar may begin getting a bit bigger.

Even the unhappy stock market shows some zip. That may be a belated effect of the bullish article in Life Magazine, asserting that many stocks can be bought at prices for below book value. But it also may be due to a feeling that the Atlantic Pact may clarify and improve United States relations with Russia. At the annual meeting of the Financial Analysts Association in New York about two weeks ago, stock market forecasters agreed on one point only: A bull market couldn't start until the outlook for peace was brighter.

Late Easter Distorts D. C. Sales Figure

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended March 19 were down 7 per cent compared with the like week in 1948, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

However, the figure was deceptive. Easter is the big factor. The March 19 week is the fourth week before Easter, while the like week in 1948 was the heavy-shopping second week before Easter.

In the area surrounding Washington, store sales showed an even sharper downturn in comparison with last year. Baltimore sales in the week ended March 19 were 26 per cent down, while the Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole average 17 per cent lower.

For the four weeks ended March 19, local store sales trended 2 per cent down down while the regional drop was 12 per cent.

Nationally, store sales were off 16 per cent for the week and down 10 per cent for the four-week period.

LIGGETT STORES: Th Ford Hopkins Co., drugstore operators, has purchased the 14 Midwestern stores of the Liggett drug stores. Joseph Armon, vice president and general manager of Ford Hopkins, announced the purchase but not the price paid. Liggett is a subsidiary of Rexall Drug, Inc. Armon said the Liggett stores will be absorbed soon. They include eight in Chicago, two in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and one each in Detroit, Miiwaukee, Alton, Ill., and Des Moines, Iowa. The sale does not affect Liggett stores in other parts of the Nation.

CONFERENCE: The third annual Washington Conference on Government and Business Relations will be held April 9, it was announced yesterday by Wilford L. White, president of the Harvard Business Club of Washington, sponsoring organization. More than 400 alumni of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration are expected to attend the all-day session at the Wardman Park Hotel. Among the array of speakers will be John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank; Leon H. Keyserling, vice chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; Paul M. Mazur, partner in Lehman Brothers, and Norman J. Makin, Ambassador of Australia.

B. & L. LEAGUE: The regular monthly meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on Tuesday, at 12:30 p. m. W. H. Blanz, secretary of the American Building Association, is slated to present final plans for the Old Point Comfort, Va., conference, April 24-27.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Southern Railway Co. yesterday announced promotions of M. G. Chew to assistant treasurer; Robert H. Smith to assistant treasurer; E. W. Rawlins to cashier, and H. B. Porter to assistant cashier . . . Carter Manasco, a member of the Hoover Commission, will address the Washington Chapter of Society for Advancement of Management at a session Tuseday night . . . Philip A. Singleton, manager of the Washington office of Monsanto Chemical Co., has been named vice president of New England Chemical Co. of Boston . . . Dr. Warren L. McCabe has been elected a vice president and director of research of the Flintkote Co.

NOSTALGIC LOOK. Ten years ago you could buy a new four-door sedan for $825 . . . Sirloin steak was 39 cents a pound . . . milk averaged 12½ cents a quart . . . You could build a five-room modern house for around $3000. (But we had 10 million unemployed then. There was always something a little wrong with the good old days.")

INNOVATION: Phonevision is one of the coming innovations for television. By this method, developed by Zenith Radio Corp., it will be possible for television stations to broadcast features that will present a garbled picture on all video receivers except those which receive a special decoding signal over their telephone lines. In order receive a decoding signal and thereby get a clear picture, set owners must call their telephone operators. They will be charged a fee for this service on their monthly telephone bill. Phonevision thus will allow showing of first-run motion pictures that are too costly for advertising sponsorship. First public tests of Phonevision will be made this year, according to Comdr. E. F. McDonald, jr., Zenith president.

Steel Output Tops War-Time Record

Pittsburgh, March 26 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills made more steel during the two-week coal mine shutdown than they did during any two weeks in World War II.

They did it by burning up their "fat." The "fat" was a bigger than usual supply of mined coal stored above ground when miners east of the Mississippi started John L. Lewis memorial-protest work stoppage.

The amount of coal on hand at the walkout's start, March 14, and the quantity to be available at tomorrow's scheduled end of the work interruption is unknown. Steel companies rarely publicize the size of their stockpiles of coal.

During the first week of the mine shutdown, mills production of ingots and castings was estimated at 1,880,400 net tons, an all-time record. This week mills again operated at more than 100 per cent of rated capacity and turned out an estimated 1,863,800 tons, more than were made any week in the peak war year of 1944.

3,744,200 Tons in Two Weeks

Estimated production of ingots and castings during the two weeks of the mine shutdown total 3,744,200, compared with the wartime two week record of 3,552,200 set during March of 1944. Production during the first week of the shutdown set a new all-time record.

The effect of mine closings on steel prices is not yet fully apparent. News of the stop-work order found steel buying gradually drifting downward from its postwar bulge.

The trend toward price deflation was most marked in products where some regular producers had been quoting higher prices than competitors. For example, there has been a $13 a ton difference in mill prices quoted for one grade of wire.

Signs of Falling Demand

Reflecting a big drop in the demand for alloy products, several companies announced plans to close open hearth and electric furnaces. They were Republic Steel Co. and Crucible Steel Co., while the Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp. shutdown two open hearths and one electric furnace because of a declining demand for silicon steel.

The Fontana steel plant of the Kaiser Co., Inc., cut prices $10 to $30 a ton.

Some Strikers Back on Jobs

Some Canada Dry Bottling Co. employes were back on the job yesterday at the firm's struck Silver Spring plant.

Spokesmen for Local 67, Beverage Drivers Union (AFL), however, said the 10-day-old strike remained in effect and that all drivers and driver-salesmen, are still out.

Frank Masterson, Canada Dry division manager, said the firm sent telegrams to the approximately 40 men on strike telling them to report to work by last Thursday or be discharged.

He estimated 95 per cent of the striking employes had returned, although T. Caton, union business agent, put it at 30 per cent.

Caton said Canada Dry's pay scale is about 10 cents an hour over that in other beverage plants, but an ironclad policy against overtime made the take-home pay less.

Masterson, who pointed to the higher hourly pay, said the union wanted a 5-cent-an-hour increase, a $10 increase in vacation pay, and employment of helpers on trucks.

Decline in Output Slackening, Say Buying Agents

New York, March 26 (AP).—The year-end decline in industrial activity "has definitely lost momentum," the business survey committee of the National Association of Purchasing Agents reported today.

Production is now generally at levels that are being maintained and in some instances improved, the committee said, basing its conclusions on March reports of purchasing executives.

"Sixteen per cent of the reports for March show increased production, while 48 per cent hold a steady program of operations, many on curtailed schedules established after four months' decline," the survey statement added.

"Confirming that trend, 16 per cent report some increase in order backlogs, while 46 per cent have maintained the February position and, by that gauge, show no further shrinkage of demand."

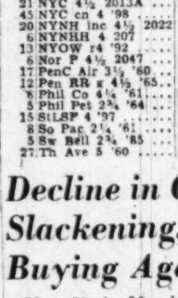
William Dalton, executive vice president of the National Association of Refrigerated Warehouses, with offices here, was elected general secretary of the American Warehousemen's Association at that group's recent fifty-eighth annual convention. He had been serving as acting general secretary.



Dalton

Dalton has been in trade association work for several years with headquarters in the South and New York City, and was previously a food manufacturer in the Midwest. He came to Washington in 1947 as executive head of NARW and is an active member of the Washington Trade Association Executives.

NARW is a division of AWA which also has its headquarters in Washington.

GM Stockholders Number 434,684

A year-end study of General Motors stock distribution has disclosed that at the end of 1948 there were owners of the company in every State in the Nation, the District of Columbia, six United States possessions and 77 foreign lands, of which 28 are European countries.

The total number of common and preferred stockholders for the first quarter of 1949 was 434,684, compared with 433,191 for the fourth quarter of 1948 and with 435,905 for the first quarter of 1948. There were 403,707 holders of common stock and the balance of 30,977 represents holders of preferred stock.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 431 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 4.2 per cent below production for the week ending March 19. In the same week new orders of these mills were 14.2 per cent above production. Unfilled order files of the reporting mills amount to 37 per cent of stocks.

Cherry Blossom Princesses

ON FRIDAY, Miss Jody Miller, representing the District of Columbia, will spin a big "wheel of fortune," and when it stops, one of the 51 princesses representing the 48 States, 2 possessions and the National Capital, will be crowned Queen of the Cherry Blossom Festival.

The three-day celebration will begin with a ball on Friday, for which the Armory will be lined with a small forest of real nine-foot trees decorated with artificial cherry blossoms. The circle boxes reserved for the princesses will surround the "tidal basin" and the entire floor will be bathed in the soft, moonlike glow of myriad lights.

The Queen might well be one of the princesses pictured on this page. But, then, she might not. Whoever the Queen, she will reign supreme during the celebration. In addition to the water carnival on Saturday, a pageant will be staged depicting the importation of the cherry blossom tree from its original Oriental surroundings.

MISS MARY LOUISE LEE, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Josh Lee, has been picked by Oklahomans as their Cherry Blossom Princess, who may be the one to be crowned queen. She's a student at National Cathedral School

Diplomatic Circling

Washington Society To Fete Pact Signers

By Elizabeth Maguire

A MOST distinguished gathering of diplomats is converging on the Capital for the signing of the Atlantic Pact on April 4. The original signators—the Benelux countries, Canada, France, Norway, the United Kingdom and the United States—expect to be joined by Denmark, Iceland, Italy and Portugal.

Paul Henri Spaak, Foreign Minister of Belgium, is arriving on the Queen Mary March 30th, accompanied by Walter Loridan, director general of the Division of Foreign Policy, and Conrad Seyfert, Chief of Cabinet. Also on board the Queen Mary will be British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin, accompanied by Sir Gladywyn Jebb.

Halvard M. Lange, Foreign Minister of Norway, and Robert Schuman, Foreign Minister of France, are flying over, arriving the end of the month. Dirk Stikker, Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, is arriving in New York on the 30th, and Count Sforza of Italy is flying from Paris on the 31st.

No definite dates have been set for parties for these pact-signing potentates, but there will certainly be a deluge of luncheons, dinners and speeches, and the cocktail hours will be more frantic than ever. With exchange of different cultures, it's interesting to contemplate the pyramid's continental future.

There will be a reception in honor of the Foreign Minister of Italy, Count Sforza, given by the Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani at the embassy on April 2.

The Ambassador of Portugal, Pedro Theotonio Pereira, is entertaining at a cocktail party on Wednesday, March 30.

JOHN MUCCIO, first United States Ambassador to Korea, left Washington Wednesday, flying to the coast, and from there by plane to Korea. He has been in Korea for the past six months, and before that in Germany with Political Adviser Robert Murphy. Mr. Muccio is a bachelor in his early forties. He's six feet tall, has a ruddy complexion and blue eyes.

In Korea, he says, everything steps along at a lively pace. The Government is new and there are new personalities and new ideas. The climate is like southern New England. Mr. Muccio finds it a fascinating place and he was happy to be on his way back. Embassy staff members in Korea total about 300, including ECA workers.

Dr. John Myun Chang, Korean Ambassador to the United States, who lives at the Wardman Park Hotel, is waiting to present his credentials to President Truman.

MYRON MELVILLE COWEN, retiring U. S. Ambassador to Australia and Ambassador-designate to the Republic of the Philippines, arrived in Washington Friday. The former U. S. Ambassador to the Philippines, Emmet O'Neal, told President Truman he is no longer interested in diplomatic posts, but

Miss Crawford, Colorful Educator

Dean of 'Floating College' Here as Delegate to Give Push to Equal Rights Drive

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

IN WASHINGTON for the National Woman's Party Conference is one of our more colorful educators, Mary Sinclair Crawford, the flying Dean, now Emeritus of the University of Southern California. She's a vice chairman of the Conference Committee and is the official delegate representing more than three million women from Southern California, all careerists and club members, on the coordinating council which intends to pass the equal rights amendment—or else.

Dean Crawford, a professor of old French, practically initiated the idea of chaperoning students overseas to polish off their studies. She became Dean of the Floating University and in prewar days escorted her students through the Black Sea to such future historically interesting places as Yalta.

Dean Crawford acquired her nickname because she started traveling everywhere by air as far back as the early twenties. She became President of the Board of Aeronautics out Los Angeles way, served for many years, finally relinquishing her post to Mary Pickford.

This past summer, after her retirement from active deanship, she sailed leisurely through the Pacific for four months on a Norwegian freighter. She visited many of her former pupils throughout the Orient, was asked to stay over and take charge of an educational program in Korea. One of her

Even Robins Bow to Hats As Pretty Signs of Spring

By Peggy Preston

HATS that bloom in the spring have a way of being the prettiest of the year. And this Easter's bonnets are no exceptions to the rule.

Flowers, flowers are everywhere on these festive new bonnets. They dip down the nape of the neck, spring up from the crown, cluster around the ears or sweep across the brim. Sometimes they form an entire hat, as in the case of Laddy Northridge's lovely lily-of-the-valley models. Or they may be delicately combined with sheer veiling, like the charmer which Washington's own Mme. Camille Chautemps designed of small, butterfly orchids and soft net.

The big, wide-brimmed straw, laden with blossoms, is a strong favorite in the hat race. Knox, the well-known hatter whose fame once rested solely on classic felts, goes feminine and frivolous this season, offering great straw cartwheels, bedecked with roses and tulle, and natural-colored milans sprayed with cornflowers and banded in black velvet.

RIGHT on the heels of New York Designer Elizabeth Hawes' visit to Washington comes word that yet another talented young woman in the field of dress design is due in town.

She is Claire McCardle, whose climb to her assured place at the top of the ladder began when she was a tiny tot making dolls' clothes in her home town of Frederick, Md. Miss McCardle, now chief designer for Townley Frocks in New York, will be guest of honor at a luncheon on April 6, to be given by the Women's Advertising Club of Washington.

Miss Hawes, who brought her custom-made collection down here for last night's fashion show and dance given by the Bryn Mawr Club, and Miss McCardle have a remarkably similar approach to fashion. Both are inclined to stick to their guns, despite current fads or vogues. For this reason each has attracted a constant group of followers who will not be lured away.

College girls and young career women comprise most of the McCardle faithfuls. In her clothes they find the freedom of movement, versatility and touches of individuality that they crave. She gives them a basic silhouette of full skirt, belted waistline and small bodice.

COUNTESS JONA does a wonderful bacu straw, at left, with a butterfly wing swing to the intricately molded brim. On it she plants a cluster of blossoms, including Easter lilies, and lilies of the valley, held in place with a tie of purple velvet. Shop Individual offers the petite straw, at right, cut on the Dior side slant line. It is made of shantung straw in a soft sapphire pink shade. The shaft of flowers at one side are hand-painted imports, representing roses, iris and sweetpeas, tied with a band of royal blue

VIVID, vital nasturtium red is used in the straw of this becoming little hat, which dips softly and gently to one side. Clusters of the same flowers, in shades of red, orange and yellow are pinned at either side, held together with a neutral-tone forehead veil. It is from the spring collection of Mme. Camille Chautemps

FRAGILE and lovely is this great cartwheel of white fancy hair, faced with navy blue milan, from the Shop Individual. The rounded crown is bounded with a navy chiffon scarf which is knotted at one side, the ends forming, long, graceful streamers

All hats pictured were shown at the Hotel Statler's weekly Fashion Fair. Photographs are by Dimitri Wolkonsky

DUET of charmers from the Bethesda shop of hat designer Elies. Wide-brimmed black straw, at right, is circled with pale pink maline. Center of interest is at the back, where bouquets of petal pink flowers fall gracefully and circle at one side to frame the cheek. White lilacs, spring's most fragrant flower, form a half circle on the hat at left. They are attached to a mold of white maline

Anthropologist Contends

Saturday Should Be Father's Day

SATURDAY mornings—for fathers fortunate enough to have their Saturdays free—should be agreed upon in this country as a kind of national "father's day" to allow fathers and children to work and play together, according to Dr. Margaret Mead, anthropologist and authority on family life.

Interviewed this month by the women's division of the Institute of Life Insurance, Dr. Mead declared that one of the pressing needs in the United States is for fathers to give their wives more help in the day-to-day job of rearing and disciplining children. If they could take charge of their children for only a few hours on Saturday mornings, she believes, the American family would present a different and happier picture.

"The five-day work week is one of the promising developments for better family life in America," Dr. Mead declared. "Free Saturday mornings can give a father a chance to really learn more about his children and can teach him how to avoid the two extremes of overindulgence and sudden, unpredictable sternness. And it would not only give the children's mother a few hours' freedom, but help relieve her of the very difficult responsibility of forever trying to be both the children's mother and their sole disciplinarian.

"The new kind of family living we are developing in this country puts heavy demands upon the wife and young mother. Our young people are marrying after short acquaintances, living in strange communities away from their relatives, among temporary friends and associates. This, and America's traditional habits of turning the responsibilities of parenthood over to women, mean that women need all the help they can get and makes it important to foster every attempt to get fathers more into home life.

"The number of young fathers who are finding they like nothing better than being with their children is perhaps increasing in America. This is partly so because so many of these young fathers are veterans who were once separated from their families and have come to realize the importance of their family to their own happiness. This is a promising, positive trend in American life."

Associate curator of New York's American Museum of National History, Dr. Mead has published a number of studies of family life in the United States and in other civilizations and is author if the important war-time book, "And Keep Your Powder Dry." She is author of the forthcoming book, "Male and Female: A study of the Sexes in a Changing World," to be published in May.

In addition to bringing fathers more into family life, Dr. Mead sees other steps which are necessary if what she terms our "new and fragile" forms of family living are to strengthen and develop. Particularly, she believes, some help from the community is necessary to take the place of the strength and support which a family formerly received from grandparents, other relatives, and from closer relationships with its neighborhood.

Cook, Newly Employed in Wealthy Household, Is Privately Much Annoyed by Lady's Habit Of Drying Her Hands on Clean Dish Towels

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a cook for a wealthy family and I have a very good place to live, with a promising future; and I want to adjust myself to it. But I have a problem that bothers me no end.

My boss won't keep a hand towel in the kitchen, and she is always drying her dirty hands on my dish towels. In all my life I have never used the dish towel for a hand towel; and after I came here four months ago I got my own paper towels and keep them in a drawer.

Once in a while the boss will use one of them; but it seems she can't stand paper. When I see her drying her hands on the dish towel, I am afraid sometimes that I will blurt out what a dirty habit it is. I do talk back quite a lot, but try to watch my step.

Cook Says Mistress Has Biting Tongue

THE GARDENER really fusses back quite a lot and she doesn't discharge him. Sometimes I think she deserves it; but still I don't think it's a servant's place to stoop so low. She has a very biting tongue and cuts you to the quick so easily.

Now I think people who want to reprimand should take the edge off, something like this: "Now Anna, I think you do this or that fine; but I believe you could improve on so-and-so." Or, "I wish you would do so-and-so." But it isn't my place to tell my boss how to talk to me, so I must try to deaden my sensitive heart or soul so I won't be hurt.

I do think an article might help people be more considerate of their servants, if you would print my problem and give your answer.

C. G.

Good Adjustment Begins With Self

DEAR C. G.: The best way to improve this situation is to start on yourself. That's the Golden Rule of success in making adjustments. Kind actions influence people when harsh words fail.

Instead of feeling angry with the boss for drying her hands on your dish towels, why not recognize the fact that she just doesn't know much about keeping a shipshape kitchen. Being wealthy, she probably never had a chance to learn.

You are the expert in that field; at least, I hope you are. And as you take a loving pride in keeping the kitchen up to your standards, the boss will learn—sooner or later—to take grateful pride in the way you do things.

Now may I suggest a friendly experiment: Since this is a good home and a good job with a promising future, can't you afford to invest in a gift for the kitchen to make yourself happy, and to show the boss—if she happens to notice—that you have a permanent feeling about the place.

Gentle Manners Win Confidence

SURELY she wouldn't mind if you bought maybe three cloth hand towels, in soft white or to match the dish towels, and kept them laundered and one always hung out ready for use. You already know she doesn't like paper towels; also that she reaches automatically for a dish towel; and it would be a nice courtesy to indicate that you've catered to her taste and convenience.

If she sputters tartly and says, "What's this? Where did it come from? Anna, I can't have—," etc., wait until she's finished and then say kindly, "It's a little gift for the kitchen, ma'am. I hope you don't mind. It's just something I thought of—," and then speak some praise of other kitchen conveniences or working conditions, and really mean it.

The soft answer turneth away wrath; a gentle manner will give you dignity and win her confidence in time; and if you persist in this and politely ignore the gardener's rudeness, you may become a truly godly influence in her household while it is your home.

John M. Brown Lecture To Aid Frontier Nurses

THE Washington Committee of the Frontier Nursing Service of Kentucky has announced that John Mason Brown will again be lecturer at the annual benefit which will take place April 25 in the Mayflower Hotel Ballroom.

Brown, popular lecturer and author who is now associate editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, has been the lecturer for the Washington benefit for many years and is being brought back by popular demand.

Mrs. Adolphus Staton, newly elected chairman of the Washington Committee, has announced that the speaker's topic will be a 1949 version of "Seein Things," a discussion of current affairs in a light vein.

Also on the afternoon's program, will be Mrs. Mary Breckinridge, founder and director of the Frontier Nursing Service, who will show pictures and give latest reports on her "nurses on horseback" who provide such effective nursing service in the remote Kentucky mountain areas, that the Department of State recently described the service and gave it as an example for rural nursing all over the world, in its Air Bulletin which is distributed overseas.

Working with Mrs. Staton on the benefit are several "two generation teams" including Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner and her daughter, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, jr.; Mrs. John Washington Davidge and her daughter, Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr.; Mrs. Charles F. Wilson and her daughter, Mrs. Samuel E. Neel; Mrs. Louis Greene and her daughter, Anne, and Mrs. Neville Miller and her daughter, Barbara. All of the daughters and some of the mothers have served as couriers in Kentucky.

Other members of the benefit committee are Mrs. Nelson Perin, box chairman, and Mme. Draper Boncompagni, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Stanley Reed and Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, who will assist her.

Others are Mrs. William A. Morgan, treasurer; Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, Mrs. Oliver McKee, Mrs. Walter White and Mrs. John S. Graham.

Among the new members this year, is Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt whose father, Vice President Barkley, has been a patron of the Frontier Nurses for many years.

Hostesses Named for House and Embassy Tour

Mrs. Paul B. Magnuson and Mrs. Paul H. Nitze, cochairmen of the eighth annual House and Embassy Tour, promise that there will be hostesses in each house who will be able to answer all questions on historical and architectural details of the buildings.

Mrs. Robert Taft and Mrs. George Malone are cochairmen of hostesses for the Norwegian Embassy; Mrs. William F. Newton and Mrs. Lister Hill, Iranian Embassy; Mrs. Emerson Bigelow, Miss Janet Fish and Mrs. Cornelius Wood, Canadian Embassy; Mrs. Lyttleton Fox and Mrs. Peter Dewey of the Brazilian Embassy; Mrs. W. Walton Butterworth and Mrs. Ray Atherton, British Embassy; Mrs. George Maurice Morris and Mrs. George Mesta, South African Embassy; Mrs. W. John Kenney and Mrs. Robert B. Carney, Admiral's House; Mrs. James Totten and Mrs. John G. Carter, Apostolic Delegation; Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz and Mrs. Robert Gilpin Ervin, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Harrison; Mrs. H. Conger Pratt and Mrs. Wade H. Haislip, for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Tompkins.

Tickets for the tour, which will benefit the Washington Home for Incurables, are on sale at Brentano book stores, Francis Scott Key Book Shop, AAA, Raleigh Hotel, Hotel 2400 and the Cotton Shop.

How to Conduct Your Clean-Up Campaign Best

Spring is the signal for enthusiastic school clean-up campaigns in many communities. These campaigns concern, not just school buildings and grounds, but the entire community. The goal is to make homes and surroundings clean, safe, healthy and beautiful.

Although the students make quick work of clearing cluttered vacant lots and garbage-littered alleys, their most important responsibility is to encourage residents of the community to participate in the campaign.

Property owners can give serious purpose to the student campaign by making their premises meet the requirements set by the school campaign. Some of the things to be done are:

1. Check homes and buildings for possible fire hazards. It is especially important to remove accumulations of newspapers and other flammable materials from basements, attics and storerooms.
2. Be certain that garbage is stored so that it is inaccessible to rats and insects. The use of covered galvanized steel ash and garbage cans for the storage of refuse between collection periods is recommended.
3. Clear yards and buildings of such things as stacks of lumber, boxes and barrels which provide living quarters for disease-spreading rats.
4. Do the cleaning, repairing and painting needed to make the premises clean, safe and attractive.

Magazine Defines Cotton Fabrics

When you shop for cotton dresses this spring, you'll see plenty of tags identifying the fabrics from which they're made. But they'll be of little help to you if you don't know the difference between mercerized and sanforized or that waffle pique isn't true pique at all.

For those who like to "know what they're shopping about," the April issue of Good Housekeeping magazine presents a "Dictionary of Cotton Terms." Thirty-four of the more commonly used words to describe cotton fabrics are clearly defined.

Drawing On Wall Made Easy

How delighted would your children be to have their favorite story-book character as "big as life" on the nursery wall? You can give them just that and without ever taking a drawing lesson. The April issue of House Beautiful magazine shows a simple way to transpose an illustration by means of a grid chart.

The article was written by a mother who explains that "the children's room is small and dark, so we decided to decorate its walls with a design which would give color and a feeling of spaciousness. We found just what we wanted," the mother continues, "in a picture the children loved of Wee Willie Winkie, running pell-mell over a cobblestone street through a town of crooked, fairy-tale houses. It was good for our purpose because of its gaiety and perspective."

Three sketches accompany the article to illustrate the technique of transposing the picture, and a photograph shows the finished mural masterpiece. "Our children," writes the mother, "were overjoyed to see the bedroom wall enlivened with their favorite nursery rhyme . . . It was so easy to handle that even our youngest was able to help with the large areas."

Dean Crawford Pushing Drive for Equal Rights

favorite students, Louise Yim, is now the Minister of the Interior in Korea where, incidentally, equal rights are part and parcel of the new constitution.

Louise turned up in Dean Crawford's campus office many years ago and asked for a scholarship. The University of Southern California was just starting and the dean had given away every scholarship penny. The sum needed was merely a hundred and fifty dollars. The dean offered to put up fifty herself if the balance could be found.

Louise had no resources whatsoever. As Miss Crawford was just leaving for a lunchtime speaking engagement, she asked the young Korean to come back at 3—and perhaps by then she would have been able to scare up the money.

The dean arrived late for the luncheon and a sympathetic member of the audience said to her that she must have a great many worries — financial and otherwise. The dean agreed, told Louise's story. Without hesitation the lady whipped out her pen and wrote a check for the requisite amount.

Back in her office promptly on the dot of 3, Louise turned up for the money. "How did you know I'd have it for you?" asked Dean Crawford. Louise never batted an eye: "I had faith," she replied.

The ensuing years money was found for Louise's education by Miss Crawford. She went back to Korea, and was on the Japanese death list the month the Americans arrived. She did a magnificent job for our army and when the Korean Government was set up became the first woman cabinet minister.

After the conference Dean Crawford will return to Los Angeles then skip back to Europe to visit more of her former pupils. She would be a nifty in some Government job of rehabilitating women and their organizations in western Europe.

"Impending Headlines"

THE select few bigshots with whom former Prime Minister Winston Churchill has talked have heard his second fear of impending "blood, sweat and tears". In previews of what he wants to say, but has undoubtedly been persuaded not to say in his forthcoming speech at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Mr. Churchill has outlined the headlines which he claims are always made six months in advance. First, it is entirely a question of "put up or shut up."

In the East we're licked already since all China to the Yellow River is completely under Soviet control. Soon the East Indies will be gathered entirely into the Communist fold. War, which might flare by November, will flicker first in Turkey, be fought through Syria and the Middle East. In the West no ground must be conceded.

The airlift cannot be maintained with necessary efficiency after next October. The Russians have the secret of plutonium fracture. Though their production methods will not attain our perfection for possibly another five years, Soviet atom bombs have sufficient strength to wrack great destruction—especially on a first jumpoff. The real frontier is the British Channel and the time for first move leading to later attack may be around Labor Day.

So we must come back to the old principle which sustained us though the last World War—An American-British Alliance so close that our respective citizenships are interchangeable.

In New York it is said President Truman canceled his speech at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology because of preknowledge that Mr. Churchill intended to stress the American-British Alliance, the English Channel frontier.

Gov. Lane Fetes Assembly At Brilliant Reception

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 26.—Outstanding among the delightful parties of this season's session of the Maryland General Assembly was the reception given last Wednesday evening by the Governor of Maryland and Mrs. William Preston Lane, jr., for members of the Assembly and their ladies. The executive mansion was resplendent with lights and flowers and thronged by hundreds of guests from all parts of the State.

Receiving the guests with Governor and Mrs. Lane were the President of the Senate Joseph R. Byrnes and Mrs. Byrnes, Speaker of the House Ferdinand Sybert and Mrs. Sybert, Senator and Mrs. Harold L. Sothoron, Senator and Mrs. Robert Kimball, Floor Leader of the House Leroy Pumphrey and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ramsburg. Miss Dorothy Lane, daughter of Governor and Mrs. Lane, and Mrs. Lane's mother, Mrs. Lewis Byron, of Hagerstown, also were present.

Soft Music Enjoyed

Soft music was an enjoyable feature of the occasion, and a delicious supper was served during the evening. The reception, which was from 8 to 10 o'clock, was followed by an elaborate ball at Carvel Hall. Music for dancing was furnished in both the dining room and the Severn Room by Joseph Bertorelli's orchestra. Mr. Bertorelli, a Baltimorean, is a member of the House of Delegates.

A hop for midshipmen of the first, second and third classes was held Saturday night, March 19, from 9:15 to midnight, in Dahlgren Hall. Mrs. Phillips, wife of Assistant Professor Chester W. Phillips of the department of physical training at the Naval Academy, received the midshipmen and their guests.

The regimental hop in the evening was preceded by an afternoon "informal" for all three classes, with dancing from 4:30 to 6:15 o'clock in smoke hall.

Capt. Charles C. Slayton of Annapolis, whose talents as a magician are well known locally, entertained members of the Annapolitan Club and their guests at a stag get-together on Monday night at 8 o'clock at the club.

Navy Wives Gather

The wives of Navy doctors and dentists stationed here gathered at the Officers' Club of the Naval Academy Thursday for their monthly bridge-luncheon. Mrs. Robert Pennington, jr., and Mrs. Kenneth L. Longeway were in charge of arrangements.

The St. Patrick's dance held Thursday night, March 17, at the Officers' Club was enjoyed by a large crowd of the officers on the station and their guests. Dancing from 8 o'clock to midnight was preceded by dinner, which was served from 6 to 9. The Naval Academy Orchestra furnished the music.

Comdr. and Mrs. Ian C. Eddy of 41 Upshur rd., Naval Academy, entertained at cocktails Thursday evening for about 150 guests. The party was given at the Officers' Club.

Wives of members of the department of electrical engineers at the Naval Academy gathered for luncheon on Friday at the Officers' Club. Mrs. Smedberg, wife of Capt. William R. Smedberg 3d, head of the department, and Mrs. Spangler, wife of Comdr. John G. Spangler, executive officer, were in charge of arrangements.

Comdr. and Mrs. Spangler, whose quarters are at 33 Upshur rd., had as their dinner guests on Wednesday night Comdr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Jaap of Alexandria, Va. Comdr. Jaap addressed a group of the reserve officers' unit here. Also dining with the Spanglers on this occasion were Comdr. and Mrs. Robert Bowstrom of the Naval Academy.

Georgetown Tours Slated This Weekend

The first of Washington's spring tours, the Georgetown House Tour, is on the calendar for this weekend, Friday and Saturday, April 1 and 2, from 2 to 6 p. m. Eight houses east of Wisconsin ave. will be open to the public the first day eight west of Wisconsin on Saturday.

There's no starting point, visitors may wander from one house to another, then perhaps write home about Georgetown as did Capt. John Smith who actually "discovered" it in 1608. In his "Historie of Virginia" he commented on the mildness of the "aire, the fertilitie of the soil." Or they may feel about this older sister of Washington as did one Henry Fleete, an English fur trader, visiting here in 1634, who wrote back to his family, "This place is without question the most beautiful in all the country."

Mrs. Carroll Perry, jr., and Mrs. L. D. Nicholson, chairman of hostesses, have selected hostesses for each house, each of whom has learned from its owner the history, interesting architectural features, treasures and decor. Tea will be served in the Parish Hall of St. John's Episcopal Church on both tour days, from 3 to 5 p. m.

This year there is to be a guide booklet on sale at each house, giving detailed information and a map of Georgetown. Mrs. James M. Barnes, chairman of the committee in charge of this feature of this year's benefit, hopes to swell the fund for the social service department of St. John's through the sale of these beautifully illustrated booklets.

Tour tickets may be purchased at the Willard and Statler Hotels, the Francis Scott Key Bookshop and other Georgetown shops.

Army Daughters Set Pilgrimage

The Society of the Daughters of the United States Army will make its annual pilgrimage to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier on Army Day, April 6. Members will meet at the Army-Navy Club at 17th and I sts., at 2 p. m., and proceed by bus to Arlington.

A wreath will be placed on the tomb. Mrs. Claude W. Dudley, the national president, will give an address.

Tea will be served in the club at 4 p. m. Reservations should be made by April 2 with Mrs. Townsend Whelan, Woodley 2459.

Chief of Staff Honors French General Here

Chief of Staff of the French Army, Lieut. Gen. Georges Revers, was the guest in whose honor Gen. and Mrs. Omar Bradley entertained at a dinner Thursday evening.

General Revers, who is in this country for conferences with our military leaders, will be honored at another dinner this evening at which the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will be hosts.

The Service Set

By Norma Lanum

MRS. HERMAN FELDMAN has reason to be proud of her husband. Not only has Major General Feldman been appointed the new Quartermaster General, but he's also "the best Virginia ham baker in the Army." Those are her own words.

General Feldman's tactics with a ham are far from the ordinary. In fact, quite often he has to resort to a hammer and chisel before his entree is ready for the table.

This is how he goes about it. First he cuts large pockets in the uncooked ham, fills them with parted cloves. Then he makes a simple dough and wraps it around the ham, sealing all the juices.

The blanketed ham is then cooked in a very hot oven until the dough is dark brown. And then the dough is taken off. This is where the hammer and chisel come in. Sometimes the dough is so hard it has to be coaxed off with the blunt instruments. But the finished product is the "tenderest ham you ever tasted," boasts Mrs. Feldman.

Met in Germany

MOST HUSBANDS who are expert cooks themselves are somewhat finicky about their spouse's efforts in the kitchen. Not General Feldman. "He eats just everything, and likes it." reports his missus.

And his favorite dish, next to blanket-baked Virginia ham, of course, is his wife's beefsteak and kidney pie. It's a Scottish dish she brought from her home country.

Scottish Millie Pitblado Lawson was serving with a volunteer Aid Detachment group in Coblenz, Germany, during the First World War when she met her future husband, junior officer Feldman. They were married in the Kaiser's Palace Chapel there.

After some 15 years of globe-trotting between Army assignments, the Feldmans settled in Washington. That was in 1936. Mrs. Feldman has been here ever since, but the general has had some overseas tours of duty.

One of his most interesting assignments in that period was a stint as logistic adviser to Admiral Chester Nimitz. He accompanied Nimitz to the signing of the Japanese peace treaty on the Missouri.

Stamp Collection

Since her husband settled down with the Quartermaster Corps headquarters in Washington, Mrs. Feldman has devoted most of her time to cooking and sewing for the general and their daughter, Betty. Her excellent collection of foreign stamps and "first covers" remains her principal hobby.

JUST JOTTINGS—The Joint Chiefs of Staff have issued invitations to a "stag" cocktail party for outgoing Secretary of Defense James Forrestal on Thursday at the Pentagon . . . Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Edward M. Powers, U. S. A. F.—he's retiring after 30 years service—will be honored at a party Tuesday at the Army-Navy Country Club by members of the general's staff. . . . Jango members working on the benefit Boxer Show to take place on April 22 will be entertained by Mrs. Eugene Zuckert at a tea Tuesday at her home. . . . Lieut. Joseph E. Collins having just completed a tour of duty in Korea, is spending his furlough at the Fort McNair quarters of his parents, Gen. and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins.

Triple Tribute Paid Hildreth At Tea Dance

It was a triple tribute yesterday for Melvin D. Hildreth, chairman of the 1949 Presidential Inauguration. A tea dance in his honor was given by the Young Democrats from 5 to 7:30 at the United Nations Club. A dinner in honor of Mr. Hildreth was given at the club by his friends, and a reception with dancing followed, with members of the Truman-Barkley Club, as hosts.

In the absence of Miss Rita Dery, president of the Young Democrats, the tea dance was in the hands of J. H. Fredricks and John Rufus Graves. Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth received with their two sons, Richard and Davis, who are students at George Washington University.

Speakers at the dinner party which followed were the Assistant to the President, John R. Steelman; the Secretary of Agriculture, Charles Franklin Brannan; Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Senator John J. Sparkman, and Senator Claude Pepper.

At the reception and dance which were held later at the United Nations Club, Mrs. Robert Mars acted as chairman. Other active members on the reception committee were Mrs. Woodrow W. Grim, Mrs. Richard Harless, Mrs. Brannan, Mrs. Sparkman and Mrs. H. J. Miller.

Farm, Garden Group to Meet

The Capital Division of the Woman's Farm and Garden Association will hold its regular monthly luncheon on Thursday, March 31, at 12:30 p. m. at Barker Hall, 17th and K sts. nw.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Arthur F. Raper, social scientist, and his subject will be "Changes in Rural Japan under General MacArthur's Occupational Program." Dr. Raper spent three months in Japan late in 1948, within the same villages where he had stayed 18 months earlier. He is an outstanding authority on rural conditions in America and author of several books and magazine articles on phases of rural life.

Mrs. Vesey to Be Loudoun Club Hostess

Leesburg, Va., March 26.— Mrs. Howard Vesey will be hostess to the Woman's Club of Loudoun at Vemar Farm, home of Mr. and Mrs. Vesey, on Saturday afternoon, April 2. The guest speaker, Dr. Edwin H. Miner, associate United States Commissioner of Education, will talk on "Youth Conservation." Mrs. Vesey is chairman of the youth conservation department of the club. The music will be in charge of Mrs. E. H. Miner, music chairman. During the business session, officers of the club will be elected for the coming year. Tea will be served following the program.

The board of governors of the Woman's Club met Thursday evening with Mrs. Henry W. Beatty at her home near Bluemont.

Mrs. Wade Hampton Palmer, jr., attended an anniversary luncheon of the Mu Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society on Saturday at George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. At this time, Mrs. Palmer was initiated into this national honor society for women teachers. Membership in this organization is based upon "success in teaching, power of leadership, unselfish professional spirit, cooperative nature and other desirable personal qualities." Mrs. Palmer, guidance counselor and mathematics teacher in Leesburg High School, is the first Loudoun County teacher to be honored with an invitation to join this Virginia Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

Miss Adelaide Dale, rural supervisor for Loudoun County, also attended the initiation ceremony as she is a member of the Washington State Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

Miss Constance Welsh was hostess to Circle No. 4 of the Women's Society of Christian Service at her home in Leesburg on Tuesday evening.

Dr. Alfred Jackson of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., is spending the weekend with his brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. James T. Jackson. The Jacksons also have with them their daughter, Miss Patricia Jackson, student at St. Catherine's School in Richmond, who is spending her spring vacation here.

Cadet Capt. Arthur H. Fulton, 3d, and Cadet James Fulton of Randolph Macon Academy, Front Royal, are with their mother, Mrs. Arthur H. Fulton, jr., this week. Other R. M. A. boys here for their spring vacation are Frank P. Smoot, jr., who is at the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Frank P. Smoot, and Joseph Zimmerman, who is spending the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Zimmerman. Miss Jane Atwell, student at Averett College, Danville, arrived Thursday for a week's vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hunton F. Atwell. Donald Fisher came in Friday from Staunton Military Academy for his spring vacation.

Miss Eleanor Lintner of Washington is spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lintner . . . Miss Jane Titus of Lynchburg is the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Titus . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Grubb and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Short and son of Hagerstown, Md., were Sunday guests of Mrs. Grubb's sister, Miss Mae Myers.

Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Williams were hosts to Club 24 at their home here on Thursday evening. Mrs. Walter E. Grant entertained at a bridge party at her home near Hamilton on Tuesday afternoon.

Congressional Capers:

A Career Wrapped Up in Bits of Ribbon

By Genevieve Reynolds

VERSATILE, energetic Mrs. Clinton D. McKinnon, wife of the new California Representative, swears by the old adage—"one thing leads to another." With her it does. Five years ago, she started collecting satin-back ribbon—now has several thousand yards. The hobby led straight to a study course in gift wrapping and flower arrangement. A for-fun course in interior decoration and design turned her into a practical designer of furniture and clothes.

For her handsome, spacious modernistic home overlooking Mission Bay in San Diego, she designed the living room furniture. Each piece of the light ash wood furniture is functional as well as appropriate. Around a circular grey-peach colored divan is a round table. When the McKinnons want a special view along with their breakfast, they drop the table legs, and up pops the table several inches. Built between a square divan and a matching chair is an unusual shaped table It has three square corners and one circular end. Flanking the circle part of the table is a trough for greenery and flowers.

Outside in the yard is a four-sided fireplace, designed especially for the three McKinnon children, Dan, 15; Connie, 6, and Mike, 9. There the neighborhood kids gather to roast hot dogs, hamburgers and other picnic foods.

Chic, five-feet six Mrs. McKinnon laughingly remarks that she traded her combination glass fronted, stucco-brick-wood home for interesting people when she came to Washington. "I'm so interested in people, I forget to notice their clothes," she declares.

Anyway, there's never a dull moment for the brown-haired, gray-eyed congressional wife. Once she masters one subject, she takes up another. Several years ago she studied dermatology and cosmotology. Last year she took several radio courses. At the moment, she's engrossed in personality development. What next? Perhaps architecture—"I'm always studying something," she insists with a chuckle.

REPRESENTATIVE REVA BECK BOSONE has a very persistent constituent. Not once has she left the titian-haired lawmaker's office in the past 10 days or nights. She's none other than Queen Rosabelle, famous Utah doll, which was sent from the children of Provo as their emissary to urge the Sooner State legislator to vote for the Federal aid to education bill.

Accompanying the doll, which is dressed in a billowing white satin gown trimmed with pearls, bells and ermine, was a pink silk sack filled with letters. All the missives from the kids around Provo, Springville and surrounding towns request passage of the Federal education bill so "all children in the country will have equal educational opportunity."

In addition to the letters, Her Majesty also brought a miniature gavel made of Western sagebrush and a box of lucky stones as gifts for the former Utah judge. The enterprising children gathered the lucky stones from the Wasatch Mountains to send to Capitol Hill.

Queen Rosabelle long has been famous in her native State. Reams of legends and stories have grown up about her which are repeated to each generation of young school children. School children of Provo celebrate her birthday annually. Gifts and messages pour in from all sections of the Nation as well as the State. Back in 1941 the Utah State Agricultural College awarded the stately queen a baccalaureate degree because of her contributions to childhood education.

A widely traveled dignitary, Queen Rosabelle attended a doll festival in Anaheim, Calif., then assisted in helping celebrate President Truman's birthday party at the "Sprig of Green" in Port Arthur, Tex., and later reigned for a month at the annual Festival of Arts in Terre Haute, Ind. One time she was sent to Boston, Mass., for an antique doll party given at a museum there. At the collectors' meeting "The Educational Value of Rosabelle" was featured at one whole session.

When the doll queen returns soon, she will carry the message to her youthful sponsors—Representative Bosone already has declared herself in favor of the Federal aid to education bill. Between trips Rosabelle stands on a shelf in the Franklin School Library in Provo. She is owned by the school's librarian, Mrs. Cleo Pierce Heavenor of Springville, Utah.

BITS of This and That . . . The Congressional Club is sponsoring a series of orientation tours for its members, under the special guidance of Mrs. Hal Holmes of Washington State, Mrs. Harold C. Hagen of Minnesota, and Mrs. John R. Murdock of Arizona. Last Friday the tour group met with Representative Frances P. Bolton for a brief talk before continuing their sightseeing junket to Mount Vernon. Mrs. Bolton is vice regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association in her home State—Ohio. Next on docket is a look-learn visit through the Capitol with Mrs. Murdock as guide and lecturer. She'll tell the story of the Brumidi murals. A veteran at the job, Mrs. Murdock has been conducting educational tours for the Nation's lawmakers' wives for five years preceding World War II.

Luncheon to Mark Founders' Day

A founders' day luncheon will be given by the members of the Washington City alumnae chapter of Chi Omega and the collegiate chapter of George Washington University at 12:30 p. m. on Saturday at the Kennedy-Warren.

Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty will relate some of her experiences on her recent trip to Germany. Mrs. Tufty is a past president of the Women's National Press Club. The speaker will be introduced by Miss Gretchen Felker, toast mistress. Music will be furnished by the choral group under the direction of Miss Patricia Peterson of the collegiate chapter of George Washington University. Miss Mary Kirkpatrick and Mrs. G. R. Roberts, jr., are in charge of the program at the luncheon.

Mrs. B. F. Brooks president of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, will present a plaque to the outstanding senior and the pledge cup will be awarded to the outsanding pledge by Miss Martha Callahan, president of the George Washington University Chapter.

Mrs. Louise Bollo is chairman of Arrangements and will be assisted by Mrs. W. L. Berge. Mrs. Newton Montgomery is in charge of reservations. Hostesses for the luncheon will be Mrs. W. H. S. Stevens, Mrs. L. O. Chancellor, Mrs. C. E. Kefauver, and Mrs. H. G. Roby.

A boon to your wardrobe! Wrinkle-free fashions that can go anywhere, and yet keep their fresh, untouched appearance. Glorious town colors, too, in 12 new pastel shades. The fabric is a unique rayon mesh that has the look of a hand-knit. Either style at this low price.

Pageants To Feature Garden Week

One of the highlights of Historic Garden Week in Virginia, April 23 to 30, will be a presentation of dramatic episodes at Kenmore in Fredericksburg. This old colonial mansion, built in 1752 by Col. Fielding Lewis, Revolutionary patriot, for his bride, Betty Washington, only sister of George Washington, will come to life in "Kenmore Heritage," a pageant in brief scenes depicting events which actually occurred in the old house. Historically famous characters will be portrayed by citizens of the town, many of whom are descendants of the original owners of Kenmore.

First presented at the silver anniversary of the Kenmore Association two years ago, the pageant was attended by Mrs. Truman, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and other celebrities among the thousands who came for the celebration.

This year the pageant is to be given on Thursday, April 28. Following a tour of the mansion, visitors will be taken to the old kitchen where they will be served tea and the famous "Mary Washington gingerbread" by costumed ladies and students from the Mary Washington College.

Belmont, in Falmouth, just across the river from Fredericksburg, one of the fine old estates in the district, will also be open. It was built way back in 1761, enlarged in 1842, its magnificent boxwood gardens remain intact in their traditional plan. The stone studio built by Gari Melchers, great American artist, still stands in the garden. Two galleries in the studio building are now devoted to exhibitions of selected groups of his paintings. The garden and studio will be open all through Historic Garden Week.

Other interesting places in the Fredericksburg district include Mary Washington House, the last home of Mary, mother of George Washington; Rising Sun Tavern, a well preserved colonial inn; the Hugh Mercer Apothecary Shop, built prior to the Revolutionary War, the oldest drugstore in America; the President James Monroe Law Office, a national shrine containing original furniture from the White House owned by the Monroes; Doggett House, an early eighteenth century brick dwelling containing beautiful old furniture and original scenic wallpaper put on about 1813, and Aquia Church, near Stafford, where the old church silver will be on display.

Hadassah Donor Dinner Details Told

Complete details of the gala program of the annual donor dinner and dance of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah on Wednesday, March 30, 6:30 p. m., at the Hotel Mayflower, were announced yesterday by Mrs. Benjamin Manchester, donor chairman.

Honor guest and principal speaker will be Major Aubrey S. Eban, Israeli representative at the United Nations, who at the age of 33 has already gained a distinguished reputation as a diplomat. He will discuss the significant contribution made by Hadassah to the health and welfare of the people of Israel.

Mrs. Joseph Freedman, president of the Washington Chapter, will greet the guests. The invocation will be given by Mrs. I. S. Turover. The benediction will be pronounced by Rabbit Isidore Breslau.

Music for dancing will be provided by Leon Brusiloff and his orchestra.

A special feature of the evening will be a recital by two young concert artists, Ingrid Rypinski, mezzo-soprano, and Norman Atkins, baritone. They will present a program of Palestinian songs.

Miss Rypinski is one of the foremost interpreters of Palestinian music in this country. She came to the United States in 1940 from Palestine, where she had lived on a cooperative farm after fleeing from Nazi Germany in 1936.

Miss Rypinski made her debut in February, 1948, and has appeared in recitals at Carnegie Hall, Times Hall, Hunter College, and City College. She has sung in Radio City Music Hall and has appeared as soloist on the Carnegie "Pops" concert series.

The young American baritone, Norman Atkins, began his professional career in August, 1946. Since then he has appeared in opera roles, concert and radio. He was the winner of a Nation-wide auditions contest in 1947 for which he received a Town Hall debut as a prize.

Assisting Mrs. Manchester as donor chairman are Mrs. Alex Hassan, cochairman; Mrs. I. S. Turover, chairman of arrangements; Mrs. Paul Pearlman, chairman of tickets; Mrs. Harry Burka, chairman of hostesses, and Mrs. Melvin Gelman, chairman of ushers.

More Comfort for Baby

A wool bag to cover baby's bottle while he is drinking will keep the milk from cooling during this important process. The bag has a drawing string at the top and fits snugly to the bottle. It also is a help to baby when he begins to hold his own bottle as it is not so slippery for tiny fingers.

The Inside Story

Decoration in Anticipation of Moving

By Ann Pringle

You're living in an apartment and you hope to change for a better one before long. Yet nothing looks quite right, and you'd like to put up new draperies, have a few chairs slip-covered, make your temporary abode at least livable. Only catch is how will what you buy now look in that dream home later on?

Here's a probably-not-unique solution to the problem that's working beautifully for me. I haven't figured out what colors I'll be in love with when that four-room apartment with a terrace comes my way, but right now there are a green rug, red couch and gray tweed chairs to cope with. I could have had everything else gray, but that gets dull. So I took another tack.

Black and white printed draperies have enough white in them to look bright, enough of the deep charcoal (more alive than dead black) to absorb the city soot. They are very good with red and green, but should my color scheme in another apartment switch over to brown and rusts, they'll present quite a striking effect at the windows. Or I can put them in another room, with any furniture I may buy for it.

An oatmeal tweed fabric, not gray, not beige, but somewhere in between, seemed best for an armchair. It, too, will go with just about anything I might choose for a later apartment.

Many people have solved their decorating dilemmas by keeping carpets, draperies and large pieces of furniture in fairly neutral versatile tones. Then the whole place can be given a new appearance by a change in wall color (the landlord's expense, after all—at least in the good old days); new upholstery for side chairs (not so expensive a job as upholstering a big couch), or simply new cushions and a bright colored lacquer job on some old tables or chests.

It's the old story, really, of buying a basic outfit and changing it around with good accessories, a tale oft told that still makes good sense—in decorating as well as in fashions.

Keep in Trim

So You've Lost 10 Pounds—Want to Try for 20?

By Ida Jean Kain

So you lost 10 pounds on the scientific wonder diet. Do you need to try for 20? If it would improve your health to take off another 10 pounds of avoirdupois, then keep right on with the same pattern of eating and continue cutting calories to around 1100 a day. Since these menus provide perfect nutrition, they can be continued until all of the excess fat is turned back into energy.

The second 10 pounds may come off at the same rate as the first . . . or the going may be a bit slower. This depends on your total excess weight and the amount of the weight that is in soft, easy-to-lose fat. Don't rush the reducing. A gradual weight loss is not only more becoming, but more permanent.

In radio they play the game of Double or Nothing—try again and you may lose. In the game of reducing, if you don't try you'll be sorry. Unless you keep on with a diet and continue to reduce the excess, you may turn back to overeating and be right back where you started. Don't let that happen!

In a way, the longer you stay on the scientific wonder diet the easier it gets, for the simple reason that you are forming new food habits. By eating the protective foods, the less you will crave fattening foods. This goes for between-meal snacks and rich desserts. By following the right food pattern, you learn to like the foods that will eventually help keep your weight at normal. With this plan, you'll not be struggling against apple pie and chocolate cake for the rest of your natural life. Believe it or not, there'll come come a time when you won't even want them.

If you are among the lucky ones who have lost all the weight necessary and whose weight is now at healthy normal, then gradually increase the calories to the point where you neither gain nor lose. It's a pleasure. But to be on the safe side, keep the same pattern of eating. This plan will insure perfect nutrition and serve as a defense against overeating.

Instill in Children a Love of Animals

Instill into children the love of animals and never allow them to tease an animal in any way. Not only is it bad for their character, but even the best tempered animals can be goaded into resenting pain by the only protection they know, biting or scratching.

It's New!

WANT to save elbow grease? Keep that brass candelabra shining without polishing? Here's a new plastic preparation made for that very purpose. You spray it on ornamental metal where it forms a protective coating and keeps the surface free of tarnish. The can comes equipped with a push-button spray that makes applying the plastic a simple matter. A cleaner or solvent is also sold with it for use in removing the coating if necessary.

California is taking the table these days. Latest arrival from the Far West is gay, modern china made by Winfield. It will be shown at a local department store this week for the first time. Made in light colors, it is decorated with modern flower, leaf, or fruit designs. There are nine different patterns in all, and manufacturers guarantee they will always be available for replacements, or additions, in any quantities desired. Included among the open stock are special sets for special purposes—a summer berry set which can also be used for chili suppers, a breakfast tray set, a salad set, beverage set and others.

Recommended for use on asphalt tile and linoleum, as well as wood, is a new "miracle floor finish." It's a clear, fast-drying plastic preparation that gives a gleaming, nonskid surface to your floors. Dirt and scuff marks will not penetrate it and the finish also resists water spotting. It can be applied over shellac, varnish, lacquer or paint and cleaned by wiping with a damp cloth or mop.

Latest bug killer is an improved bomb which emits a fine mist that will remain suspended in the air from 20 minutes to 2 hours. Said to contain more pyrethrum and less DDT than most previous bombs, this one is deadly for insects but harmless to humans and animals, its makers say. It's not necessary to spray the flying insects. The release of the mist in the space treated brings the sudden demise of mosquitoes, gnats, flies, cockroaches, water bugs, bedbugs, ants, moths, fleas, wasps, silverfish, hornets, spiders and lice.

Imes Tea Honors Gantzes and Visitor

Mr. and Mrs. Hollis L. Imes had as their guests at the English Speaking Union tea yesterday Capt. and Mrs. Benjamin Soule Gantz and their house guest, Mrs. Harold von der Leitch of New York.

Other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Imes were Judge and Mrs. David Kincheloe, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shields, Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Schnabel and Dr. Meade MacBryde. The tea was given at the Sulgrave Club in honor of the new president of the English Speaking Union, Albert Atwood.

Young Eyes Are Ruined By Hard Work Too Soon

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Smart children are apt to be subjected to eye-strain earlier in life than children who show a greater interest in physical activity and less in learning. It fills the mother with pride when she can point out that her 4 or 5-year-old can recognize words in the newspaper, or read his picture books. Her pride may be justifiable but her practices are not.

Eyes are the most important tools of learning. The success of school work in the early years depends largely on the able functioning of the eyes.

Because a child's eyes are bright and clear, without redness; there is no guarantee that he can see well. In fact, the "age of seeing," is not fully learned until a child is six years of age. The eye, like all other physical members of the body, has to develop before its efficiency is assured. Children who try to learn to read in the fifth year, or who try to do fine handwork are putting such a tremendous burden upon the developing eye that the consequences to it may be dire.

It is not without reason that the best picture books for small children have large, clear illustrations without undue complexity; that letters identifying the objects of the illustration are plain, large ones. Children enjoy looking at such books because they can do so without strain.

In elementary schools, where there is no kindergarten, children of five may be asked to learn to read, at an age when their eyes may be actually unequal to the task. In the second grade when learning to read is a prime objective the child's visual deficiencies will manifest themselves.

Then it is that children are accused of stupidity or of failure to "concentrate" when what they are advertising is a visual inability to see the letters and thus decipher the words.

Perhaps there would be much less of this injustice to children were parents better acquainted with the development of the eye and what cannot be expected of it before the sixth year.

About Cleaning Tapes on Blinds

The straps of my Venetian blinds are soiled. Is there any easy method of cleaning them?
V. E. F.

The easiest way to freshen the straps or tapes on the blinds is to cover them with a tape which can be purchased in some stores where Venetian blinds and accessories are sold. It comes in the same width as the tapes on the blinds and in several colors. It is applied by sticking it to the old tape.

Some have fair success in washing the tapes, and the slats too, by removing the entire shade from the window and placing it in a bathtub and scrubbing with a brush. When clean, rinse very thoroughly. Shake and wipe off as much water as possible and hang where they will dry quickly. It should be said in this connection, however, that if the tapes are several years old, they are very apt to be weakened at the edges of the slats and will break when they are washed. If this happens, it is possible to buy new tapes by the yard and replace them yourself. To find out how to put on the new ones, use the old tape as it is attached to the blind as a guide. Or, firms listed under "Venetian Blinds" in the yellow pages of the telephone book will replace tapes for you.

Is it possible to remove stains made by hot chocolate in a cotton luncheon cloth?
R. J. S.

Yes, sometimes these stains will come out readily by laundering them in warm soapy water. If, after washing, the stain still shows, use a bleach—such as sodium perborate. Sprinkle it over the dampened stain, let stand an hour and rinse thoroughly. Be sure to test the effect of the bleach on colored cloth at an inconspicuous spot before applying to the stain.

At a small, informal wedding at the home of the bride, the bride wearing a simple floor-length gown and a veil, what should the mother of the bride wear? If she wears a floor-length dress, would it be inappropriate if she does not wear hat or gloves? The wedding is to be an afternoon affair. What should be served at the wedding reception? M. L. W.

The bride's mother could wear either a floor-length dinner dress or a street-length afternoon dress. Since the wedding is in her home, it is not necessary for the bride's mother to wear either hat or gloves.

Appropriate refreshments to serve at the reception would be a fruit punch and wedding cake. If you wish more elaborate refreshments, add dainty open-faced sandwiches, mints and (or) salted nuts.

Would you tell me how to make red wine vinegar out of red wine (chianti, if possible)?
M. W. H.

I have not been able to find the exact method for making wine vinegar from wine. Can any of our readers help?

Do you know whether a radio can be successfully refinished at home or if it can would the tuning or sound effect given off by radio be affected? I have been told that the finish given a radio is keyed to transmit sound. I would like to antique my radio a green or red. A READER.

An executive of the Radio Manufacturers Association tells me that in the manufacture of radios, the finish of the wood is not considered to have any effect on the sound. Radios in some plastic and metal cabinets do not sound the same as those in wood because of the reverberations of the material.

What size wedding cake (in pounds) will be needed for 150 guests? Also, can you give me a recipe for a nonalcoholic punch? The reception is being held in church auditorium. Would it be advisable to have an added spiked punch? M. P.

You will need a 30-pound wedding cake to serve 150 guests.

Whether or not you serve a spiked punch in the church parlors will depend, it seems to me, entirely upon the customs prevailing in your church. In many churches such punch would be entirely taboo.

Here is a recipe for a Fruit Punch:

2 quarts of strong tea
1½ to 2 quarts loganberry or grape juice
1 2/3 cups strained lemon juice
4 cups strained orange juice
2 quarts water
1 cup sugar
6 bottles (9 oz.) ginger ale.

MIX TEA, fruit juices, water and sugar and chill 12 hours. Just before serving add ginger ale and pour over large piece of ice in punch bowl. Approximate yield: 8 quarts or 60 small glasses.

My lunch-cloth is ancient
And faded and gray.
So what do I do with it?
Throw it away?

Wrong again, Petunia! If it's linen or an absorbent cotton weave, cut it into strips and use it for dishtowels.
Bishop-Bracken.

★ MAYBE YOU have, somewhere around your house or attic, a worn furniture piece you hate to part with—perhaps because its lines are still good, its construction still sound. If you are, here's a tip from Top Recker.

★ REMEMBER that such an elderly piece of furniture has a frame (either visible or invisible) that's of well-seasoned wood. Often, too, the construction is good through-and-through; joinery, glue, etc., still serviceable. Such a piece of furniture, properly upholstered, has many more years of service to give you.

★ TOP RECKER offers you specially painstaking reupholstering service. PLUS an almost unlimited choice of fabrics! We have hundreds of samples . . . usually one by one and a half yards. These are large enough to give you a very good idea of the finished job. And you may borrow them from our shop to ponder in your own home.

★ AMONG NEW fabric arrivals at Top Recker you will find a large assortment of nubby weaves in the exciting textures and colors that the mills are producing these days. And prices begin at modest levels.

★ IF YOU are in the new furniture mood, we also offer a number of furniture resources, including many famous makers. You may choose your fabrics for this furniture right in our shop.

Monosodium Glutamate Makes Tasties Tastier

Monosodium glutamate is quite a mouthful of words. But, with skillful use, it can help to give your family many a mouthful of delectable food, according to the April issue of House Beautiful magazine. Calling it "an old oriental seasoning that intensifies food flavor without changing it," the magazine explains how MSG "performs palate miracles by opening your taste-buds so they become hypersensitive." The article also gives the half-dozen trade names under which it is sold.

Several Proposed Luxury Type, 'Skyscraper' Apartments Approved for Northwest Area

By Conrad P. Harness

WASHINGTON'S rarest commodity, now that 5-cent beer is back, is a vacant efficiency apartment in the near Northwest. But homeless cliff dwellers can take courage—help's on the way!

Owners of at least five proposed elevator-type, eight-story apartments are asking for bids, and with construction costs leveling off, all have a better than average chance of opening their doors to house-hungry tenants by this time next year.

All five, with a total of 1298 apartments, have been okayed by the local FHA office for mortgage insurance, which means Uncle Sam will guarantee repayment of monies advanced by lending institutions.

The five, acording to James A. Hewitt, FHA local director, are:

An 87-unit project to be built by Temple Realty Co. at the northeast corner of Wisconsin ave. and Porter st. nw.

Lencshire House, 127 units, to be erected at Woodley rd. and Wisconsin ave. nw. by Harry and Morris Lenkin.

Adams Mill Plaza, 156 units, Clydesdale and Summit pl. nw., to be built by Plaza Builders.

The Kenmore, 368 units, Connecticut ave. and Legation st. nw., to be built by Ellis P. Block, T. Nelson Jeffress, George L. Dyer.

Quebec House (first section of 560 units), Connecticut ave., Porter and Quebec sts. nw., to be built by Ajax Construction Co.

THE MAJORITY of the apartments will be (1) efficiencies, renting for $85 per month unfurnished; (2) small one-bedroom units, and (3) larger one-bedroom units, with the latter renting up to $115 per month unfurnished.

The largest is Quebec House, which was first announced in The Washington Post several weeks ago when it was first proposed. The owners ultimately plan 850 units in two eight-story buildings. The FHA approval was for the first group of 560 units. The location is a 9-acre site near the Broadmoor Apartments.

Besides the five projects mentioned here, several more are already underway or applications are now pending with FHA for mortgage insurance commitments. They include:

An 800-unit building planned by Standard Construction Co. at the Villa Rosa estate in the 4200 block of Massachusetts ave. nw., estimated to cost eight million dollars. FHA has already given this one the green light.

Hilltop House, 100 units, five stories, at 15th and Euclid sts. nw.

An eight-story luxury type apartment to be erected at 17th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Announced long ago and now under way is the eight-story, 262-unit Washington Circle Apartments at 2430 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Nearing completion at Dupont Circle nw., is the modernistic Dupont Circle Apartments, built by Alvin L. Aubinoe, Inc.

IN addition to this inspiring line-up of postwar rentals, FHA last week approved the following two and three-story, walkup, garden type apartment developments in the suburban areas:

Langley Park Apartments, 776 units, New Hampshire and University la., Prince Georges County, Md.

Mason Arms, Mason ave., near Mount Vernon blvd., Alexandria, Va.

Glassmanor (Section B), 252 units, Audrey la. and Indian Head rd., Prince Georges County, Md.

Most of the new elevator type apartments to be erected in the Northwest section follow a general pattern: 8 stories high, with garage facilities for 30-40 cars in the basement and sub-basement, of steel and reinforced steel construction, brick and limestone exteriors, air-conditioned heating systems.

Of four builders queried, all said they hoped to start construction within a month, provided the bids from subcontractors were in line with reasonable costs. Construction is expected to take one year.

Adams Mill Plaza will boast a $20,000 master antenna system with video antenna outlets in each unit, according to Charles E. Smith, builder.

FHA Director Hewitt said all mortgages for the properties were insured by FHA under the "temporary Title VI, Section 608, of the National Housing Act." Congress passed this temporary legislation to spur construction of badly needed rental units. The legislation allows the Government to guarantee the major portion of the financing so financiers will lend money to builders for construction.

The new projects bring the grand total of FHA approved apartments here to 265 projects, with 25,938 rental units, and mortgages amounting to $201,085,800.

Tile Convention Here Predicts Good Year

The city wall and floor tile industry will enjoy the biggest year in its history in 1949, according to Roy Jordan, jr., chairman of the Tile Council of America, who spoke this week before 200 clay tile contractors at the forty-first annual convention of the Tile Contractors Association of America at the Hotel Statler.

Increasing demand for quality building materials, a national construction backlog of one billion dollars and vigorous promotion activity by all segments of the tile industry are responsible for optimism this year, Jordan said. The switch to a buyers' market should help rather than hurt the tile contractor, he added.

The clay tile industry's production record of 105 million square feet, an all-time high, will be equaled or surpassed this year, Jordan predicted. A plant improvement investment of 10 million dollars—nearly one dollar for every eight dollars received—enabled the Nation's 37 tile-producing plants to turn out more tile in 1948 than 75 plants produced in 1929, he revealed. He pointed to the manufacturers' investment in expansion and improvement as a sign of their confidence in future markets.

This Is—IT!
Haven't you occasionally stopped driving to remark—"I'd like to have a place like that"—this is IT! To the front and rear are towering oaks, dogwoods and evergreens and within the lot is a winding brook, with ferns and a picturesque setting. A type of home frequently sought but seldom found in an area that is within 15 minutes' drive of downtown. The moment you enter you are immediately impressed with its warmth, cheerfulness—informal and yet exquisitely refined atmosphere. A gay powder room is off the hall; the cozy den, the living room with its fireplace and dining room with picture window and the "de luxe" kitchen create a certain charm to the whole. The 2nd floor features 2 MASTER SIZE BEDROOMS and 2 LOVELY COLORED TILE BATHS, one with dressing table, child's room or den. The huge 3rd floor dormitory room is perfect for two "youngsters." Maid's bath. The brick terraced porch overlooks rear garden space and stream—daylight cellar, GAS HEAT, built-in garage. An outdoor fireplace is just another feature. The house has that NEW LOOK, its decorative scheme and numerous detail appointments create many pleasant surprises. For a small family it is PERFECT! Shown by appointment—Today call

Builders Ask Lower Down Payments on New Houses

PRIVATE builders and bankers, including a large-scale Washington builder, have asked the Federal Government to get out of the building game and concentrate on helping private enterprise lick the housing shortage.

Top officials of the National Association of Home Builders and Mortgage Bankers Association, meeting last week in Chicago, outlined specific actions they suggest the Government take to increase home construction at price levels where it is most needed.

William S. Banks, president, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, said the follow recommendations were made:

1. Extension of Government emergency legislation that has stimulated a very high volume of rental housing. The legislation, Title VI, Section 608 of the National Housing Act, is scheduled to expire March 31.

2. A system be authorized for accelerated depreciation for rental housing projects, in order to encourage more construction.

3. Broaden the Federal Housing Administration's authority to insure mortgages of low-cost housing, enabling a larger mortgage to be made with a small cash down payment by buyers.

4. Change the present "inconsistent" policy of the Government demanding, through its housing agencies, greater home production and at the same time exerting a powerful influence through the Federal Reserve System, the Comptroller of the Currency, and other regulatory agencies in discouraging leading institutions from extending construction loans or permanent mortgage credit.

5. Permission for FHA to use its own earnings to enlarge its staff and services to private industry.

6. No direct loans from Government in competition with the private enterprise system of housing, construction and finance.

Those attending the conference from Washington, besides Banks, were Sam Neel, MBA general counsel; George McIntosh, mortgage broker; John M. Dickerman and Frank W. Cartright of the National Association of Home Builders.

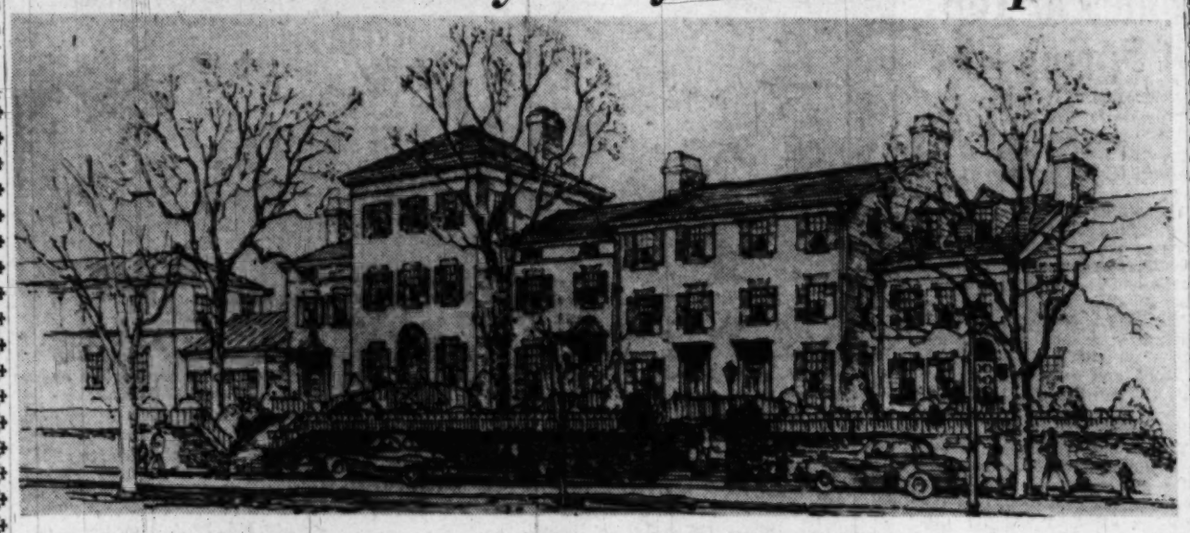
Consider Your Neighbors

When planning a color scheme for the exterior of your house, consider the coloring of adjacent neighbors' homes. Clashing colors in the immediate surroundings can detract greatly from the attractive effect you wish to achieve.

Georgetown Style Homes Is Aim

Dream Community Set for Friendship



Drawing by Howe & Foster, architects, shows one proposed plan for remodelling part of famed "Friendship" into three separate residences. Last two buildings on right are new homes to be added to remodeled structure

THE 2½-acre Friendship estate of the late Evalyn Walsh McLean will be turned into a "residential dream community" of fine Georgetown styled homes, picturesque enough to be the outstanding landmark in Georgetown.

That is the aim of the Georgetown Development Corp., purchasers of the 2½ acre estate bounded by Wisconsin ave., R st., 34th and Reservior rd.

The planners foresee a small, dignified, exclusive subdivision famous throughout the country for its architectural charm.

Also 16-Store Shop Center

These ideas were advanced by John R. de Sibour, realtor and head of John R. de Sibour Co., Inc., which will build the homes. The project will also include an estimated 16-store shopping center along the entire 320 foot Wisconsin ave. frontage, all done in a style similar to colonial Williamsburg, Va.

De Sibour said he had received numerous inquiries from prospective purchasers, including one unnamed millionairess and many Georgetown residents.

The architectural firm of Howe & Foster is preparing working drawings of the proposed new residences, varying in size from two to four bedrooms. All will be of Georgetown-row construction, varying in floor plan and exterior design. Attractive gardens will be an added feature.

To Be Called "Friendship"

De Sibour said he did not know now how many homes would be erected, but predicted finished houses would be "competitive in price" with similar homes. The project will be called "Friendship."

Deluged by inquiries as to the disposition of the existing main building at Friendship, De Sibour said his firm was considering sale of the property, provided it would be remodeled along architectural ilnes in keeping with the remainder of the site.

Construction is expected to begin within 90 days on the new residential units, with first homes to be completed this fall.

James Greenleaf Whittier was first inspired to write verse when, as a boy, his teacher loaned him a copy of Robert Burns' verse.

Builders Hit Video In Public Houses

Ownership of television sets by occupants of public housing units has been attacked by an article in the monthly publication of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

The article claimed that home owners and tenants of privately owned dwellings are paying for the television sets in public housing through subsidization of rents.

Illinois Studies Method to Join Rooms Together

Champaign, Ill., March 26 (AP).—The University of Illinois will study the possibility of fitting room units together like a child's blocks into a variety of house styles.

The project is one of several to be financed by the newly organized Lumber Dealers Research Council. The group was formed to sponsor research on how to reduce the cost of home construction.

William H. Scheick, coordinator of the University's Small Homes Council, announced the "modular planning units" study. He said preliminary research has established that savings in materials and labor costs are possible under such a plan.

Scheick said the method involves "room units, built to uniform specifications. They can be put together in different ways to avoid the monotony of identical houses." He added:

"It is possible to standardize parts of a house without standardizing the house."

C. A. Thompson of Champaign, chairman of the executive committee of the Lumber Dealers Council, said the University of Illinois research will be supplemented by a similar study at Ohio University.

"We don't expect miracles, but we do intend to get results from our research into housing cost reduction."

Semidetached Homes at Top Of Spring List

A PROJECT of 150 semidetached, two-story brick homes near Catholic University tops the list of proposed housing projects announced for spring ground breaking.

The project will be situated on Sargeant rd., between Emerson and Gallatin sts. ne. Builder is the Jonathan Woodner Co.; owner is Northwood Park Corp., both of the Ring Building.

The housing development will be erected in sections, with the first unit of 26 scheduled to be started in April and completed by early fall. The entire project is expected to be finished within 15 months after ground is broken.

The semidetached homes will have three bedrooms and 1½ baths, and are expected to sell for around $14,500, according to the Woodner office. Prudential Life Insurance Co. is financing the home mortgages, with insurance by the Federal Housing Administration under Title II of the National Housing Act.

Other Projects Planned

Other projects planned include: Twenty-four semidetached houses to be erected by M. Pollin & Sons at Underwood, North Capitol, Sheridan sts. and Kansas ave. ne. Units will be two-story, of brick and cinder block construction.

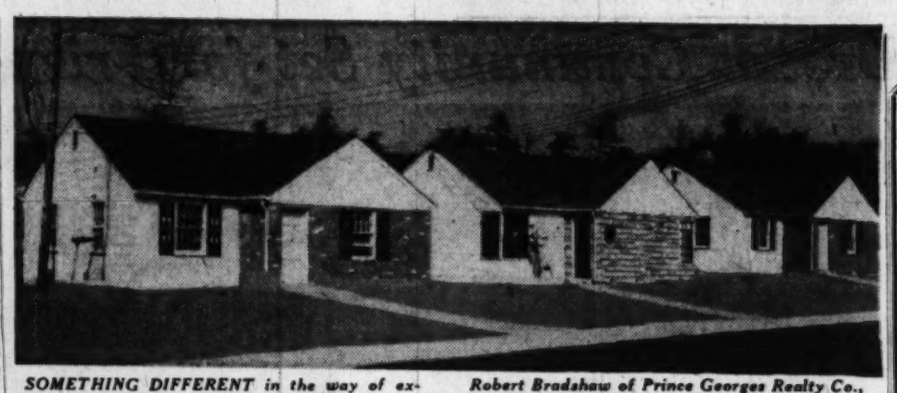
A building permit application has been filed for three apartment buildings to house 132 units near University la. and Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md. Elmar Builders, Inc., is the contractor.

Queens Chapel, Inc., plans 11 two-story frame homes in the 7500 block of Hawthorne st., Kentland, Md. A building permit has been issued. Homes will measure 25 by 19 feet.

Ten bungalows will be built in the Ayrlawn section of Montgomery County, Md., under terms of a building permit application filed by Southeast 38th Corp. Exterior construction will be brick, cinder block and frame, with a floor area of 33 by 26 feet.

Four brick bungalows are planned on Bayfield st., Silver Spring, Md., by Polinger Construction Corp.

Ten apartment buildings with 182 units will be erected at Silver Hill, Md., by Anthony Carozza. Buildings will be two-story walk-ups.



SOMETHING DIFFERENT in the way of exteriors can be seen in a project of 28 homes under roof and ready for occupancy in the Woodlawn section of Landover Hills, Md. Built by Edward B. Feldman, fronts are varied by use of patterned brick and Permastone, the latter treatment on display in the middle home, above, Robert Bradshaw of Prince Georges Realty Co., agents, said the homes are selling for under $11,000. Located on a proposed main thoroughfare to outlying subdivisions, the new basementless bungalows have two bedrooms, fireplace on center living room wall, combination kitchen-dinette, utility-laundry room

Brand Battle Being Waged By Business

New York, March 26 (AP).—A new business battle is raging today. It is "The Battle of the Brands" between giant groups of manufacturers and retailers. Each wants the public to buy its products.

You are the winner because nearly every merchandiser today is offering higher quality, better style, lower price, greater value.

The fight goes back a long way for consumer preference between brand-names controlled by manufacturers (often called "National Brands") and brand-names controlled by retailers (often called "Private Brands").

During the war you couldn't get many of the familiar brands so you took something else. Maybe you liked it and continued to use it. Or maybe you changed back to your old brand when the war was over and you could get it.

There arose a situation called "brand loyalty." The war forced many people to switch their loyalty to a brand. Others switched because of convincing national and local advertising, or store display advertising, or the tendency of merchandise to narrow down the number of brands of a particular item to the strongest sellers.

Brand loyalty is highly stressed today.

Manufacturers and retailers in competing against each other also are in intensive competition within their own group. Neither side is concerned with unknown, off-brand or unbranded products or with any method of selling that does anything but give the customer the highest value.

REALTY ROUNDUP

THE so-called "real estate lobby" reacted immediately to President Truman's accusation that the real estate lobby is the enemy of the American home. T. H. Maenner, Omaha, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in a speech this week before the Jackson, Miss., Real Estate Board said the only kind of housing that private enterprise has opposed was "space in a government barracks—the Washington conception of the American home."

"Private builders and realtors still believe," Maenner added, "that American families want their own homes, obtained without political favor, and used without political domineering.

"Socialized housing moves toward higher costs and away from home ownership. Socialized housing is not the American home. We will continue to oppose it without fear that anyone will be deceived into thinking it is," he declared.

Meanwhile, in Fresno, Calif., Claude A. Campbell, Toledo, president of the Society of Residential Appraisers, called President Truman's accusation "a careless and misguided attack upon millions of thrifty property owners."

More than 83 per cent of all residential rents are paid to landlords having less than $5000 yearly income, Campbell claimed. He said rent control had decreased the supply of rental housing by coercing owners to sell rental property which tenants were therefore coerced to buy.

A confidential business letter circulating among some of the Nation's biggest builders predicts: "A buyer's market means people are going to be increasingly particular about the kind of home they buy and its location. This works against the large developer and for the smaller builder, who, in normal times, has always been the most important factor in building."

Eugene R. Reavis is now associated with J. B. Tiffey & Sons, builders, and will handle sales of Tiffey-built homes. A resident of Washington since 1923, Mr. Reavis was formerly employed with Aldon Properties in a sales capacity. The Tiffey firm has a new group of two-family homes nearing completion at 1st and Victors sts. ne. They will sell for $18,950, Reavis said.

REAVIS

Raymond M. Taylor, president, Washington Real Estate Board, reported a turnout Thursday of over 225 realtors at the second in a series of conferences on real estate fundamentals sponsored by the board.

BOUCHER TAYLOR

Speaking last Thursday were A. Jasper Moore, of Shannon & Luchs Co., and Frank M. Doyle. They discussed several phases of realty salesmanship. The next conference, Thursday, at the Washington Gas Light Co. Auditorium, will hear C. Robert Boucher, of Drury Realty Corp., and Frank J. Luchs, of Shannon & Luchs, speak on closing real estate deals, selling and leasing of commercial and investment property.

The conferences are restricted to active and associate members of the Washington Real Estate Board. Carey Winston is chairman of the education committee sponsoring the sales clinics.

BRIEFS: Reserve supplies of fuel oil are largest in years, reports American Petroleum Institute . . . 830 new homes and apartment units were started in the Washington area during February, according to BLS. This is 100 fewer than the January estimate and 640 under the number started in 1948 . . . Prefabricated Home Manufacturers' Institute will meet March 28-29 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago.

Homes Sell Fast If Price, Design Is Right

THE real estate market is booming—provided you have the right commodity, a check of brokers reveals. Otherwise, it's a disheartening task to try to sell a home in the present buyer's market.

The right commodity turns out to be a well designed house in a good location at "bargain" prices—with a low cash down payment. And unless the home meets all these requirements, it's a case of salesmanship versus order-taking.

One successful Arlington firm which has consistently sold two-story brick colonials before they were even completed, has now stopped construction of that type home in favor of an even faster seller—ramblers.

The firm is M. T. Broyhill & Son. Joel Broyhill said he has awakened to the fact that ramblers are selling like homes during the 1946 boom—when customers were more plentiful than houses.

"Few builders have touched this field," he added. "There's a terrific demand for a three-bedroom rambler selling for around $14,000. We're very pleased with the success of our two-story colonials, but we've seen the light. We're stopping right now and changing over to ramblers!"

Another sales success was reported by Edmund Brant, of the Brant Co., Arlington. He advertised a group of five two-story, three-bedroom colonials located in Alexandria at a $1500 down payment. The public took a fancy to the well-located, large dwellings and swamped Mr. Brant. He said he could have sold at least a hundred.

Why? Because it was a good house in a good location at a small down payment and $120 per month carrying charge, he explained. A similar home would rent for $150 monthly, he added, and the $1500 down payment was only the equivalent of 10 months rent. But, he commented, homes like that are few and far between.

To get fast action on today's market, he added, owners must price homes below the existing market, or else take a low down payment. And, said Brant, if owners will take a very low down payment, the broker can often get a price that is slightly higher than the existing market.

Attractive basementless ramblers are the foundation of the sales program of Camalier & Crosby, successful building firm. Peter Crosby said his firm had enough orders for ramblers in the $17,950 to $31,000 price bracket to start 10 new homes every 10 days.

"Buyers definitely are attracted to exceptional architecture," he pointed out. "Homes that are different in appearance from conventional types have the best sales success."

"With such a competitive market as we now have," Crosby said, "it's the builder who gives the most for the money who will stay in business." His firm is building in Chevy Chase Manor, Md.

Hubert J. Kleinpeter, sales manager for Frederick Berens, told how his firm sold 54 homes in one day at Washington Estates, District Heights, Md.: "We gave the public something they wanted at a price they could pay."

Washington Estates homes had an average price of $12,500, he said, had excellent architectural treatment and were situated in a subdivision which had been thoughtfully laid out to avoid the checkerboard square appearance of some projects.

In a general discussion of today's realty market, Kleinpeter said homes at $18,000 and under were selling provided they were good values, with the $15,000 and under class moving even faster. He said his firm was averaging two sales per day, but "nothing sells unless it's good value."

"People no longer buy a home just to get occupancy or because it may be dirt cheap," he added. "They want charm, quality and a fair value."

He said he refuses from four to six listings of homes for sale per day because "they're overpriced."

Melvyn Kraft, of Kraft Builders, reported success in a group of 21 homes in Pinewood, near University la. and New Hampshire ave., Md. With homes of both two-story colonial and a modernized Cape Cod with radiant heat, costing from $14,000 to $16,000, he sold four in one weekend.

Kraft said people wanted something "extra" and he was giving it to them in the form of a basement playroom, concrete side porch and mirrored mantels.

Peas Must Win Race Against Hot Weather

By James H. Beattie

GARDEN grown peas gathered and served at just the right stage of maturity are a luxury within the reach of any gardener. The widespread use of home freezers and frozen food lockers has given the culture of garden peas an impetus. The quality of frozen peas that have been properly grown and handled is so excellent that freezing extends the season of fresh peas for months.

Success with garden peas depends on growing the vegetable in the Washington area during early spring, with a secondary season during autumn. The habit of our spring weather in turning suddenly from mild to hot sometimes interferes with the proper development of the vegetable. Experience shows that planting as early as the ground can be worked usually allows the plants to produce a fine crop before any interference by the weather.

The spring plantings are by far the surest, but excellent yields are often obtained by planting peas after potatoes or some other early summer crop. The last half of March is usually recommended as the proper time to start pea planting followed at 10-day intervals by successive sowings until the latter part of April.

August 15 is recommended as the right date for planting fall peas. If the soil is both too wet and cold for the seed to sprout, it is better to wait even at the risk of being too late in the season.

ANY FERTILE, mellow, well drained soil is suitable for peas. Light soil dries out quickly in spring and assists in making early planting possible. Cold, dense land retards seedlings.

If it is necessary to use such land the seed should be covered with sand or some other material that will not bake or pack over the seeds while they are germinating. The same site should not be used for peas year after year. Root rots caused by soil-borne fungi may cause excessive losses especially on poorly drained land and during wet seasons.

Garden spots that have been heavily dressed with chicken litter and other similar materials will usually produce an excellent crop of peas without additional fertilization. Such cases are the exception and it nearly always pays to apply about a pound of the standard 5-10-5 garden fertilizer to each 50 foot row-site for peas.

The fertilizer should be thoroughly mixed with the soil before sowing. An economical method consists in placing the fertilizer in bands, one on each side of the row, an inch or two below the level of the seed. Don't allow the fertilizer to touch the seed as it may interfere with germination and early growth.

Smooth Varieties Best

SMOOTH-SEEDED varieties are less subject to rotting in the soil and best suited to first plantings. Alaska and Long-Podded Alaska are both smooth-seeded varieties that require about 10 day's for sowing to edible maturity. Both should have some form of support on which to grow. Chicken netting supported by temporary stakes or short brush such as tree trimmings stuck in the ground serve the purpose.

For the succession plantings the Freezonian, Gradus or Prosperity, and Thomas Laxton, all wrinkled sorts, do well in this section. The Telephone variety is an old timer. All require supports.

The still-growing sorts that require supports are best for places where birds damage or destroy the crop. They seem unable to injure the pods that are out of their reach from the ground.

Prince Georges County
This 35-acre estate conveniently situated below Upper Marlboro, Md., in Patuxent River area is a rare find for the home seeker who desires seclusion with minimum farming operational responsibilities, that is also in a country gentleman's environment, and just 26 miles from Washington, D. C.
The charmingly restored ante-bellum compactly-spacious clapboard residence opens up delightfully on the first floor. Its old wide original flooring is enhanced by the graceful proportions of its rooms. The center hall (14x40) runs the full length of the house and has a gracious winding stairway running to attic. The double drawing rooms and dining room are all 18x20 feet and have open fireplaces. Modern equipped kitchen, powder room and sun parlor of knotty-pine finish complete the first floor.
There are four double master bedrooms, each with an open fireplace and generous closet space; also modern tile bath on second floor. New oil-burning circulating hot-water heating system with summer and winter hook-up. A large unpartitioned attic is over entire house.
Numerous farm buildings, white paneled fencing around property with everything in excellent condition complete the well-planned estate. Price, $31,500. Shown by appointment only. For details call Mr. Whaley at office from 10 A.M. to 1 P.M. on Sunday, or evenings, EM. 6317.

Garden Club Notes

mediate table use, three or four 50-foot plantings, one row each 10 to 12 days, will usually meet the average family needs. If the peas are intended for canning or freezing, the plantings should be much larger.

Our attention has been called to a nearby four-family garden enterprise involving two home freezers. These folks are planting a total of 1000 feet of row, but they have plenty of space and a garden tractor.

Seed treatment with Arasan, Spergon or some other adapted disinfectant, one third of a teaspoonful to each pound of seed, provides excellent insurance against spoilage of the seed in the soil.

A pound of seed is ample for 100 feet of row. This provides about 12 seeds to each foot. Thicker seeding is objectionable. The rows may be as close as 24 inches, but this will necessitate a lot of hand work. Many gardeners with plenty of land space the rows wider, a practice that facilitates power cultivation. Frequent surface stirring of the spaces between the rows accompanied by ach handwork as required for the control of weeds in the rows are all that is required.

Seed treatment and the avoidance of land that was used last year for peas will do much to avoid pest trouble. The pea aphid, pale green plant lice, cause the leaves to turn yellow and make misshapen pods. Nicotine or notenone dusting or spraying usually controls the pest.

Each Sunday from now until September 18 the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Harvest Show Committee will present garden experts over WBCC in programs covering every phase of gardening activity. Today at 1:15 o'clock, Frederick W. Lang, chairman of the 1949 Harvest Show, will interview Edward K. Bender, vegetable specialist, Extension Service, University of Maryland.

"It's Time to Plant" will be their subject, with emphasis on seed flats, cold frames and seeds which can be sown now both indoors and out.

The District of Columbia branch of the National Association of Gardeners will hold its regular monthly meeting Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jules Fritz, 9421 Colesville rd., Silver Spring. Slides will be shown of outstanding flowers, trees and shrubs of an old Maryland estate.

A house-to-house delivery of spring flower plants in Alexandria is planned for April 8 by members of the Women's Auxiliary of Immanuel Church-on-the-Hill, Alexandria.

Phlox, aster, English primrose, chrysanthemums and many other plants are available by calling Mrs. E. H. Wiecking at Temple 1514, by Saturday, April 2.

Before growth starts, rake the lawn carefully to remove trash, tree branches, bones and any other foreign material. All dead grass, especially crabgrass, should be raked and burned. Seed bare spots using grass seed that is adapted to the sunny or the shady conditions found in your yard.

Now is the time to apply a liberal dressing of commercial fertilizer. A 10-6-4 mixture is recommended, but the more common 5-10-5 will suffice, reinforced with a little additional nitrogen. Five to 10 pounds of the mixture to 1000 square feet of lawn should be applied, with the application repeated some three weeks later on poor lawns.

2 Apartment Buildings To Be Erected Soon

A 16-unit, three-story brick apartment is planned for early construction at 1519 4th st. nw., by Samuel Ginsberg. Another building of 13 units will be built at 2701-03 R st. se. by Robert H. Sanford, owner-builder.

Paul T. Stone, Inc., 827 15th st. nw., has been selected to erect a 14-unit apartment on Fort Myer dr. near Lee blvd., Arlington, by the owner, Katherine Gibbs.

More Plywood for Housing

New York, March 26 (AP).—More plywood will be used in house building this year even though fewer homes may be built, an industry spokesman says.

Charles E. Devlin, managing director of Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma, Wash., made the forecast before a meeting of the New York Society of Security Analysts.

Promoting plywood's market in housing, he said, are two factors: Fir plywood supply was limited last year while now it is adequate for all needs; and the construction speed made possible by use of plywood is important in the building industry's program for so-called "economy houses."

Describing a recent slump in the plywood market as largely "seasonal and over-due readjustment," Devlin said:

"In the past two weeks, plywood demand has strengthened greatly, with the spring building upswing ahead, and gives every indication of fast recovery."

The word "robot," used to describe mechanical devices, is derived from the Czech word "robit," meaning work.

A New, Strong Step Taken To Give Us Back Theater

By Richard L. Coe

THE MEETING DIDN'T look too promising. As one of the speakers remarked, everyone who wanted one had an aisle seat.

But from it came the most constructive move yet in the effort to resume the living theater in the National Capital. Everyone in the hall of Smithsonian's Natural History Building had gone out of his way to be there. Everybody there, it turned out, meant business.

By business they didn't mean more talk, although the talks of the evening were far more concrete than the endless yuckety-yuk that's been going on since it was clear the National would replace the Capital's sole workable stage with a silver sheet.

But somehow, though roughly 140 souls looked pretty slim in the cave-like hall, they intended something more than just sitting around and saying, "Something will turn up." They got together, elected a committee, which will be enlarged in time, and told it to bring back a living art to the most important city on the face of the earth.

Celler Bill Focal Point

THE FOCAL POINT of the evening was the Celler bill, designed to restore the Government-owned Belasco Theater with Government funds and then turn it over to the professional theater.

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), who introduced the bill in Congress, was there to explain his idea and two of his House colleagues were on hand to speak bluntly about what Washingtonians could do.

"From the looks of this slim crowd," said Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.), "I'm not sure Washington wants a theater. Unless the voteless people of Washington can impress on the Congress that they want a live theater, I don't see much hope of the bill getting out of the Public Works Committee."

Representative John A. Blatnik (D., Minn.), a former school teacher and war veteran, put much the same idea in different words: "Make yourselves articulate," said he. "We on the Hill are not unaware of the lack of theater, but you've got to talk it up."

Course Being Charted

HOW TO talk it up, how to make Congress conscious of Washington's need and desire for a theater will be the work of the committee formed Wednesday night under the chairmanship of Melvin Hildreth, Democratic National Committeeman for the District.

Already Hildreth and several Congressmen are mapping the campaign and a meeting of the growing committee will be held sometime this week.

Eventually the plan will include the "write your Congressman" drive that has been the spearhead of many moves resulting in direct action. It's too soon to explain exactly what moves will be urged by the committee, but all the city's drama editors have promised to keep the public informed through their columns.

Voice of the City

CHIEF virtue of this citizens' committee, as I see it, is that, for the first time, the city has found a voice in this matter, a voice that leads to action. No longer need it be the subject of isolated newspaper articles and sly cracks in "national newsmagazines" misinterpreting the lack of theater as lack of desire for one.

Another vital aspect is the fact that the group is out to "bring back the theater." If the Celler bill does not pass, though at the moment several astute politicians have high hopes for it, there can be other means tried. The committee will keep at its task until a worthy curtain rises somewhere somehow.

After Thursday's newspaper stories appeared a person prominent in the National Theater dispute stopped me in the street. "Had this committee of residents been formed two years ago," my friend remarked,

THE FOLGER LIBRARY'S Elizabethan Theater will be used for a production of one of the Bard's plays for the first time tomorrow night when the Amherst College Masquers present "Julius Caesar." The play will continue through Thursday night with matinees Tuesday and Wednesday. Next Sunday afternoon a televised version will be given over NBC. Rehearsing, left to right, are: Nesbitt C. Blaisdell, 3901 Conn ave. nw.; Nicholas J. Stanford of Essex, Conn.; Reed F. Stewart, Hyde Park, Mass., and Peter H. Klaussen of Lewiston, N. Y.

Errol, Greer Considering N. Y. Show

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, March 26.—Chester Franklin will produce the next Lassie picture. Remember he put "Sequoia" on the screen; and wrote, directed and produced the first Rin-Tin-Tin pictures . . . Errol Flynn and Greer Garson are talking seriously about doing a Broadway play. Greer has a clause in her Metro contract which gives her the right to do a play or an outside picture. If they can't find a play, they may do an outside picture together, and are talking about the story of Mary Burns, a female pirate of the nineties.

Flynn, incidentally, is finishing his first screen play, "The Last of the Buccaneers," and soon will be off to London to set up financing for the picture which will be shot in color in the Caribbean . . . Buddy Fogelson's back in Texas and Greer Garson is in Bel Air. She has finished "Forsyte Saga," and could now have plenty of dates with Buddy. But I hear the whole thing is iced.

Some Couple

MARJORIE MAIN, Percy Kilbride and Leonard Goldstein took off for Kansas City with their picture, "Ma and Pa Kettle." "That's a far piece away," says Ma. When U-I did "The Egg and I," they took an option on one follow-up picture.

For years I've been urging Metro to reissue "Wizard of Oz." Now they'll do it—at Easter time. The studio will take advantage of three of their stars—Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, and Jack Haley. In "Wizard of Oz" you'll see Judy Garland at her tip-top, singing that haunting melody, "Over the Rainbow."

Red Skelton may reteam with Betty Garrett in "Yellow Cab Driver." That story is as right for Skelton as brown bread is for Boston beans . . . Ben Hogan turned down a $100,000 settlement from the bus company that was the cause of his injury.

Medal for Murphy

AUDIE MURPHY was given a dinner in New York by his publishers, Henry Holt & Co., and learned that his book, "To Hell and Back," is headed for the best-seller lists . . . Greta Garbo tells friends she's perfectly willing to do a play. She wants to play Cyrano in "Cyrano de Bergerac"—putty nose and all; but wouldn't permit an audience to see it. She'd even sign autographs—but no audience. She ain't kiddin'—she's serious.

Linda Darnell's been painting for ages, so I was surprised to learn that she's taken an apartment at the Sunset Plaza to have privacy in her studio.

Radio Webs Still Battle In Public

By John Crosby

NYHT News Service

THE warfare between NBC and CBS for the unofficial title, "The Nation's No. 1 Network," is beginning to sound like a couple of small boys boasting: "My father can lick your father." Recently CBS circulated a letter which argued persuasively that it was now in the No. 1 spot in all respects. This brought a roar of protest from NBC, whose president, Niles Trammell, has just circulated his own letter tearing apart a good many of the CBS claims.

CBS has pointed with pride to possession of 9 of the 15 top Hooperated programs. "These figures," said Trammell grimly, "played a limited one-week engagement. Hooper's latest (March 1-7) show NBC with five, CBS with seven. Beyond his shifting top 15 shows, Hooper continues to tell the same story. NBC delivers more ratings over 10, over 12, than any other network."

As to the CBS claim to the first six most popular daytime programs (by Hooperating), NBC counters with a whopping claim of its own. According to Neilsen ratings, the seven most popular daytime shows are all NBC shows. Both NBC and CBS consistently jump from Hooper to Neilsen and back again—depending on where they show off best. The discrepancy here is so huge that it opens grave suspicions about the accuracy of all rating systems.

Ratings Off

TRAMMELL pointed out with no small glee that the departure of "Amos 'n' Andy" and Jack Benny from NBC to CBS had done their ratings no good. "Currently Benny's rating is down 24 per cent (over last year at the same time on NBC) from 31.4 to 23.8. 'Amos 'n' Andy' are down 34 per cent from 24.9 to 16.4. What price capital gain?"

Trammell concluded that CBS, with its 1,555,000 total watts, leads NBC (which has a total of 1,517,000 watts), but he pointed out that wattage doesn't mean much except when considered with frequency and ground conductivity. Trammell, in this case, is on good hard ground. NBC, the oldest network, grabbed off some of the best frequencies in the spectrum and many of its 50 kilowatt stations—WTMJ in Milwaukee, for example—cover many times the area and population of some of CBS' 50,000 watters.

Shifting over to television, Trammell admitted that CBS had three of the first five most popular network television programs but he added that CBS only had one of the next five and one of the five after that.

Eastertide

The Oratorio Season Is Here Again

By Paul Hume

THE season of the oratorio is upon us again.

Christmas music has its portion of the Messiah, but the Easter section of that oratorio occupies considerably more time and space than the earlier prophetic passages.

POTTER

In addition to performances of the famous Easter pages of Handel's music, many other cantatas and oratorios emerge from their long sleep at this time of year. From now until some weeks after Easter, choirs and choruses will be singing the great words related to the Passion of Our Lord, and to that first Easter.

Two This Week

TWO such works are scheduled for this week. Today at 4, Paul Callaway and the choir of Washington Cathedral will give their third performance of Leo Sowerby's cantata, "Forsaken of Man." This music is now 10 years old. Adopting a plan similar to that of Bach's Passions according to St. Matthew, and St. John, Sowerby employs a narrator to describe the action surrounding the last days of Christ on earth, before the crucifixion.

Other voices impersonate The Christ, Judas, Peter, Pilate, and lesser figures. The chorus sings such famous lines as, "Away with this man and release unto us Barabbas," and the mocking bitterness of "If thou be the Christ, come down from the cross."

Again in the same way as Bach introduces his Passions with nonscriptural texts, so Sowerby intersperses the words of the Gospel with commentaries on the dramatic scene. "Forsaken of Man" does not require a long time for performance. It does not encompass all phases of the Passion and following days.

It is intended rather to suggest the contemporary tragedy implicit in the first Good Friday, with a final chorus which asks, "Is it nothing all ye that pass by?"

But in the economical framework of words and music set for himself, Sowerby has created what is, to us, the one truly great account of this historic occasion since the work of Bach. The work was created for choir and organ

New WTOP Schedule Takes Effect Today

By Sonia Stein

YOU'D BETTER get out those red-headed pins you used during the war to mark deployment of troops on the map. Or maybe a red pencil will do.

But you'll need something to help you to keep track of the upheaval that takes place today in WTOP programming. Actually, much of it is an upheaval to straighten out a previous upheaval which had the station transcribing network shows to play later, because they had transcriptions of previously transcribed network shows to play at that time.

The new schedule moves Elder Michaux and his all-Negro "Happy Am I" choir to 7 a.m., which puts WTOP on the air earlier on Sunday than it's ever been before.

This time change for Michaux's hour-long program now clears time for "CBS News" at 8 and "Chariot Wheels," a network show of spirituals, at 8:15. "Carolina Calling," a half-hour session of rural music, replaces "Columbia Country Journal" at 8:30 on WTOP.

Status quo prevails until 9:45 a.m. when "Top Pop Concert," a three-quarter hour show of annotated light classics, is substituted for "Labor News Review" and "Church of the Air." "Church of the Air" now moves to 10:30 in place of "Invitation to Learning" which used to be a transcribed show from the preceding Sunday. "Invitation" will now be "live" at noontime.

There's news as usual at 11 a.m. and a "Handy Man" show scheduled at 11:05.

Hume Changes

WASHINGTON POST Music Critic Paul Hume takes over the 11:15 a.m. spot today, with comment on the New York Philharmonic program which comes at 3 p.m.—the same format he had formerly at 2:45. The time he previously occupied, and the 2:30 period formerly occupied by Folksinger Pick Temple, now go to "You Are There," the historical show which uses modern radio on-the-spot techniques. Two outstanding "You Are There" programs are being put on records, by the way. "The Battle of Gettysburg" and "The Signing of the Magna Carta" will be available next month on standard size shellac platters and the 12-inch LP Microgroove disks.

"D. C. Dateline," formerly heard at 12:15 p.m., is momentarily off the air. It'll be back April 24 at 1:15 p.m.

Something rather odd turns up at 12:30 p.m. It's a half-hour of Guy Lombardo music in a record program called "Top Serenade." Since this choice might seem to defy all rules of logic or good judgment, it should be noted that Lombardo's orchestra was chosen to fill this spot because the CBS research boys in New York found it to be the most universally acceptable of all orchestras! ! !

This Lombardo program is in the time period normally occupied by Dwight Cooke's "People's Platform" which now will be picked up from the network for delayed broadcast at 11:15 p.m.—the only delayed broadcast in the new Sunday schedule.

"Skyway to the Stars" now comes on "live" at 4:30 p.m. instead of at 10:30 p.m. by transcription, and "It Pays to Be Ignorant" is now free to come through locally at 10:30 p.m., instead of being recorded and delayed until Tuesday night at 10:30.

Aces Tuesday

AND THAT leaves Tuesday night at 10:30 open locally for that masterpiece of malapropism, "mr. ace and JANE," as the CBS press department insists on punctuating it. Since Ace, the network's former comedy director, writes the show, I can't imagine why Jane gets the upper case billing. The Aces have a multitude of died in the syntax fans, who remember the "Easy Aces" of a number of years ago. The show used to be daily and Ace has been writing this lexicographically askew comedy for years. But he claims he won't run out of malaprops. Says Ace, "I've got a million of them . . . too humorous to mention."

There are several changes coming up this week in the daily programming on WTOP, too. (Still got some pins left?)

To begin with, Bill Jenkins is no longer with the station (try WEAM starting April 4) and that leaves a gap in the early morning hours which is to be filled by Mark Evans, who already has a 7 to 7:30 a.m. spot. He is also changing his afternoon spot from

Capital Gets on Record for Theater

"the National need not have closed its stage door."

Javits' Suggestion

REPRESENTATIVE JAVITS touched briefly on one possibility that deserves the greatest consideration. As author of the bill which seeks to create a national theater of the United States, Representative Javits suggested that ANTA—the American National Theater and Academy—might be the suitable authority to take over the Belasco once the necessary renovations have been made. This would have the effect of assuring management for the theater no matter what the National's Marcus Heiman does in the face of a second live theater; it also would give ANTA the home it should have in the seat of Government which created it.

That, to be sure, is still in the discussion stage, but it is an idea worth consideration. The committee under its skilled political chairman will no doubt come up with other ideas impossible to foresee at present.

But at any rate, the citizens of Washington now are beginning to form into a concrete mass. And for a project about which there has been entirely too much talk and too much sitting around and too much "let George do it," this is a heartening thing.

Chairman Hildreth's committee includes: Miss Bess Davis Schreiner, Mrs. Hazel Markel, Miss Frances Starr, Mrs. Constance A. Snow, Mrs. Edgar Mowrer, Miss Charlotte London, Mrs. Edward Sturdevant, Miss Carolyn Will Stuart, Mrs. Frances Nash Watson, Father Gilbert V. Hartke, George Vivian, Horton Foote, Lawrence Heller, Edward Mangum, George Frain, Owen Dodson, Patrick Hayes, Ernie Schier, Oscar Davis, Tom Donnelly and this reporter.

One-Act Play Tourney Begins Tuesday Night

THE twenty-first annual One-Act Play Tournament will get under way Tuesday at 8:15 p. m. in Roosevelt Auditorium, 13th and Allison sts. nw.

Preliminaries will be held Tuesday and Thursday, March 31; Tuesday, April 5, and Thursday, April 7. The finals will be held Saturday night, April 9.

Judges for the preliminaries will be Capt. Gerald Cameron, Mitchel Meyers and Mrs. May Redmond Smith. Judges for the finals will be the city's drama editors: Richard L. Coe, of The Washington Post; Jay Carmody, of the Evening Star; Oscar Davis, of the Daily News, and Ernie Schier, of the Times-Herald.

Tuesday's drama groups will include: The White Hope Players in "Spring," by C. C. Clements; the Jewish Lions Club in "The Pot Boiler," by Alice Gerstenberg; The Lancers in "Period, Period, Period," by Leonard Living, and the Southeast Dramatics Association in "The Two Pierrots, or, The White Supper," by Edmond Rostand.

Thursday night's plays are: The Little Group in "Escape by Moonlight," by Kenneth Crotty; the Midtown Players in "Goodnight, Please," by James L. Daggett; the Rockville Little Theater in "Overtones," by Alice Gerstenberg and the Washington Readers' Club in "The Love Clinic," by Esther C. Averill.

Seats for all performances are on sale downtown at Mrs. Stabler's Ticket Mart, in Lubar's, 1300 G st. nw.

Arnold Show on Twice Today

WITH JACK DEMPSEY and Arthur Lake as guests, Eddy Arnold's "Checkerboard Jamboree" will play two performances at 3 and 8:30 p. m. today in Constitution Hall.

Both performances, sponsored by the Variety Club, are for the benefit of the Coast Guard Inter-Faith Memorial Chapel Fund. Admiral Ellis Reed-Hill heads the committee now raising funds for the chapel, to be constructed at the Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., in memory of Coast Guard men who lost their lives in service.

The United States Marine Band also will join the Eddy Arnold production which includes his popular associates, the Duke of Paducah, Annie, Lou and Denny, Roy Wiggins, Gabe Tucker, Danny Dill and the Oklahoma Ramblers. All performers are donating their services.

'Little Women' Children's Play

"LITTLE WOMEN," Louisa May Alcott's long-lived favorite, will be the final offering of the season by the Clare Tree Major Children's Theater Saturday morning and afternoon in Alexandria's Virginia Theater.

Mrs. Major's group has been playing "Little Women" this season from coast to coast and word has it that its enduring appeal as a juvenile favorite has not tarnished. Mrs. Major's version deals with the "Little Women" as children and follows the original closely.

Saturday's performances at 10:45 a. m. and 2 p. m. will bring to a close the seventeenth season the Children's Museum has sponsored the Major troupe here.

The Museum has a downtown office at 1607 I st. and reservations can be made by phone at Executive 2722 or Metropolitan 0439.

Feature From Israel To Be Shown Tonight

The first complete feature film to arrive from the new state of Israel will be shown tonight as part of the Jewish Community Center's newly organized film theater. This is "The House in the Desert," with an English cast telling the story of a settlement on the Dead Sea.

"Israel in Action," the Palestino newsreel,—a French short subject, "Matisse" and the New York Central documentary "Freight Yard" also will be shown. The center is at 16th and Q sts.; the performance will begin at 8:30.

National—The double bill figure hits H street with Henry Morgan in "This Is New York" and Guy Madison in "Texas, Brooklyn and Heaven."

Metropolitan—"The Treasure of Sierra Madre," Walter Huston and Humphrey Bogart return in one of the Academy Award finalists; opens Thursday.

Playhouse—"Sleeping Car to Trieste," a British adventure film, arrives Friday.

Little—"Marriage in the Shadows," a German film about Nazism and anti-Semitism grew in the crumbling Reich; opens Wednesday.

Kingsley Play Hailed in N. Y.

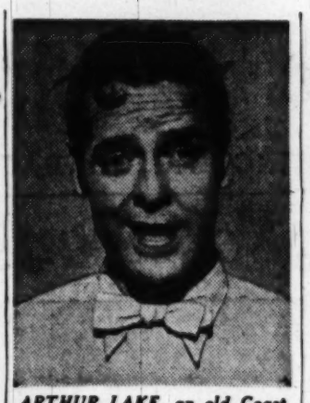
NEW YORK, March 26 (AP).—Playwright Sidney Kingsley takes a surgeon's scalpel and bares both the brain and heart of a tough detective who is too devoted to duty in his newest drama, "Detective Story." The play aroused a Broadway first-night audience to cheers.

The story is a kaleidoscopic picture of three hours on an August night in a New York precinct police station. It is three hours of dramatic happenings which change, disrupt, finish and end in that brief span of time more than a dozen lives.

Detective McLeod, as played with bitter understanding by Ralph Bellamy, is haunted by a childhood where the crimes of his father drove his mother into an insane asylum. He believes every person is good or bad, and there is no middle ground. He has no compassion, no understanding for a man or woman who has violated the law.

Then he finds his own wife, whom he adores, has once been a transgressor herself. He wants to find forgiveness for her, then finds his own hard condemnation of all criminals has trapped him into condemning her himself.

It is a dynamic play, one overflowing with facets of many small dramas of life in a big city as viewed from a precinct detective room. Bellamy as the unyielding detective, Meg Mundy as his wife, Lee Grant as a shoplifter and Lou Gilbert as a believable newspaper reporter are only a few of the splendid cast.



ARTHUR LAKE, an old Coast Guarder, and another C. G. vet, Jack Dempsey, will be on tap this afternion and tonight in Constitution Hall as guest stars with Eddy Arnold's "Checkerboard Jamboree."

Loew's Open Air Starts Up Tonight With Double Bill

Tonight's opening of the E. M. Loew's Open-Air Theater on the Richmond Highway below Alexandria brings this vicinity's open-air, drive-in world to early seasonal peak. The Airport Drive-In opened Thursday night and Sidney Lust's at Beltsville has been open two weeks.

Tonight's opening bill at the Open-Air is a double: "The Three Musketeers," with Gene Kelly, and "Caged Fury," with Buster Crabbe.

2 Fine Programs Set at Phillips

PHILLIPS GALLERY comes up with two of its finest programs today and tomorrow. This afternoon Paul Olefsky, brilliant 20-year-old first cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra, plays one of the very finest cello recitals we have ever seen listed.

NICHOLSON

HANSEL

The time of his recital is 3 in the afternoon, to permit his return to Philadelphia in time for an evening concert there. Note among other things that Olefsky is giving the first performance of a sonata by Robert Parris. That same name appears tomorrow night, when the Tramontana Trio lists the Washington premiere of his trio. These three members of the National Symphony will also play a portion of Bach's Art of Fugue.

This week contains more excellent programs than we have seen in a single seven-day period for a long time. We consider the Sowerby Cantata this afternoon in Washington Cathedral one of the fine works of this century. An hour later Lewis Atwater lists a Bach Cantata. Natalie Hinderas has a good program tonight in the National Gallery, and tomorrow brings Haydn's oratorio, The Creation, with Louis Potter in his farewell to Washington; soloists: Katharine Hansel, soprano; Harold Haugh, tenor; Robert Nicholson, baritone.

JASCHA HEIFETZ, having taken a year's sabbatical, turns to new and unfamiliar music in his excellent program for Tuesday night. Same evening Florence Booker's Madrigal singers put the best program of the YMCA's current year into that auditorium. Wade Stephens is leaving Washington shortly. His organ recital in Calvary Methodist Church this week is one of his last in over 600 he has played here.

Sandra Campbell, 14-year-old Arlington pianist, a student at Dolly Madison Junior High School, plays today with the Arlington Civic Symphony in Washington-Lee auditorium

The Budapest Quartet continues its Beethoven cycle in the Congressional Library, with tickets at a premium. And Friday morning George Barritt sings Washington's first hearing of Benjamin Britten's moving Serenade. Quite a week!

The Agriculture Department Orchestra changes rehearsal time to Friday evenings at 8 in the Thomas Jefferson Auditorium of that department. Members are still invited. Frederick Fall is conductor.

WASHINGTON-LEE Madrigal singers appear this afternoon in the Universalist National Memorial Church, 4 p. m.

Winifred and Benjamin Waldo sing today at 4 in Wilson Boulevard Christian Church. And Sandra Campbell, 14-year-old pianist, plays with the Arlington Civic Symphony, also at 4, broadcast over WEAM.

Details about the fourth international Chopin contest for pianists are available from the Chopin Centennial Committee, c/o Polish Research and Information Service, 250 West 57th st., New York City 19. Warsaw, Poland, between September 15 and October 15, this year, for pianists between 16 and 32, are the bare outlines.

Dame Says Radio Helps Music

Singer Donald Dame of NBC's "American Album of Familiar Music" says radio has made tremendous contributions to the music of the Nation by providing opportunities for musicians.

One of the chief ways radio helps, Dame says, is to give many musicians a chance to start earning a living while they still are studying and training. Another is bringing them to public attention and giving them opportunities outside radio.

The Record Player

Miss Sayao Impressive In Songs of Brazil

FOLK SONGS of Brazil. Bidu Sayao, soprano, with Milne Charnley, pianist. Columbia 812. $4.90.

Rush right out and get these today. Don't wait, because your dealer won't have them very long.

You remember Sayao's wonderful single disc of Villa-Lobos' Bachianas brasileira? Well, these have vague reminiscences of that song. They are also a bit like the Songs of the Auvergne beloved by so many people. But these are their own fascinatng selves, with a unique appeal, and bewitching sounds.

Not quite as simple as true folk songs, they are bright, beautifully arranged, and well recorded. Sayao will amaze you with a low series of tones you and I didn't know she owned. Her changes of pace are perfect, and the way she tosses off fast, amusing items is joyous. If you want a sample, try "Engenho Novo!" where she imitates a sugar processing machine.

Grainger: Molly on the Shore; also Londonderry Air. Charles O'Connell and the Carnegie Pops Orchestra. Columbia 7628-M. $1.25.

If you want these, this record will do as well as any. Be sure you like the arrangements before buying. Good recording.

MAHLER: Songs. Desi Halban, soprano, with Bruno Walter, pianist. Columbia 809. $3.90.

Halban's mother was Selma Kurz, celebrated European soprano of an earlier generation. Walter is Mahler's chief exponent today, having studied conducting under the composer-conductor. This set should be an authoritative account of the songs; we presume that it is.

Unhappily, we do not greatly enjoy the songs. Halban varies from a very sweet quiet voice to considerable shrillness in larger moments. This accentuates the character of the songs themselves, which range from rather attractive simplicity to over-folksy ditties full of "birdies, brooksies and running through the fields all day."

Somehow they don't come off except for odd moments. The piano, as often happens in Columbia's accompaniments, is too subdued.

Tschaikowsky: Symphony No. 3. Sir Thomas Beecham and the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Victor. 1279. $7.25.

This symphony is subtitled "Polish." Full of rhythms appropriate to the unhappy land of Poland, the music is seldom heard. It would be a relief from performances of the fourth and fifth, if we must have Tschaikowsky symphonies regularly.

Sir Thomas moves the music with spirit, and his orchestra sounds brilliant. The recording is good, and my surfaces are entirely satisfactory. The only previous recording of this set available in this country was made by Hans Kindler and the National Symphony, and can compare in no way with this new set.

Watch for early announcement of releases of Telefunken records.

Capitol records have bought and are ready to sell the great Telefunken catalog. These records, made in Europe during the thirties, include some of the finest recording available today. The sets will compare favorably with the most modern recordings.

Artists available on Telefunken discs include Erna Berger, Erna Sack, Maria Mueller, Italo Tajo, Helge Roswaenge, Claudio Arrau, and conductors Mengelberg, Kleiber, Furtwangler, Hindemith, Stravinsky and More.

Haydn Felt His Oratorio Was Great and will be given in Washington Cathedral this afternoon at 4, in place of the customary sermon.

Creation Tomorrow

TOMORROW evening Louis Potter will lead the Washington Choral Society in Haydn's oratorio, "The Creation." This fascinating music was first performed exactly 150 years ago tomorrow. Given its premiere in private in 1798, it had its first public hearing in Covent Garden, London, March 28, 1799, when the composer was nearly 70.

The music abounds with a fresh, vigorous style, both in form and in overflowing melody. No sign of Haydn's age appears in the abundance of praise and joy he pours into this picturesque account of the origin of the various animals and finally man himself. Haydn takes open delight in telling about lightning, rain, sunshine, the "sinuous worm" and many other natural wonders.

He employs his chorus with a freedom dependent only upon his text. The work is unique, though later writers tried to imitate it with little success.

Drive to Work

IT IS interesting to read letters Haydn wrote at the time of the first performance of this oratorio. On June 12, 1799, he wrote his publishers as follows: "My business unhappily multiplies with my years, and yet it almost seems as if with the decrease of my mental powers, my inclination and impulse to work increase. Oh God! how much yet remains to be done in this splendid art, even by a man like myself!"

He goes on, "I only wish and hope that the critics may not handle my Creation with too great severity and be too hard on it. They may possibly find the musical orthography faulty in various passages, and perhaps other things also that for so many years I have been accustomed to consider as minor points; but the genuine connoisseur will see the real cause as readily as I do, and willingly cast aside such stumbling blocks."

Proven Right

THREE years later, when The Creation was being given across the entire continent of Europe, Haydn received a letter of appreciation of his work from a society of amateur musicians in Ruegen, a small city on the Baltic.

He wrote thanking them, and saying, "Often when contending with obstacles of every sort opposed to my works I felt it a hard matter to persevere in the course I had entered on, a secret feeling within me whispered: 'There are but few contented and happy men here below; everywhere grief and care prevail; perhaps your labours may one day be the source from which the weary and worn, or the man burdened with affairs may derive a few moments' rest and refreshment.' What a powerful motive to press onwards!"

Time has proven Haydn right. Today his music is coming more and more into its own proper sphere. Instrumentalists and ensembles are realizing what a mistake it has been to consider Haydn a pleasant, happy composer of less than profound gifts. His genius in the field of chamber music, symphonies, and the oratorio has no parallel, and few rivals.

Art Scholarships

TEN tuition scholarships totaling $2500 for art students in the United States and its possessions are announced by the Art Students League of New York. The scholarships are for two classes during the full 1949-50 term of eight and a half months. They are open to all students living outside of New York City, who have not previously studied at the league. To compete, students must send samples of their work in any medium to the league, 215 West 57th st., New York, on or before April 1.

A jury of artists chosen from outside the league will make the scholarship awards on the basis of work submitted. Competitors' work will be returned by express S.O.D.

The Art Students League is a nonprofit school organized and operated by its members exclusively for educational purposes, since 1875. Among former winners of out-of-town scholarships are Arnold Blanch, Vaclav Vytlacil and Adolph Dehn.

There's Elbow Room at the 1949 Biennial

By Jane Watson Crane

BY COMPARISON with its predecessors, the 1949 Corcoran Biennial presents an air of tranquility and spaciousness. The paintings have room to breathe, and so have the spectators. The jury's choice was limited to 187, at least 100 less than was anticipated. The general impression received is of a remarkably even and well tempered performance, considering the disparate elements of which it is composed. Even the most strident voices are muted. The effect is one of sober reflection. Is American painting really settling down? Or was it the jury's choice which makes it appear so?

Whether you like traditional painting and can't abide abstraction, or vice versa, you will find good painting in both categories. There are works primarily concerned with space relationships, or color. The old-fashioned allegorical theme is popular, with up-to-date handling. There are still-lifes, landscapes, character studies (almost no portraits, formal or informal); several religious paintings, and a scattering of canvases that rely wholly on the design and workmanship. The last are least in number.

Such are the misuses of description that the most intricately patterned are called abstractions, whereas the truly abstract handling of a painting such as Andrew Wyeth's "Karl" is labeled realism.

Virtues in Evenness

TO BE consistent, the show should have no prize winners, for its virtues lie in evenness and the heights and depths are few. But substantial cash awards are made available each year from an established fund and the jury has the task of picking from the group a fresh crop each time that will meet certain specified conditions. No previous Biennial winner may be chosen, or a painting completed before a certain date. The show is composed of invited works and those submitted in open competition.

The first W. A. Clark prize and Corcoran Medal winner is a carefully posed figure of a seated woman in profile, entitled "Romantic Figure," by Eric Isenburger. The skillful organization and general competence of the upper half of the painting seem unquestionable, but we wonder whether any one will agree with us that they would rather see the lower half obliterated.

"Spring Melody," by Nicolai Cikovsky, which won honorable mention in the 1949 Corcoran Biennial

The second prize went to "Witchery," by Fred Conway, a pattern of figures and symbols reflecting the current fad for the pagan as adapted by the sophisticated. The third, to "Flood," by B. J. O. Nordfeldt, a gray canvas of majestic sweep and proportions; and the fourth, to "Century Plant," by Everett Spruce, in which the rather confusing elements of background landscapes are subordinated to the conspicuously featured subject of the title.

Honorable Mention

THE Spruce also received first honorable mention, four more being given in the order named: Karl Knaths, Nicolai Cikovsky, Hans Moller and Martin Jackson. Since Knaths comes to Washington every spring to teach at the Phillips, where some of the finest of his works are invariably on view, the mention is hardly a surprise or an event for this community. Cikovsky used to teach at the Corcoran and in his own studio here. "Spring Melody" has the clear color and sound craftsmanship which has always characterized his work. Moller, whose handsome still-life is singled out, was born and trained in Germany. A resident of this country, he has frequently exhibited here.

The real newcomer among the prize winners is Martin Jackson, whose "Harbor in the Night" is one of the treats of the show. Jackson is a young Philadelphia painter, just beginning to gain recognition.

An assemblage which includes oils by Max Beckmann, the German expressionist who recently became an American citizen, and Grandma Moses, senior primitive extraordinary, can hardly be considered lacking in breadth. The Beckmann is in no way outstanding; the Moses looks thin in relation to the richer paint handling so abundantly evident throughout the exhibition.

There are more than a dozen good paintings by artists of Washington and vicinity. Most spectacular from the point of view of accomplishment is the inclusion of "City Towers" by John C. Lewis, a young painter who has come a long way in less than a year. Like Martin Jackson, Lewis paints with sensitivity as well as facility. Robert Gates, Jack Perlmutter, Bernice Cross and Jessalee Sickman are others whose work stands out in the assemblage.

We enjoyed a long look at the painting by Arthur Osver, who has been called a poet of the roof tops, at Henry Poor's study of himself, at the Reginald Marsh, the Heliker, the Cleve Gray, the Arnest and more than a dozen others. Although paintings by some of the established veterans are included, this is not their show. The strength of the Biennial this year lies in the fresh, highly accomplished painting by the younger men and women.

Aida's Second Half On Next Saturday

Next Saturday night, Toscanini and the NBC Symphony are presenting the second two acts of the complete "Aida." The first two acts were put on last night.

With these presentations Toscanini concludes his conducting season. Broadcasts start at 6:30.

What With TV and Radio Jim Gibbons Keeps Busy

4:45 to 3:30 o'clock this week. This incidentally moves "Handy Gal" from 5:10 p.m. to 3:55 p.m. This is a small program which shouldn't be overlooked by devotees of efficient, informative programs.

The Mark Evans show, one of the lucrative "Housewives Protective League" shows which are aired in many cities throughout the country on a prescribed format and with prescribed voice technique, is for the devotees of rambling, ravelling, unstrung information.

The Lees Again

JENKIN'S departure also opens up an opportunity on Elinor Lee's "Home Service Daily." Since Mrs. Lee writes a lively script and gives her foil ample opportunity for self expression, the assignment is a nice one. Lee Vickers, who has been with WTOP for 10 years, and once did a show with Mrs. Lee which played on the Lee-Lee billing, is the new and welcome purveyor of the male viewpoint on this show.

There are some other changes to be made in Saturday's schedule but they'll have to remain a delightful surprise because this traffic report is beginning to pall.

ᔓᔕ

THERE'S been so much talk about filibustering on Capitol Hill, I began to wonder who holds the record for all-out, year-round, non-stop running off at the mouth among the radio gab artists.

Locally, and probably nationally, the brass-plated tonsils seem to belong to Bob Wolff, who figures he does over 1000 hours a year steady talking on sports, when all of his radio (WINX) and television (WTTG) programs are added together. Starting a week from tomorrow, he'll be coming off the air at WINX at 6:30 and going on the air at WTTG at 6:45. The eight-block trip will be by taxi.

Giving him constantly increasing competition is Jim Gibbons of WMAL and WMAL-TV, who does the early morning (6 to 9 a. m.) disk show on WMAL, and handles the sports shows besides. If you count actual time before the microphone, Gibbons clearly beats Wolff, but since his three-hour morning show is occupied in part by music, he probably loses to Wolff in the actual larynx derby by two rasps and a squeak.

Adding New Show

GIBBONS adds a new TV show to his schedule this week, which means he'll be at the microphone 24½ hours a week, without counting the football color accounts he does in season and the other sports special events which turn up occasionally.

The new show, which will probably be called "Telesportsreel," begins Tuesday night at 7:15 and will be a four-a-week show using films, still pictures and guests. Gibbons will introduce Washington baseball stars and give golf and tennis enthusiasts a chance to learn techniques from local professionals who will appear "live" and on film.

He already has a "Cartoon-a-Quiz" sports show on TV Thursdays at 7:30 p. m. and will now be following himself with that show.

He telecasts the fights for WMAL-TV on Monday nights and the wrestling on Wednesday nights. It was probably his apt comments on the grunt and groan routines as much as anything which won him top sportscaster place in the latest Teleguide Magazine popularity poll. Wolff won it last time with his baseball coverage for WTTG.

GIBBONS

(When Wolff is doing night games, he has to dash to the ball park right after his TV show at WTTG, which will now come right after the WINX show, so he packs a picnic lunch and gets what vitamins he can that way. Gibbons, who averages 4½ or 5 hours sleep a night, takes cod liver oil in the football season to fight the flu.)

Gibbons has never missed a broadcast in all his eight years of broadcasting (all but a few months of them at WMAL), although he has to make overnight jumps between such distant points as Dallas and Philadelphia during the football season when he joins Harry Wismer in covering the collegiate games on Saturday and the Redskins games on Sundays.

Anybody want to challenge Wolff or Gibbons to the talkin' title? Ladies invited.

ᔓᔕ

MISS SUSAN SWARTZ and Miss Elizabeth Bukowski will give a recital of French and Polish folksongs this afternoon at 4:30 on WQQW. There's some possibility this program may be the first in a series of concerts by young Washington artists . . . CBS has signed Abe Burrows for seven years. Contract calls for his exclusive services on radio and television as performer, director, producer and writer . . . Joan Davis is expected to star in "Leave It to Joan" for CBS this summer.

Independents Want In

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, March 26 (AP).—The Nation's independent radio stations plan to throw their weight around a little more hereafter in the shaping of policies for the broadcasting industry.

They claim that one half of the Nation's 2700 radio stations are independents that operate without network connections and affiliations, and that they play a vital role in the industry and in the communities they serve.

The independents have called a special meeting in Chicago April 10, one day in advance of the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters, to agree on a plan of action.

Ted Cott of Station WNEW in New York, chairman of the independents' executive committee, says he's opposed to setting up a splinter or rump organization outside the NAB, which represents better than four fifths of the industry. But independent broadcasters feel, he explains, that they should start to "speak with one voice."

The independents long have contended that many industry policies—including the NAB broadcasting code adopted last year—were shaped to fit the needs of network stations and often worked hardships on the independent or community station. This has been denied by network stations, but in any event the subject will be threshed out at the NAB convention April 11-13.

Networks Let Public in On Wrangling

NBC, he said, scored 5 out of the first 10 and 9 of the first 15 in January.

Forty Fold

CBS had claimed correctly that its total of sponsored television programs were 40 times as great the first quarter of 1949 as the same period in 1948. "A very creditable gain," remarked Trammell wryly. "With understandable restraint CBS has not sought to compare its TV billings with NBC. For the record: NBC billed six times as much as CBS in January, 1949, and led in a number of network advertisers by a similar 6 to 1 ratio."

Trammell also looked skeptically at the CBS boast that its radio business was running 8 per cent ahead of last year. "That's more in the nature of a recovery," he commented. "CBS' first quarter billings have now caught up to their level of 1945."

Well, there it is. I'm still not sure which is the No. 1 network and I don't think it matters much to the listeners. I don't know of any other business where they squabble about it in public, though. Does Macy's circulate letters poking fun at Gimbel's?

Maurice Chevalier . . . his new show, transcribed in Paris and flown to the United States, will be heard on WOL Thursdays at 10 p. m. starting March 31

How to Avoid Eye Fatigue

PITTSBURGH, March 26.—Six rules for visual comfort in viewing television were issued today by the American Optometric Association. They are:

1. Make sure that your set is properly installed with particular attention to the antenna, for clearest possible reception
2. In tuning, adjust tone setting before turning the picture up to desired brilliance. Strike a comfortable balance between steadiness of image and brilliance. Either an unsteady image or too much light will result in visual discomfort.
3. Avoid both intense darkness and bright light in the room in which television is viewed. If the room is totally dark there will be too much contrast between the bright screen and its surroundings. If there are bright lights they will distract you from the screen. Mild, indirect light is preferable.
4. Sun glasses should not be worn for televiewing because they adapt vision to unnatural conditions.
5. Avoid excessively long periods of close concentration on the television screen.
6. In case of discomfort, have your vision examined by a competent vision specialist and follow his advice. Many older persons who wear bifocal glasses may find neither segment suited to television viewing. They may be helped by special lenses prescribed for the proper distance.

Afflicted Children To Be on Video

The first "live" television program showing children afflicted with cerebral palsy will be presented on WMAL-TV Thursday at 8:30 p. m. to acquaint the public with the strides being made in treatment of such cases.

Past TV programs on the subject have been on film.

Dr. Winthrop M. Phelps, cerebral palsy expert from Baltimore, and Dr. Paul O'Donnell will participate in the program which is being produced with the cooperation of the D. C. Society for Crippled Children.

The program will be under the supervision of Van Buren De Vries of WMAL-TV.

Increasing Use of Film In Television Noted

Film recordings are being used to an increasing extent to provide television network programs to stations not yet having network connections. NBC says it alone is producing film recordings of its programs at a rate exceeding the total production of the major motion picture studios.

Ozzie and Harriett Nelson make their switch from NBC to CBS Sunday, April 3. Their spot on NBC will be taken over by the young comedy team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis.

The Lincoln Engineering Co. of St. Louis has developed a double side record changer to play continuously up to 15 hours from the Columbia-type long-playing records.

General Instrument Corp. and Admiral have come out with changers to handle all three types of record—standards, L-P's and the new RCA Victor disks that spin at 45 revolutions a minute.—A.P.

Video Revue Leads a New Trend

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK, March 26 (AP). Broadway is now in the confusion it faced a quarter century ago when talking pictures first began to peek above the horizon. Now, the excitable subject for players and playwrights is television.

Normally these first days of the lilac and robin atmosphere on Broadway marked the beginning of the off season for the revue and dramatic players except perhaps a summer theater engagement or two.

Today the trend is changed. Players are abandoning Broadway stages, returning from Hollywood and elsewhere for the increasingly busy television season.

Television has achieved such a state of permanence among the Broadway players that an invitation to one of its shows ranks with the "hot tickets" for "Death of a Salesman" and "Kiss Me, Kate," the town's two most topmost hits.

Revue Tops

CASUAL oracles along the Broadway front, where telecast theaters rival flesh-and-blood playhouses, testify that the most avidly pursued ticket is for "The Broadway Revue," a musical show telecast from a theater in Columbus Circle at the topmost end of Broadway.

Only a short time ago the cost of seeing the stars of "Broadway Revue" was six dollars. Sid Caesar was in "Make Mine Manhattan," a top Broadway revue; Mary McCarty was in "Small Wonder," another Broadway hit; Imogene Coca, pert comedienne, has been starred in any number of Broadway musicals. All are telecast in "Broadway Revue." The revue changes every Friday, only the cast is consistent.

The hep members of Broadway television audiences have been studying the accomplishments of Max Liebman, who conceived the show and produces its weekly programs. This soft-spoken director of 43 found that television was controlled by engineers and other technological minds. Liebman wisely started by selling himself to the technicians, rather than trying to change their technique.

IMOGENE COCA
. . . in smart TV revue

Lighting First

FIRST, he persuaded them to make a small revolution in lighting. In Liebman's show it has become a servant of mood and style as it has long been in the theater. The effect is most marked in dance groupings; it creates an intimacy with audiences which television has long thought impossible.

Television's devotion to broad comedy and the straight vaudeville format has been overthrown by the Liebman revue. This show has a sophisticated tone, as smart as any current Broadway show. It has dared to satirize modern painting, psychiatry, movie epics, advertising and other themes not commonly found on television.

Liebman says that he learned about television and, incidentally how to transform players and playwrights into working for television—a few years ago when he was producing shows at a summer camp in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania. There he had on his staff such subsequent stalwarts as Morrie Ryskind, coauthor of "Of Thee I Sing" and "Louisiana Purchase;" E. Y. Harburg, who later helped write "Bloomer Girl" and other Broadway musical hits; and Sylvia Fine, who writes all the personal comedy for Danny Kaye, her husband.

To Broadway

IN 1939 Liebman's show was brought from the Pocono Mountains down to Broadway and presented as "The Straw Hat Revue." It was an immediate hit.

Liebman also brought down a trunkful of sketches, plots and whatnot which he is increasing daily in his office in the New York Theater Guild Building where he is building up his bulwark of material for television audiences. He relaxed somewhat this week when his television revue was contracted for another 26 weeks, which means that he has the oh! so simple task of completing another 26 musical revues every seven days from now until the snow flies again.

(P.S. If Broadway weather continues as it has been for the last few weeks, Maestro Liebman may see the snow fly again within the next 26 hours.)

You Can't Believe Your Eyes

BALTIMORE, March 26 (AP).—Television "lookers" have been shown that they can't believe their eyes. And it isn't because many sets are in bars.

Soberly scientific experiments by Johns Hopkins University psychologists have demonstrated that:

What's in your pocket may have something to do with what's in your eyes—a coin may actually look different to a rich man than to a poor one.

Your personal needs influence the way your eyes perceive objects, and pretty often you don't actually see what you think you see anyhow. But just how you see things may be a clew to your personality.

All of this, and more, was illustrated in a half-hour telecast recently, with tests unfolding on the video screens involving pictures, people, and psychologists—the latter Dr. Clifford T. Morgan and associates.

It represents a part of a new milestone in the oft-discussed television-education tieup. For Hopkins and Station WMAR-TV, Baltimore, will put on a whole series of such programs, the first undertaken by an American university.

Chemistry, physics, medicine, sanitation—all phases of Hopkins research will be bared to televiewers in the weekly series, university officials said, with leading scientists participating.

The first show early this year had Dr. Ralph E. Gibbon and Dr. Clyde Holliday of the Hopkins applied physics laboratory explain motion pictures and still shots taken from a camera that went, rocket-borne, 70 miles into the stratosphere. Rocket and camera were built at the Hopkins lab.

Why the series?

Said Dr. Isaiah Bowman, Hopkins president:

"A university has a duty not only to its students but to a wide public in the United States.

"Television has given us another method of bringing education into the home—the opportunity of expanding our program of general education to include interested persons of all ages."

D. C. Title Play Slated April 2-3 in Alexandria

By Marian H. Barre

WASHINGTON'S own city championships will be held next Saturday and Sunday at the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. The locale was chosen because of the acute hotel shortage here during the convention season.

Two events make up the tourney program: Mixed pairs play Saturday beginning at 2 p. m., with finals at 8 p. m., all entries playing through both sessions. Defenders of this title are Mrs. H. E. Whittaker and Edward Pierson of Baltimore. The open pair championship goes through a qualifying round starting at 1 p. m. Sunday; finals start at 7 p. m.

A special pair game will be held concurrently with open finals. This section is for those not competing in the championship as well as for those who fail to qualify. Current open titleholders are John McDermott, Arlington, and Irving Rottenberg of Richmond.

Play will be directed by Paul E. Golden, with C. C. Johnson serving as tournament chairman. Both men are officials of the Washington Bridge League, which sponsors the championships under ACBL sanction.

ᔓᔕ

LOCAL fans (more males than females) are down in Richmond, where a sectional tourney ends today with a match for foursomes. The travelers expect to get back tonight, or early tomorrow in plenty of time for the Federal Bridge League's master point monthly at 8 p. m. Monday at 1300 New Hampshire ave. It's the sole national event here this week, barring the city championships.

This is the second consecutive week when the Federal League replaced foursomes with duos, its Red Cross benefit having been held last Monday—winners elsewhere in this colum. Team play will be resumed on April 4; meanwhile the "Gremlins," a lineup that rates itself as less-than-expert, continue as last match winners. Members of the foursome are Miss Anna Charest, Mrs. Serena Kramer, Margaret Nickson and Betty West. But these modest ladies would be the first to mention that they owe their eminence to the vagaries of the handicap system.

Because of the city championships, the Agriculture Bridge Club monthly scheduled for April 2 will be postponed until the following Saturday, April 9, beginning at 1 p. m. in Euclid Studios.

When the Washington Bridge League meets Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Hotel Roosevelt both pair and team sections will be set up. A win in either section qualifies a player to compete in the new "winners' game" in April.

ᔓᔕ

WESTERN Carolina's bridge championship series at Battery Park Hotel in Asheville begins Friday evening, continuing through two rounds on Saturday.

Stone, Boschan, Tubbs and Poissant formed the winning lineup at the Roosevelt last Wednesday, with McGhee, Harris, Steinbach, Ashton, second, trailing by 2½ boards.

The Federal League benefit for the Red Cross netted about $50. Winners in the Mitchell game were Mrs. M. Boschan and George Kathan, Dr. Gerald Wooley and Miller Roberts.

Master points in competition at Euclid Studios on March 19 went to W. S. Benedict and Kathan, Paul Kevalsky and A. Camire.

National awards were offered also at the La Salle game last Monday. Mrs. Katherine Fenton-Mrs. Mary Goodstein, Miss Clara Sternacker-D. R. Anderson formed the winning partnerships. It was the first master point for Anderson.

At the F. A. Walker Club's March master-point game there was a tie for the north-south top between Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Campbell and Maj. H. G. Rudman and James Guthrie; east-west leaders being Capt. C. A. Stevens, jr. and Capt. A. D. Neale. The April quota of master point at Arlington Farms Club will be in competition next Friday. Col. Henry Walker directs both associations.

First Big Game Telecast

The National Broadcasting Co. telecast a major league baseball game for the first time when the Cincinnati Reds faced the Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on August 26, 1939.

THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD

by FULTON OURSLER

Writer, editor, journalist and playwright, the author at present is a senior editor of Reader's Digest, dealing with religious material.

PREFACE BY THE AUTHOR

This is the story of Jesus.

It is a chronology of events from the betrothal of Mary and Joseph to the days after the Resurrection, and the episodes are taken from the four Gospels. What is imaginative in the narrative is largely detail to fill in chinks left open in the Bible accounts; nothing has been included that did not seem a reasonable assumption from the records.

In writing anew the wonderful life of Jesus, the author has had but one thought in mind, and that was to induce readers to go to the Gospels and hear the story at firsthand. It was Rabbi Solomon B. Freehof, of a great Jewish temple in Pittsburgh, who said to me at dinner one evening that the unspoken scandal of our times was the hidden fact that Bible-reading had been largely given up in America.

Later, as I traveled around the country and talked to many different kinds of men and women—fellow passengers in Pullman and day coach, stenographers, lecture committee chairmen—I made casual allusions in conversation to Biblical passages. I soon discovered that references which in my boyhood were cliches of front-porch talk had no meaning whatever for these later companions. Even such obvious phrases as "Thirty pieces of silver" or "The angel that troubled the waters" left many listeners with blank stares. Yet when I explained the meaning, their interest was clear; a sample from the great history invariably roused the appetite for more.

These experiments helped me to come to a long-considered resolution. Ever since my first visit to Palestine, in 1935, I had been tempted. A tour of Galilee, Samaria, Judea, and Transjordania had evoked again in me a deep interest in Christianity which had filled me up when I was young. Now, after twenty-five years of contented agnosticism, I was stirred up again. I began to read various chronologies by which Catholic and Protestant theologians had sought to straighten out the apparent confusions and contradictions in the Gospels. This book follows none of the established time and sequence formulae but draws from several, in what seemed to the writer the most natural and probable line.

The book is not offered as an explanation or an interpretation. It is rather an attempt to tell, faithfully, just what the four Apostles, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, assert to have happened in those thirty-three years of the life of Jesus. It is, further, an effort to state the believing Christian's understanding of the meaning of those years. There is no intention here to rationalize or to hunt out a symbolism. While sometimes dramatized, the story is completely faithful to the literal statements of the text.

With much help and counsel I have told here the great story once more—the story of the greatest event in human history. For once upon a time and long ago it actually happened, according to the faith of true believers, among which the author counts himself.

God, who had fashioned time and space in a clockwork of billions of suns and stars and moons, in the form of His beloved Son became a human being like ourselves. On this microscopic midge of planet He remained for thirty-three years. He became a real man, and the only perfect one. While continuing to be the true God, He was born in a stable and lived as a workingman and died on a cross.

He came to show us how to live, not for a few years but eternally. He explained truths that would make our souls joyous and free.

This is the story of Jesus—the greatest story ever told.

Fulton Oursler

ALL FAITHS AGREE

The Greatest Story Every Told . . . "seriously ranks as one of the most distinguished works of our times."

"It has recaptured the spirit of the times and made me feel that I was an eye-witness. I am confident it will be a classic in its field and do a world of good."

The Rev. John A. O'Brien, Ph.D., Head, Dept. of Philosophy, University of Notre Dame

"Now and then, every fifty years or so, a truly great 'Life of Christ' appears. Fulton Oursler's book is in the great tradition of these 'Lives.' In my opinion, it is one of the most distinguished works of our time."

The Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, Marble Collegiate Church, Dutch Reform, New York City

"With reverent imagination he has recaptured the original setting of our Lord's life. The reader breathes the atmosphere of Palestine and views Christ as the eternal contemporary."

The Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, Christ Church, Methodist, New York City.

"It is said that a life of Christ is published about once a month. But not such a life of Christ as this."

The Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, Calvary Episcopal, New York City

"My fellow Jews will value it for its historic interpretation of a most illustrious member of our race — Jesus of Nazareth. In my opinion, the story not only SHOULD, but WILL have quick universal acceptance."

Otto N. Frankfurter

"THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD might well serve as a design for human life and a guide to eternity."

J. Edgar Hoover

DRAMATICALLY ILLUSTRATED

At left is a sample of the unique and highly skilled adaptation of Rembrandt and other great etchings and paintings which have been gathered from many sources to illustrate THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD. A master craftsman reworked these art masterpieces for eye-appealing reproduction in newspapers, keeping faith with every detail and atmosphere of each original. Just as Fulton Oursler preserved the story of Christ in modern and popular language, so have the theme and feeling of these great art treasures been captured in modern pictorial effects.

Girls Score Their Own Prejudices

By Fred M. Hechinger

"I AM prejudiced. I find positive proof of my prejudice in a conscious effort 'not to be prejudiced.' In the very effort to single out Jewish friends, to be careful of others' feelings, to overlook economic considerations, I find a certain repugnance. Correction I believe is an individual responsibility for which the method is education—education of the growing and as yet unborn children."

These are the words of a college senior at Wellesley. In their self-analysis they are hard-hitting, relentless, artless, honest and basic. They are at once singularly painful and filled with hope.

Some 30 young American women, after expert discussion with Mrs. Mary Ellen Goodman, their sociology instructor, were asked to submit unsigned and unidentifiable self-analyses of their own prejudices, their origins and causes. Only one of the anonymous papers claimed that the author was free of all bias. Almost all the rest were as self-accusing as the one from which I quoted.

What Are Causes?

WHAT were the causes of the anonymous student's prejudice? Born in the Middle West, daughter of a Midwestern businessman and a Texan mother, she says: "Primarily, I blame my family . . . My mother and father are most responsible for the deep-seated attitudes of inferiority I held against Jews, Indians, Negroes and the lower economic classes. We belonged to the right social set, the right church, and the right political viewpoint and consequently felt no pressure."

From there the trend continues almost unnoticeably. "Prejudice was perpetuated through the doubtful humor of Jewish business stories, Scandinavian accent jokes, outright condemnation of "dirty Negroes and Indians."

From the age of 15, at a private school in Virginia, the girl remembers being surrounded by a great number of Negro servants and "became adept at buttering up the servants without any real friendship and with a growing dislike." By the time she arrived at college she labels herself "a thoroughly indoctrinated snob."

Then a new set of influences started an opposite development. "Contacts made at Wellesley plus a new liberalism of our education have served to clarify the ill effects. I do not presume that I am truly tolerant: correction will only come through reeducation."

While the "nearly integrated lives in the collegiate 'ivory tower'" have helped this girl, she has come up against an even more effective block to the old prejudices: A bleak photo shows her brother's grave in France flanked by a white Star of David and the name "Weinberg" and a white cross tagged "Martini."

She Couldn't Stay

ANOTHER anonymous student recalls that she was 9 years old when she brought home Josephine, her best little friend in school, for dinner. Mother said Josephine couldn't stay. She was colored. That was the beginning of her own "awareness." Later, in junior high, she witnessed the "black-balling" of her best friend. But by that time I realized that my father, too, was speaking of the Jews in uncomplimentary terms." Later the beginnings of a high school romance were broken up by family objections to religious differences.

"The experience is one I shall never forget," says the girl. "Now I, too, am conscious of the barrier. I lose respect for anyone who exhibits prejudices, but I am equally guilty, although I say nothing . . ."

In a Midwestern town Marian Anderson was denied a hotel room. One of the students' parents said: "It's a shame, but I suppose the hotel would insult its Southern guests if they took her in." The girl added: "My reaction was 'So what!' but I promptly forgot the episode. I am ashamed of prejudices in any form. I am ashamed of myself."

Another student felt certain that her father had no dislike for Negroes; "yet," she admitted, "I am sure that he, like many businessmen, would hesitate to employ one in his office."

In the calm honesty of this scholarly attempt at self-analysis there is more hope than in pompous speeches. The educational command of "Know Yourself" is an old one. It is a tough command to follow, but its strength is that anyone—without a teacher, a school, a university—can try to follow it. Wellesley's is only a sample offer. There's no patent pending, and you are free to set up your course in your living room and your mind.

The Washington Philatelist

Plate Number Situation May Need Investigating

By William M. Stuart

ALL SHEETS of United States stamps printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing have identifying marks known to philatelists as plate numbers. Collection of plate numbers has increased through the years until today this group of specialists is deemed of unusual importance in the field of philately. Rumors persist that the Postoffice Department would be receptive to any suggestion whereby plate numbers could be removed from all sheets.

Officials of the department fully realize the handling of plate numbers does anything but expedite delivery of orders to be filled by the Philatelic Agency. Because of this fact, a thorough investigation of the whole problem (especially their value to the department as well as to collectors) may be made. Collectors generally look for the position of the plate number on each sheet, and when six sheets are used for the same stamp, one can readily see how much time is necessary for properly filling orders. Some insist the plate number collector should be given preference in service at the agency, while an increasing number of collectors appear to favor entire removal of all plate numbers.

It is more than possible that postal officials at no distant day may make a complete and thorough inquiry into the plate-number situation.

POSTMASTER GENERAL DONALDSON and the chairmen of the Senate and House Postoffice and Civil Service Committees of the Eighty-first Congress have been in consultation regarding the stamp program for 1949. The wholesale issuance of commemorative stamps will be curtailed and the Postmaster General has been assured that in the future the department will control the progam. In other words, only those commemoratives that meet the approval of the department will be considered by Congress. The chairmen of both committees have named subcommittees of each to work with postal officials. There have been bills introduced thus far in Congress this year for 48 commemorative stamps. Now that an agreement has been reached, the stamps of the future will be issued according to the plans of the department.

DR. MYNCHENBERG, president of the Precancel Stamp Society, Inc., will be the guest of the Capital Precancel Club at its meeting tomorrow evening at Weeks Stamp Shop, 1229 New York ave. nw.

The Capital City Postcard Collectors Club has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Leonard W. Rice; vice president, Kelvin J. O'Malley; second vice president, Ernest L. Andes; secretary, Miss Florence Witte; treasurer, Mrs. Gertrude C. Frazer, and publicity director, Miss Gertrude C. Lehman.

The Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., met Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, Ellery Denison presiding. The feature of the evening was the activity of the Bourse, new foreign issues being in the lead. Mr. Denison reported on the 1949 "Balpex" held March 16 to 20 under the auspices of the Baltimore Philatelic Society, in the Maryland Institute of Art, Baltimore, and well attended by Washington collectors. Gold medals were awarded Svend Yort and Denison and honorary mention given Dr. G. G. Frazier, Joseph Herbert, jr., and Valdemar Weiergand. At the meeting on Tuesday evening in Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., the speaker will be Julian T. Baber of the United States Secret Service, who will discuss the counterfeit stamp problem.

UN Talk in Prince Georges

New Jive Lingo Hits Campuses

By Ina R. Friedman

THERE'S a new kind of jive talk on the high school campuses of Prince Georges County. FAO, UNESCO, ITO, WHO are only a few of the symbols bantered back and forth. Unlike regular jive, though, this stuff can even be understood by adults. It's United Nations talk.

This language of the nations is not new. For the past year, the county high schools have been seriously delving into such adult worries as the Food and Agriculture Organization and the need of world wheat agreements as well as the World Health Organization and its work in halting cholera epidemics. Through special projects and assemblies, the meaning of a United Nations world has assumed a reality.

On Tuesday at 8 p. m., they will reveal their findings. In pageant form, 600 students will tell how the United Nations affects them and every other person in the world.

From the moment the Greenbelt high students march down the aisle of Ritchie Coliseum at the University of Maryland bearing flags of the 58 members of the United Nations to the singing of "Let's Make the World of Tomorrow Today," the high schoolers will be presenting their plea for a true United Nations.

Choral Readings

IN everyday eighth grade language, students from the Mt. Rainier High school will present a choral reading of the preamble to the United Nations charter. In their enthusiasms over the pageant they have also made posters for exhibition. They are perhaps fired by the zeal of their teacher, Miss Ruth Alden, who lived most of her life in South Africa. Miss Alden feels that "the United Nations is very fundamental at this moment. People who have progressed on the civilized scale owe a duty to the less advanced peoples to help them get ahead. The United Nations is the best way of doing it."

DURWARD V. SANDIFER
. . . he'll talk about the UN

When the scene switches to the General Assembly, the eighth graders from Mrs. George Kabat's Greenbelt High class will be the ones to represent the 58 member nations. The school band will furnish the music for the color bearers, and the school chorus will present several United Nations songs.

In depicting the work of the Economic and Social Council and the work of its 11 commissions and the specialized agencies under it, the actors will be drawn from the eighth grade students of Hyattsville school, and Miss Frances Bell is the director; but the script is strictly a one-world innovation.

Choral readings by the Bladensburg High school students of Mrs. Thelma Strohmaier will offer excerpts from the charter on human rights and the introduction to the UNESCO charter.

Judson H. Lincoln of Lyndon Hills High school will be in charge of scenes from the Security Council, and Miss Lois Fasig will lead the students in singing several songs.

Songs by Choir

CLIMAXING the pageant will be several songs by the Maryland Park High school choir, composed of 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grade students. Ray Chilton will be the baritone soloist and Mrs. Edward Pelling, the school's music director, will lead the audience in the singing of the United Nations' song, "Let's Make the World of Tomorrow Today."

The rally, to be held at the Ritchie Coliseum of the University of Maryland, is under the sponsorship of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters and will also feature an address by Dr. Durward V. Sandifer, acting director of United Nations affairs for the State Department, on "Strengthening and Suporting the UN."

Russian Calls U. S. Children Victims of Comics

By Joseph Newman

MOSCOW, March 26 (NYHT).—In the Soviet Union, it was observed here recently, school children receive the foundations for the "Communist world outlook." In the United States, on the other hand, school children were said to be the victims of comic books which make them juvenile criminals.

P. Tokaryev, of the Teachers' Training School at Omsk, Siberia, pointed out in a letter to the Teachers' Gazette that the foundations of the Communist world outlook are laid right in elementary school. He added: "This holds true even more for middle school, which provides the richest and many-sided material for shaping a complete and symmetrical Communist world view in school children."

Teacher Tokaryev criticized current text books on pedagogy which fail to provide correct theoretical guidance to teachers in the ideological and political field. As an example, he cited the chapter on "Inculcation of the Communist world outlook" in a pedagogical book by a Professor Shimbirev published in 1940.

The author maintained that "a complete and symmetrical Communist world outlook is elaborated only when a person is grown up, outside the confines not only of elementary but also of middle school." Tokaryev found this notion "astonishing."

Again Takes Issue

HE FOUND equally objectionable the author's contention that a young person can acquire a more or less integrated Communist world outlook only through further mature development—through the study of theory and practice of arts, technics and science, and of the classics of Marxism-Leninism and Bolshevik history—all combined with personal participation in the construction of a Socialist society.

According to this view, observed Tokaryev, only a few highly talented individuals could ever achieve an integrated Communist world outlook. He rejected Professor Shimbirev's position that much more schooling was necessary to secure the desired outlook by citing the words of Mikhail Kalinin, late President of the Soviet Union.

Kalinin told senior students of a Moscow middle school that it was not too soon for them to begin worrying about their convictions. He said:

"You doubtless well know the life story of Comrade Stalin. By the age of 15 he was already a Marxist, and when he was 17 he was expelled from the seminary because he held certain political convictions directed wholly against the Czarist autocracy, against capitalism. So you see how early Comrade Stalin formed his opinions. But if in those days people could form their opinions so early, how much easier it is for you to solve that problem now."

Letter to Editor

WHILE Soviet students and teachers are devoting their time and energy to these serious matters, what is taking place in the schools of the United States? Dr. Johanson I. Zilberfarb, professor of education, sent a letter to the Moscow News dissecting an article on education published in the State Department's Russian language magazine, America. He said the magazine tried to tell the Soviet reader that education is flourishing in the United States. He cited American statistics to the effect that six million American children, or one fifth of the total, do not attend school.

What about those who do? Sergei Kozelski answered this in an article published by the Teachers' Gazette. He began by saying:

"If you visit a New York school you will see two policemen there. They peep into every corner of the school. During recess periods these policemen go to the playground to watch the children. They are present at this school because crime is reigning there. There is a special policeman for the examination in arithmetic because the children send anonymous letters to the teacher threatening to cut her fingers or put her eyes out in the event she gives them a bad mark for the exam.

"In another New York school, students terrorize smaller ones and seize from them money, pens and sweets. And all this is done under the threat of torture. When the teacher asked the children why they did not disclose these threats they answered that they did not want their eyes cut out, as happened to one boy who complained to the teacher."

Comics Blamed

THE AUTHOR explained that this was not just the case in certain individual schools. He went on to speak of the general increase in juvenile crime in the United States, which he attributed to the unrestricted flow of comic books of a demoralizing character.

He mentioned the murder committed by a 13-year-old boy in Chicago and the statement by Samuel Andalman, the defense attorney, that the criminal was not the boy but the large industry which turned out comic books.

Kozelski described as "capitalist hypocrisy" the argument that legal control of comic-book publishers would interfere with freedom of the press.

D. C. Girl Makes Honor Society At Chambersburg

Chambersburg, Pa., March 26.—Election of Miss Frances Bolgiano, 6912 8th st. nw., Washington, D. C., to Candle Club, Wilson College honorary society, was announced today by Dean Margaret Criswell Disert at a special chapel service.

FRANCES

Nine juniors are chosen each year for Candle Club, membership in which is considered one of the greatest honors that can come to a Wilson girl. Qualifications are sincerity, ability and scholarship. Candidates are selected by vote of their classmates.

Miss Bolgiano, who will arrive home Thursday for the spring vacation, is treasurer of the YWCA and vice president of the Outing Club. She is the daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Bolgiano. She attended the YWCA national convention in San Francisco as a regional delegate, from March 6 to 13.

D. C. Teachers Await Parley

SEVEN Washington educators will participate in the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics in Baltimore Wednesday through Saturday. Sessions will be held at the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

The meeting, called to discuss advances in methods of coaching in the elementary grades through colleges, will feature a talk Friday at 9:30 a. m. by Miss Bess Goodykoontz, director of the division of elementary education for the United States Office of Education. She will speak on "What Mathematics Means to Children in Elementary Schools."

Other speakers from Washington are Miss Ida Rhodes, mathematician with the National Bureau of Standards; Miss Julia E. Diggins, teacher at Paul Junior High School; Wilmer F. Bennett, teacher at Langley Junior High School; Joseph Hilsenrath, scientific education advisor, National Bureau of Standards; Henry H. Armsby, specialist in engineering education, Office of Education and Miss Veryl Schult, head of the department of mathematics for white schools.

Miss Schult, a member of the board of directors of the National Council, will discuss "Is Mathematics Serving the Needs of Our Communities?" Saturday, at 2 p. m.

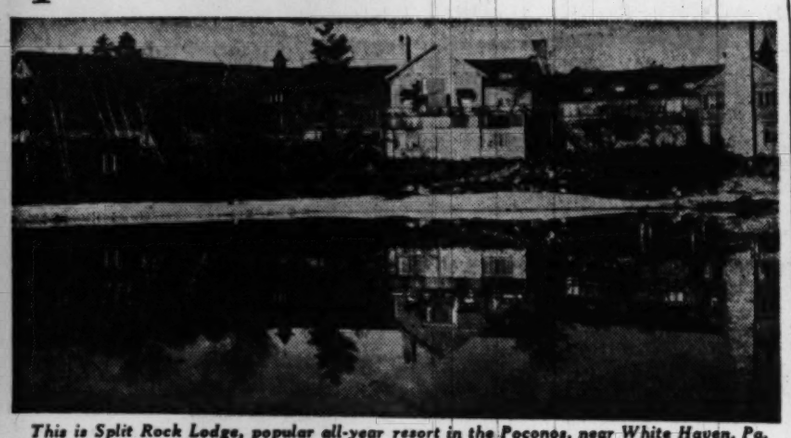
Split Rock Has a Fun Fest



This is Split Rock Lodge, popular all-year resort in the Poconos, near White Haven, Pa.

By Orval Hopkins

THIS one came very near to being a sort of local "Items We Never Finished Reading Dept.," but since the lady who prepared it, a Miss Joyce Morrow, was sitting just West of my elbow, I persevered. "One of the most exciting stories in resort history will be a-birthing during the month of March at Split Rock Lodge on Lake Harmony in the Poconos," it began. I shot Miss Morrow my tough-guy glance and she smiled sunnily in return. Skipping some, I read on: "The Lodge will ring with laughter, song and the comradely clink of glasses." I slung Miss M. another TGG. Same smile.

At this I retired glumly to the news release and found that they're having a "March Fun Festival" up at Split Rock, with games, tournaments, dances, contests, trapshoots and rare old movies (Charlie Chaplin and Laurel & Hardy). At the end of each day they release a March hare and everybody is supposed to chase after him. Miss Morrow, a tall, handsome brunet, hardly the hare-chasing type, told me they also had figured out a new drink caled the Bunny Flip, a sort of variation on Rabbit Punch, as I understand it. "Take comfortable clothes and an optimistic state of mind with you," it says. "And bring your own musical instrument along, too." What, lug my piano all the way up to White Haven, Pa.? No, sir.

LAST WEEK in this space we ran a picture of an elevator in Lisbon which didn't seem to lead anywhere. It went up, but it didn't tend to come down. Somewhat timorously, I asked for an explanation. And Ralph Gray of the editorial staff of the National Geographic Society gave me one.

"For your information," wrote Gray, "the illustration for bulletin 2 on the inclosed Geographic school bulletins will help answer your question as to what people do when they get to the top of the street elevator in Lisbon, Portugal." I turn to bulletin 2 and lo, there's the same picture. Turns out that you simply take a footbridge, completely obscured in my picture, from the top of the lift to the roofs, and there you are. Thanks, Gray.

By the way, Gray, old boy, you didn't have to go back to bulletin 2, dated November 24, 1947, for this dope. The National Geographic for November, 1948, carries the same stuff and the same picture. Must be the Lisbon drumbeating department's favorite shot. The elevator tower, furthermore, was designed by Alexandre Gustave Eiffel, the man who built the Eiffel Tower.

A man named Kurt Hansen of 704 3d st. nw. also answered my plaintive query and gave me some fascinating information about the Lisbon streetcar that backs through a little iron gate, about the dinner of soup, fish, chicken, beef, fruits and wine that you get for 75 cents, and the wonderful Danish butter that you can buy cheaper in Portugal than you can in Denmark.

DR. G. ETZEL PEARCY, geographer for Trans World Airline, has been on an 11-week air trip on which he visited an average of one country per week. So doing he picked up, in addition to some useful information, the following data on goods and services which can be purchased for a dime or less: 2000-year-old Carthaginian coin in Tunis, 7 cents each; a shave in Lisbon for 8 cents; a shine for 4 cents in almost any of the Mediterranean countries (there's a place on 17th st. nw., or used to be, where you can get a shine for a nickel); an after-dinner liqueur in Italy, Spain or Portugal for 10 cents; a subway ride to almost any place in Paris for 2 to 3 cents.

SIR HAROLD BOULTON has been appointed chief representative in North Africa for the British Travel Association. He sailed for New York Friday on the Queen Mary and is scheduled to go to work April 1 at the British Travel Center, 336 Madison ave., New York. He says 130,000 travelers from the United States and 20,000 from Canada will visit the British Isles during 1949.

THE 1949 OUTDOOR PROGRAM of National Capital Parks is now available for public release. The 30-page booklet describes outdoor events to be sponsored by the parks office from early April to late November, including nature walks, historical tours, campfire talks, caravans to nearby park areas, canal barge trips and hikes. For a copy call Republic 1820, extension 2557, 2558 or 2095; write National Capital Parks, Room 1227, Interior Building, or pick one up in Room 1223 or 2-23, Interior Building, 18th and C sts. nw.

Site on Benedict Arnold Trek to Be Drowned

AN HISTORIC Maine campsite, where Benedict Arnold and his men stopped on the ill-starred campaign to take Quebec in 1775, is about to be drowned, literally, by modern progress.

The progress takes the form of a lake created by a new dam now under way to expand power sources along the Dead River of west-central Maine, near the Canadian border. As the river waters back up to the village of Flagstaff, site of the Revolutionary War camp, both village and historic ground will disappear beneath a lake covering 15,000 acres.

Benedict Arnold's dogged expedition through the Maine wilderness, against odds of blizzards, icy waters, and starvation, was one of the boldest and brightest episodes in the career of the man whose early heroism was blackened a few years later when he turned traitor, recalls the National Geographic Society.

Dared New Route

THE ambitious plan to capture Quebec and bring the French over to the American side involved the use of a new and hazardous route by way of the Kennebec River in Maine and the Chaudiere in Canada.

Arnold's band, none too well equipped or trained, got off from Newburyport, Mass., in September, 1775. From the start misfortunes harried the expedition.

Picking up some boats along the Kennebec, the already dwindling party moved by portage across to the Dead River. There, in a pine grove near an Indian cabin, camp was set up on the site of the future village of Flagstaff. Some of the men, sent to the top of nearby Mount Bigelow to study the country ahead, raised the American flag there, an incident which gave the village-to-be its name.

After the Dead River stop, the Arnold campaign met increasing troubles. Supplies were sunk in the river's northern branch. Snow storms hampered progress, and finally—when the St. Lawrence had been gained and a second expedition joined Arnold's attacking force—the battle for Quebec itself was lost.

Still Wild Country

HISTORY, however, did not write off as complete loss the trek through Maine wilds. Although Arnold was wounded and forced to retreat to Lake Champlain, the naval action that followed is credited with saving the lake and region, that year, for the Americans.

Today, the Maine country in which the $4,800,000 dam will rise is still one of dense woods and lonely lakes, where roads and towns are few and far between. Linked with the building of the dam is one of the biggest lumbering operations undertaken in the State, involving thousands of acres of timber and pulpwood.

This region long has been noted for its good hunting in deer, duck, and partridge, and for excellent trout and pickerel fishing in its many ponds, lakes, and streams. New roads under construction in connection with the dam and lumbering projects will open up to sportsmen once inaccessible areas, while the new lake is expected to add considerably to fishing grounds.

Flagstaff, with a population several years ago of 90-odd, is the only sizable settlement to be sacrificed to the lake.

New Chicago Air Service to Start

NEW air travel schedules for residents of Washington and visitors to the Capital will become effective April 1 when Capital Airlines inaugurates aircoach service between Washington and Chicago. The new service, available only between midnight and 6 a. m., will provide intermediate stops at Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit.

A new low fare will be based on a 4-cents-a-mile rate, representing a 35 per cent reduction from regular air fares, Capital says. The airline finds it economically feasible to fly travelers at the low rate because it entails full utilization of personnel and equipment, normally not used between the hours of 12 midnight and 6 a. m. There will be no meals or refreshments served aboard the planes. In addition, only one hostess will fly each trip. Passengers may apply for tickets at Capital ticket offices.

Travelers will board the 60-passenger DC-4 planes for the Washington to Chicago flight at 1:05 a. m., arriving in Chicago at 4:35 a. m., CST, with intermediate stops at Cleveland at 2:50 a. m. and Detroit at 3:54 a. m. A previous flight will leave Washington at 12:05 a. m., terminating at Pittsburgh and arriving there at 1:20 a. m. It is possible to take this flight and connect at Pittsburgh for the aircoach service leaving New York for Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Aircoach travelers will use this service out of Washington to Chicago at a fare of $24.30, as compared to the rail coach fare of $23.03, arriving in an elapsed time of 4 hours and 35 minutes, as compared to 15 hours and 40 minutes by rail. Similarly, they will travel to Detroit at the Aircoach fare of $16.70 in an elapsed time of 2 hours and 54 minutes, as compared to 14 hours by rail at a coach fare of $17.84.

23 State Sites Lure Visitors To Missouri

MISSOURI'S 23 State parks have been readied up for visits by the vacationer and additional facilities in some of them will make them more attractive than in 1948, when they were visited by thousands from every State in the union.

The three trout-fishing State parks, Roaring River, Montauk and Bennett Spring, started operations on March 1, when the trout season in those areas opened. Dining lodges, hotels and cabins in these three parks are operated from March 1 to October, inclusive.

Public picnic use areas in the parks, the roads and trails are open the year round in all State parks.

Reservations of accommodations may be made by addressing operator of concessions, in the following State parks: Alley Spring, Alley, Mo.; Arrow Rock, Arrow Rock, Mo.; Bennett Spring, Lebanon, Mo.; Big Lake, Bigelow, Mo.; Big Spring, Van Buren, Mo.; Meramec, Sullivan, Mo.; Montauk, Darien, Mo.; Roaring River, Cassville, Mo.; Sam A. The Eisenhower brothers (from left): Milton, Dwight, Earl, Arthur and Edgar made good to a man at law, war, banking, engineering, medicine, journalism.

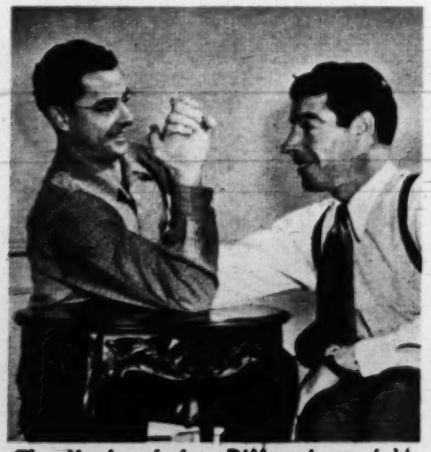
Famous Brothers

Chips from the same block win separate fame



The Yankees' Joe DiMaggio and his brother Dominic of the Boston Red Sox are top players in the American League. Another brother, Vince, also appeared in the majors.

FAME RARELY STRIKES more than once in any single family. When it does, it creates an exclusive circle of distinguished brothers, each renowned in his own right.

In such families, the brothers often have different personalities, different tastes. Yet they often follow similar careers, and attain fame by following parallel courses.

In at least one case—that of the six Eisenhower boys from Abilene, Kansas—they followed six different careers. The most prominent, however, Dwight and Milton, are both college presidents.

All three of the distinguished Compton boys also chose education. Karl Compton, the eldest, is now head of the government's Research and Development Board, but formerly was president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His brother, Wilson, is president of the State College of Washington, and a third, Arthur, is head of Washington University in St. Louis.

The Albright twins, Ivan LeLorraine and Malvin Marr, both chose careers as artists. Today they share each other's success. Ballplayers Joe and Dominic DiMaggio both became sports headliners, each on his own. Without them all, the nation would be vastly poorer.

Bernard Baruch, financier-statesman and presidential adviser for four decades greets bearded brother, Herman, who is now U. S. Ambassador to the Netherlands.

Jean (left) and Auguste Piccard won fame in closely related fields. As a balloonist, Jean made stratosphere flights. Auguste has planned exploration of sea's depths.

Twin artists, Ivan Le Lorraine and Malvin Marr Albright, painted "Picture of Dorian Gray" for movies. Their talent may have come from their father, painter Adam Albright.

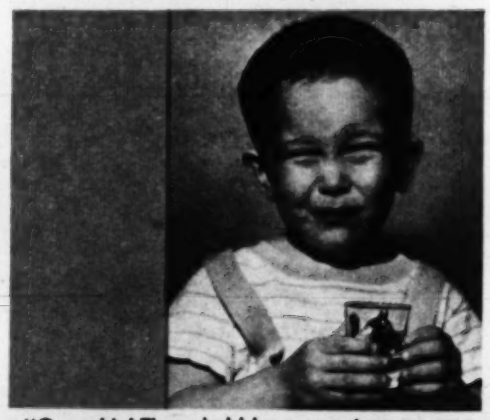
A boy has his first bout with ginger ale's fizz

"This ginger ale stuff is supposed to taste good. Think I'll try just a glass and find out.



"Gee whiz! Those bubbles sure get up my nose. They're kind of all stingy and ticklish, too.

"Don't really know whether I go for this or not. I'll give it just one more sip to make sure.

"Hmmm . . . Well, it isn't so bad, after all. I wonder if they'll let me have another glass?"

THE TURNING POINT

Louis Bromfield

He traded a cup of coffee for a look at the future

THE EARLY MORNING AIR had an invigorating snap as a young night editor named Louis Bromfield hurried through New York's City Hall Park.

"Gotta nickel for some coffee, buddy?"

Bromfield turned to face a drawn visage from which the beard stood out like frost.

"Come along," invited Bromfield. "I'm going to have some breakfast."

When the stranger learned that Bromfield, then 24, was night editor for a wire service, he remarked: "Oh, a smart guy at your age. I used to be in the newspaper racket myself. I was pretty smart, too."

"I gave him a couple of dollars and left him," recalls Bromfield, "but I didn't forget him. I didn't go to sleep when I got home. I kept thinking, if I'm smart enough to edit the news for the whole United States, I'm smart enough to have a brighter future than $10,000 or $12,000 a year when I'm 70. And brother, I could stand a lot more freedom than I've got.

"The next day was Friday, and on Saturday I announced to the boss that I was retiring gracefully from the newspaper business. Of course I was offered a raise, but the problem was bigger than that. I retired just the same.

"I had no other job and was married with less than $100 in the bank. The going was tough for a couple of years. Then things began to pick up and they've been all right ever since.

"I've made a great many times the amount of money I could have made at any newspaper job. But, what was more important, I've been a free man for 25 years instead of being chained to a desk. I've gone where I liked, did as I pleased. And I've ended up where I always wanted to be —on a farm instead of a newspaper office."

"He said his first words today, dear. He wants an allowance."

One of 1949's best bets for stardom is blond Lola Albright, who hails from Akron, O., and who became a movie actress when photographer insisted she take a screen test. After two years of bit parts, she's featured in "Champion," released by United Artists.

At Port Radium, on the fringe of the Arctic Circle, a prospector carrying a Geiger Counter instead of a gold pan inspects a rock formation for uranium.

Uranium Rush

In Canada and the U.S., old prospectors search for "black gold"

LUCK LONG AGO RAN OUT on the old-time gold prospector, the grizzled hero of the Roaring Camps and Poker Flats of a younger America.

For years now he has been a lonely man, often a shabby, shambling figure hanging around the mining towns, dreaming of the days when a sourdough could sluice himself a living out of mountain streams, wondering why he never found a mother lode.

The wait has been long and dreary for most prospectors. But now good luck has come to call on him again. For in the hills of the United States and Canada a new kind of gold has been tapped—a fabulous, mysterious black gold called uranium.

So pressing is the nation's need for uranium—the raw material of atomic power—that the federal Atomic Energy Commission has posted a $10,000 reward for the discovery in the U.S. of each high grade deposit of 20 tons or more.

To stimulate prospectors, the commission also offers $3.50 a pound for uranium oxide, a far better rate than they could get for most gold ores. Canada, too, has posted generous inducements to lure prospectors into its hills in search of the black mineral.

There have been countless guesses, most of them exaggerated, about the earth's supply of uranium, which, when purified and chemically reduced isn't really black at all but nickle-white in color. It is found in high grade pitchblende deposits in the Belgian Congo, in the frost-bitten Eldorado of Canada's gold-mining country, and in Eastern Germany and Czechoslovakia, where the Russians have been eagerly mining it.

Uranium has also been located in smaller quantities in the carnotite ores of the Colorado plateau, in Utah, Arizona and New Mexico, in gold mines of South Africa. Oil shales and other marine sediments in different areas also show it.

Old-time prospectors have leaped eagerly at the government's challenge. The result is that now—from the Rio Grande to Hudson's Bay—the new rush is on. Because of it, the mayor of Dove Creek, Colo., has closed his hardware store, staked 200 uranium claims 30 miles away in Gibson County. The 8,500 inhabitants of nearby Durango speak of little else these days except their chances of striking it rich. In Anchorage, Alaska, uranium fever has become epidemic, and in Canada's Sault Ste. Marie, 500 miles north of Detroit, the greatest rush of all is on, for Canada will pay $5,500 for a ton of the best uranium ore. And that is almost 200 times as much as old-fashioned gold ever brought an old-time prospector.

Gerry Faber, of Dearborn, Mich., pores over maps of uranium country. Like hundreds of others, Faber has caught "black gold" fever, has already filed nine claims in Canada.

Frater, Ontario (pre-boom population: 18) is whistle stop at hub of mine country. Rush for uranium soon may turn hamlet into a boom-town, but Frater's inhabitants hope not.

Busiest man in Ontario is Wilbur Miller, mining recorder at Sault Ste. Marie, here checking claim of a prospector. Miller has been swamped since uranium strike last fall.

To free-lance miners, the fever returns

CANADA'S URANIUM RUSH was touched off last fall when word leaked out that Robert Campbell, a 30-year-old Toronto mining engineer, had hit pay rock at desolate Theano Point, on Lake Superior 70 miles north of the Canadian Soo.

News of Campbell's strike came back to Sault Ste. Marie when another prospector spotted Campbell quietly staking a claim. The kibitzer immediately nailed his own claim nearby, then high-tailed it into town to file his hopes for a fortune with a claims recorder.

In half a day the big news had spread like a covey of mountain grouse along the "snowshoe trail"—the prospectors' grapevine. And by nightfall sourdoughs from 30 miles away were rolling into town. Some were old veterans of the Yukon, traveling light with a pickaxe, a bedroll and a gold pan. Others were crew-cut geologists armed with Geiger counters. All of them had the fever—bad.

By week's end hotel rooms were filled, a roadside lunch wagon was selling hamburgers for $1.50 apiece and the fever was spreading south.

Five hundred miles away it caught on in Detroit. Businessmen, waiters and even teachers began to move north.

A taxi driver read of the strike while browsing through the racing results. He drove all night to the border, then headed for the woods. When he hit bush country, he abandoned his cab, plodded on afoot. But by the time he reached the site of Campbell's strike, 50 men were staking claims around it.

Tenderfeet Beware

Soon a tent city, populated by 100 eager-eyed prospectors, mushroomed at Alona Bay, near the first find. In the same area a hunting-lodge owner began to grow rich feeding the would-be miners. A cocktail, composed of exceptionally stimulating ingredients and known as "the Mucker's Special," made its debut in the hamlet of Frater, situated in the midst of the uranium area.

To weary prospectors Frater's modest railroad station waiting room soon came to look like the lounge of the Waldorf-Astoria.

In the melee, amateurs staked down the middle of the claims of other men, two lost their camp in a fire, and a truck farmer abandoned his family and farm and lived in the brush for two months, seeking a vein he was sure had been by-passed. "The fever hit him like a brick," said his wife.

Pitchblende vein in rock formation contains uranium, chief source of atomic power.

In two weeks, more than 800 claims were filed. Today, as prospectors await the thaws of spring, 1,500 claims are on record and 19 square miles have been claimed for mining.

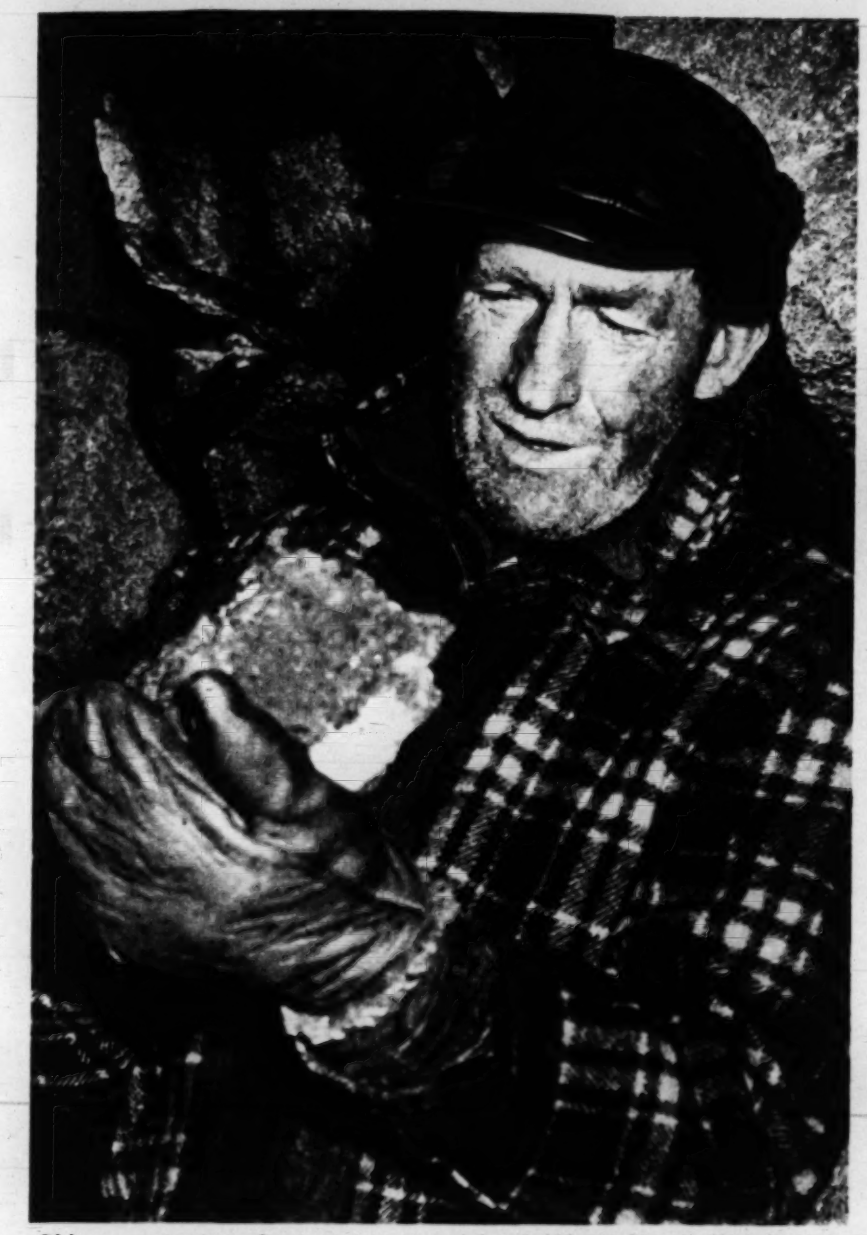
Actually, prospector Campbell was not the first to find uranium north of the Canadian Soo. In 1844, American copper prospectors uncovered a uranium strain running through a vein of mountain pitchblende but because it was useless, they ignored it.

Last spring Campbell set out to rediscover the old strike. At Alona Bay, his Geiger counter began to clack hysterically as he descended a rocky slope. A seam of uranium-bearing pitchblende stood out like a wen.

A few days after Campbell scored his strike, a field crew employed by the Pittsburgh Steel Company made a second major uranium find 14 miles to the northwest.

Then, later in the week, John King, an 80-year-old prospector, discovered a rich pitchblende deposit in the hunting camp of an American doctor.

Many of these modern 'forty-niners



Old prospector Angus Bussineau inspects rock for pitchblende deposits. With two partners, Bussineau has staked 40 claims in Canada, hopes to grow rich from their yield.

are using devices never seen on the Klondike or the American river. Geologists have adopted instruments that can be driven across country or flown in a plane and will automatically register radioactivity in the earth beneath. But these super Geiger counters haven't discouraged the old prospector who still works by pickaxe and instinct.

Claims for $6,000

All through the winter the oldtimers have been coming out of the bush to sell their claims in Sault Ste. Marie for prices up to $6,000. Speculation in uranium mines has been growing for months, and out of it have come fabulous tales of the strike.

"I'll tell you," a veteran Canadian guide informed a Detroit audience recently. "Last summer I took a group of tourists on a boat trip along the Canadian shore of the lake. A woman took sick on me there and I put in at Theano Point. Well sir, she sat down on the rocks and rested and when she got up — so help me — her whole back was burned black by radium."

The Ontario country that hides uranium is almost unbelievably rugged. The weather is rigorous and the land unsurveyed. Prospectors must blaze new trails through jackpine forests.

Yet despite the difficulties of the country, veterans prefer prospecting in Canada to hunting uranium in the U.S. In Canada a claim may be staked on unmapped land at any time. In the U.S. most good mining claims are already tied up or are unobtainable except through government auction. In addition, Canadian pitchblende generally yields more uranium than the carnotite of Colorado and Utah.

"When pitchblende and carnotite yield six to ten percent in the U.S., it's very unusual," a geologist said recently, "but some Canadian rocks may yield up to 60 percent uranium."

Moose Dale, a burly Sault Ste. Marie fur dealer and prospector who already has staked 40 uranium claims, phrases it more succinctly. "We're sitting," he said, "right on the Bank of England."

When the boom will end is anybody's guess. As none of the uranium has yet been exploited, some prospectors are inclined to view the future dimly. But to most of them the search for black gold is a dream come true, a dream in which everything has changed — except, of course, hope for a lucky find.

STOP— loosening your skin!

MAKE THIS TEST! You will be shocked to find out how loose your skin really is!

DO THIS! Sit before your mirror. Do exactly as the girl is doing in the picture above. If folds of skin roll up under your eyes, you have loose skin! This loose skin may easily wrinkle too soon causing you to look much older than you really are!

Millions are actually loosening delicate skin tissues around their eyes in the very act of creaming their skins.

But this old way of skin care is rapidly being discarded. Well informed women are adopting skin care that ends destructive rubbing.

My Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting. No more need for rubbing at all. Think what this means!

When you use my cream that requires no rubbing, you are not loosening your skin—you are not deepening fine lines! In short, you stop helping your skin to grow loose and older looking. You help to preserve tone, elasticity and smoothness your skin naturally has.

Clearer Skin, Too, The First Day

What's more, I can promise you a clearer skin the first day you stop rubbing dirt-laden cream back into tiny skin crevices and into pore mouths.

Here's why. The cleansing ingredient in Lady Esther 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting—it has the power to surround each tiny particle of stale make-up and grime and separate it from the skin. It literally lifts dirt away from your skin! No destructive rubbing is necessary—just smooth it on and tissue it off!

What to Expect

Your first trial will convince you that my 4 Purpose Face Cream is self-acting (no more rubbing) and that it makes your skin far cleaner than before, without rubbing.

So get any size jar—even the smallest size is ample to prove that you don't have to rub your skin any more to clean it.

And remember, this one cream does 4 things for your skin. Besides self-acting cleansing—it smooths! —it aids the natural pore-refining process!—and it makes a perfect powder base!

Mae and Lil

In "Diamond Lil," the uniquely talented Mae West plays a role that she invented and has never left

By ERNEST LA FRANCE

IT WAS ALMOST 21 YEARS AGO—to be exact, April 9, 1928—that a three-alarm femme fatale named Diamond Lil, portrayed by a buxom actress named Mae West, swaggered languidly around Gus Jordan's Bowery saloon on the stage of New York's Royale Theater intoning the now immortal invitation to "Come up'n see me sometime."

Back on Broadway this season is the still smouldering Lil. Played by the still eye-filling Mae, she pursues her handsome Salvation Army captain (a cop in disguise) through a sudsy gay nineties plot. It is as though time had stood still for a whole generation. As veteran Broadwayites observe, in a way, it has.

Invented by the queen of the molten sirens herself, Lil hasn't changed by a waggle since the era of Calvin Coolidge, hip flasks and the racoon coat. Authorities, up to and including Miss West, think she has become a tradition that will still be going strong long after the heroines of most contemporary dramas have faded into memory.

Among other things, Lil seems to have entirely muscled in on her creator, congealing the West age, posture, and speech into a perpetual facsimile of her own, and stamping all Mae's later roles with a pattern that has never rubbed off in two decades on the stage and screen.

There are more basic differences between the two girls than meet the eye. Officially 54 years old, weighing under 130 pounds, and standing a scant five feet, five inches, Mae, as Lil, sheds at least 20 years, adds four inches to become a regal five feet nine (high heels), and about 30 pounds (dresses padded where it will do the most good). Lil tosses down vintage champagne like water. Mae doesn't smoke or drink. Lil brags of her way with men. Mae ignores the whole topic.

Students of Westiana divide her life into the pre-Lil and post-Lil epochs. Lil came into being brassy, assured and dripping with diamonds. Mae was born the daughter of a Brooklyn prizefighter named Jack West who was at one time a theater bouncer.

Partly to bring in money, partly to please her mother who had stage ambitions herself, Mae went to work at the age of five. She played such things as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

Other Things Came Before Lil

THE EVENTS LEADING UP TO Lil included taking dancing lessons from Ned Wayburn, crashing Broadway with the 1911 "Folies Bergeres," and a teen-age excursion into big-time vaudeville.

Her high points in those days included holding up three men whose weight totaled 500 pounds in an acrobat act, playing the Palace with Harry Richman, acting baby vamp roles for the Shuberts, and eventually inventing the shimmy in an Ed Wynn revue called "Sometime."

Tiring of working for other people, Mae edged up on destiny by writing and starring in such mid-'20's sizzlers as "Sex" and "The Pleasure Man." Both were raided by the police and boosted her into the headlines. "Sex" also boosted her into jail for ten days, during which her status as an author got her a job dusting the prison library. When she left, she gaily contributed $1,000 for new books.

The original "Diamond Lil," sultry enough to draw crowds, but considered harmless enough, at least in New York, to stay clear of the police, opened in Brooklyn and moved to New York as a top hit.

Mae considers Lil as important an invention to herself as the electric light to Edison, or the telephone to Alexander Graham Bell.

Recalling Lil's creation through the mists of 21 years, Mae claims she was a composite like all other great inventions. She cast her in the gay nineties because of the beery atmosphere, and borrowed the haughty allure from a routine she had played at the Palace. "That shoulder waggle of Lil's," she says, "is just a slow-motion shimmy I learned with the Shuberts." The result was a burlesque on sex that pleased all ages and classes.

All subsequent Mae West roles have been variations on Lil, as alike as the adventures of Frank Merriwell or Tom Swift. "She Done Him Wrong" in 1932, could easily be called "Diamond Lil in Hollywood." "I'm No Angel" was Lil at the circus. "Klondike Annie," Lil in San Francisco. Her last play, "Catherine Was Great," was just Lil in St. Petersburg. If she ever writes anything else, Mae will still be Lil.

Diamond Lil in 1949: Mae West returns to role that made her famous, utters "Come up'n see me sometime" at New York's Coronet Theater. Time rolls back.

Production of "Diamond Lil" in 1928 showed buxom Mae West with J. Merrill Holmes as saloonkeeper Gus Jordon, Ernest Andrews as wardheeler Dan Flynn, villain of the piece.

"She Done Him Wrong," 1933 film version of "Diamond Lil," made star of Cary Grant.

"My Little Chickadee," with W. C. Fields in 1940, showed gun-toting, western Lil.

Current stage cast mixes oldtime hoofer Billy Van from vaudeville, Walter Petrie from "Constant Sinner," Charles G. Martin of "Catherine," and Jack Howard, of 1928 "Lil."

CARRIAGE FOR APARTMENT PARENTS weighs less than 35 pounds, is collapsible for carrying up and down stairs, stows away in small closet when not in use. It fits both front and back seat of a car, serves as bassinet at home or when visiting, and the chassis converts into a handsome stroller when carriage days are over. Unit is engineered so it can't tip over no matter how far out the infant leans.

TOASTED WEINIES, HAMBURGERS, and other foods are made in five minutes with a new two-piece device that fits into any household pop-up type toaster. The two pans can be used as plates, too. Foods are steamed and completely enclosed so that device has feature of a "fireless cooker." No grease need be used unless desired. Fewer vitamins and minerals are lost because air is excluded, juices saved.

GLOVE HOLDER which attaches to any handled pocketbook ends an old problem. It grips gloves safely and prettily when taken off at movies, party or other occasions. Holder hangs on a handsome gold-plated chain. Just open, insert gloves and then snap shut.

A CHAIR WITH LOOSE JOINTS is easily repaired with new glue injector. Small drill at one end makes a hole into heart of joint. Syringe at other end then forces glue in under pressure. Any furniture glue is readily injected. Hole when plugged is invisible.

No pallid imitation, but real curry as Trudie Teele serves in her East India Curry Shop.

Bombay Curry

TUCKED AWAY in Midtown Manhattan, at the top of a flight of winding stairs, is the East India Curry Shop. It is a tiny restaurant, presided over by Miss Trudie Teele, who spent many years in India and the Far East and came home convinced of the virtues of curry. At her tables you will find homesick British colonials, ex-servicemen who found out about curry during the war, and plain citizens who hunger for Trudie's fare.

Trudie says what she has done is to "interpret" curry, taking the best from each curry-eating country for her recipes. She serves many kinds—among them chicken, shrimp, beef, duck, lamb, blending her own curry powders, making her own chutney and relishes. We came away triumphantly with two hitherto unpublished recipes for lamb curry and onion relish. Add a pinch of turmeric to the water in which the rice cooks to turn it golden. Then mix raisins, chutney, coconut, and chopped peanuts with the finished curry.

Bombay Curry

1 lb. stewing lamb (weight after boning)	1 tablespoon curry powder
3 tablespoons fat	1 teaspoon paprika
1 onion, chopped fine	½ teaspoon powdered ginger
1 garlic clove, minced	¼ teaspoon sugar
1 tart apple, chopped	¼ teaspoon chili powder
	1 6-oz. can tomato paste

Cut lamb in 1-inch pieces. Melt fat in skillet. Saute onion, garlic and apple in fat until golden brown. Add curry powder, paprika, ginger, sugar and chili powder; cook till quite brown. Add lamb; brown on all sides. Add tomato paste and enough boiling water to cover. Cover; cook about 30 minutes. Meanwhile, cook 1 package pre-cooked rice according to directions, adding ¼ teaspoon powdered turmeric to the water to tint the rice deep yellow. Yield: four servings.

Onion Relish: 3 medium onions; 1 green pepper; 1 tomato; 1 cucumber; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon cayenne; 3 teaspoons sugar; 1 lemon, juice; ½ cup vinegar; 2 tbs. salad oil. Cut onions, green pepper, tomato and cucumber in thin slices. Combine remaining ingredients; mix well; pour over vegetables; toss until thoroughly mixed. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

Perfect shirt for country wear is this black and yellow check by Peerless. It's combined with a grey suede waistcoat and flannel slacks.

The stress is on color in men's NEW

Sportswear

COLOR, comfort and practicality are watchwords with manufacturers of men's sportswear these days.

And the accent is first of all on color.

Bright ascots and printed shirts, Tyrolean headgear and contrasting waistcoats are being offered the American male in numbers never seen before. Even shoes are high-style.

Leaders of the nation's five-billion-dollar men's wear industry attribute the growing masculine enthusiasm for colorful informal wear to the war and to American women.

The war caused shortages to occur in supplies of heavy materials. The result: manufacturers turned to bright fabrics which had formerly seemed frivolous if not feminine to many masculine wearers. But color caught on.

The American woman, however, has had most to do with the swing towards color. Long accustomed to choosing her own costumes on the basis of hue, she employs the same standards when she judges her husband's garb. And since she buys some eighty percent of what he wears, her influence is a good deal more pervasive than many men would admit.

Belted grey casual jacket by Currick and Leiken is made of worsted gabardine, features bellows side pockets and half-lining of suede.

For brisk spring days, fashion prescribes the grey woolen pullover (left) with Gaucho neck woven-like shirt collar. In new footwear, stress is on the sole—extra thick for ruggedness and for smartness.

A dark green Tyrolean hat is worn with tan suede-and-wool pullover by Kuehnert. Ascot tie and chamois knit gloves complete the outfit.

Bright eyed and healthy after 19 months of being fed a scientific diet containing no meat or milk as such, "Dolly," the daughter of alley cats, tips the scale at a normal eight pounds. She is one of eight cats being used in experiments on nutrition at Yale University.

Contrary Cats

Reversing nature, they make friends with rats

CATS AND RATS are now on speaking terms at Yale University.

This armistice in the ancient war of cellar and attic may be due to a diet being fed the cats by scientists at the University's Nutrition Clinic.

For centuries such house pets have been thriving on table scraps and an occasional bowl of milk. But scientists often wondered about their exact needs. Two years ago, Dr. Willard A. Krehl decided to find out, while perhaps learning something about human nutritional needs as well.

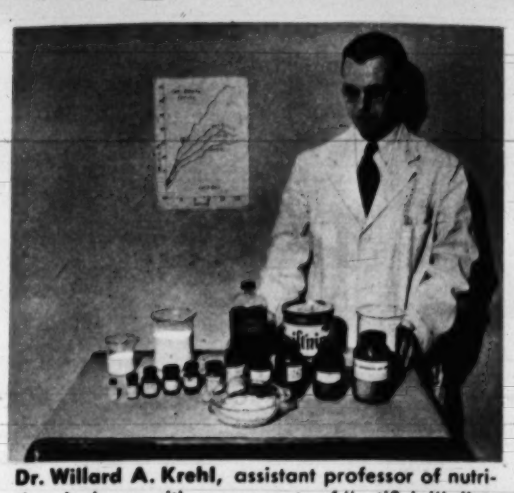
He started with a few back-alley kittens. They were never to taste milk or meat, were to be fed a "scientific" diet.

For months the cats led a life of ease in the laboratory. They were fed a pasty mixture of sugar, milk casein, mineral salts, lard, corn oil and all the known vitamins. As they matured into cathood, they attained normal growth and weight. Their coats were as thick and shiny, their dispositions as normal as any home-raised cat.

One day, however, the cats' laboratory neighbors — several white rats — were loosed among them. Nothing happened. Not a whisker bristled. Not a tail grew bushy. Not a claw was unsheathed. As a matter of fact, one rugged looking tabby stared at a rat and promptly backed off in soft-footed alarm.

Dr. Krehl neither affirms nor denies that the diet accounts for such unusual behavior. The fact that the cats were raised with the rats and that they were well nourished may explain the phenomenon, he says.

It is too early to draw broad, scientific conclusions from the experiments, but they will continue. In time the scientists may discover benefits for mankind. Meanwhile, with cats and rats cavorting amiably, Yale has the makings of a new club.



Dr. Willard A. Krehl, assistant professor of nutrition, is shown with components of "artificial" diet.

Unforeseen sidelight on experiment was absence of enmity between old enemies, cats and rats.

Another Yale experimental cat, "Buster," waits his turn at diet as assistant Rheva Cook samples it.

"Maisie" and "Noah" share cage in test to determine whether they will mate if fed scientifically.

Replanning a city: Wallace Richards, Director of the Carnegie Museum and Secretary of the Allegheny Conference on Community Development, Pittsburgh Mayor David L. Lawrence and Park H. Martin, executive Secretary of the Conference, study model of new Point State Park.

The New Pittsburgh

It's the solid result of planning and enterprise

By EDWARD J. NICKEL

"FUTILITY," a tired civic leader once said, "seems to be the only reward reserved for planners."

The speaker hadn't reckoned with Pittsburgh. In six short years, America's capital city of steel has taken much of the futility out of planning.

Pittsburgh is having its face washed and lifted. Planners are doing it.

Six years ago, the smoke-shrouded metropolis (pop. 700,000) on the banks of the Allegheny, Monongahela and Ohio stood as a drab example of urban neglect.

"The smokiest city in America," Pittsburghers agreed. "The ugliest," harsher critics insisted.

Tortured by its jagged terrain, cramped by the junction of its great rivers, Pittsburgh displayed all the scars of haphazard growth.

Clouds of soot and smoke choked the air. Rivers were polluted. The apex of the "Golden Triangle," the historic peninsula on which the city was born more than two centuries ago, had become a civic eyesore.

Pittsburgh had hardly caught up with the age of the automobile. Its thoroughfares were jammed, downtown parking facilities hardly existed. The city had a heart-breaking flood problem.

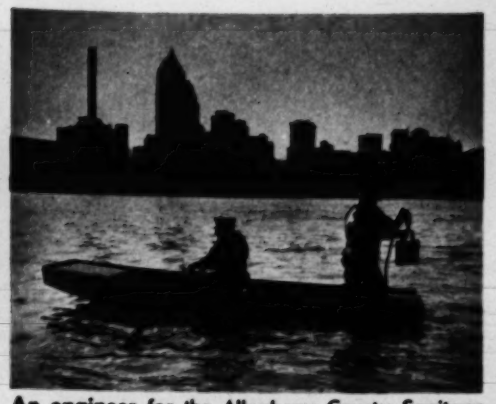
In housing, too, Pittsburgh was faced with melancholy realities. Forty per cent of the area's dwellings were unfit or inadequate. And over all still hung the ever-present pall of smoke.

Six times since the turn of the century, ambitious Pittsburghers had formed comprehensive plans for overhauling their city. The blueprints gathered dust. They remained plans, not programs for positive and decisive action.

The first effective blow was struck in 1943 with the formation of the Allegheny Conference on Community Development. Tired of inaction, unwilling to sit by and watch their city decay, further, most Pittsburghers were waiting only for leadership.

This the Conference supplied. In doing so, it took futility from civic planning.

New 36-acre Point State Park will be created on point between Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers.



An engineer for the Allegheny County Sanitary Authority takes water samples from the Allegheny.

Work is now underway on terminal buildings of the area's new 1,500-acre Greater Pittsburgh Airport.

Commercial Street Bridge, now under construction, is part of $45 million Penn-Lincoln Parkway East.

Building clean-up has been stimulated by Pittsburgh's smoke control law. The city spends seven cents per person to reduce smoke pollution.

PITTSBURGH'S AIM: A CITY OF LIGHT

The Conference makes positive plans for better transportation, river control, smoke elimination

THE ALLEGHENY CONFERENCE on Community Development is a novel tool in civic affairs, but one that can well be copied by other U. S. cities.

Its membership includes representatives from all levels of government—state, county and city—and the leaders of social agencies. Equally important, it also includes the top leaders of Pittsburgh's nationally famous industries: banker Richard K. Mellon, food packer H. J. Heinz II, "Big Steel's" Ben Fairless, aluminum's Roy Hunt.

Much of the Conference's effectiveness flows directly from the fact that its members are established leaders.

"Subordinates can always say 'No,'" one Conference leader remarked, "but they seldom have the authority to say 'Yes.'"

The Conference first set out to survey Pittsburgh's resources and needs. It wanted the facts. Then it wanted action. It was prepared to work through established community agencies, but it was determined to see that those agencies carried the task through.

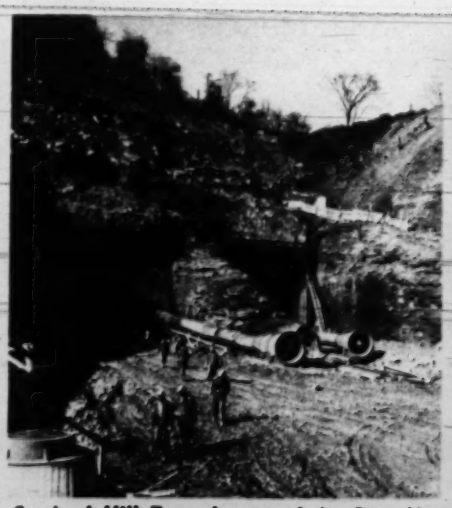
Today, the Conference's handiwork is evident everywhere. A roll-call of some of the projects which the organization has supported and fought for reads like a community planner's dream come true. Here are Pittsburgh's achievements:

SMOKE CONTROL: One of the Conference's earliest and most telling blows was struck against smoke. Since October, 1947, smoke from all sources in the city of Pittsburgh has been stringently controlled (PARADE, Oct. 19, 1947). A county-wide smoke-control ordinance is expected to be enacted this year. As a direct result, Pittsburgh businessmen spent more than $1 million last year in cleaning up building exteriors.

FLOOD CONTROL: Six flood-control reservoirs have been built by Army Engineers. Conemaugh Dam, key unit in the flood-control system, is now under construction. Total cost of the program will probably reach $150 million, much of it provided by the federal government.

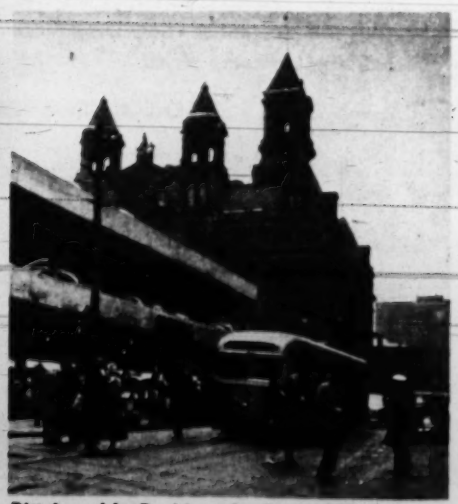
HIGHWAYS: The new $120 million Penn-Lincoln parkway, which will give access to the new airport and the Pennsylvania Turnpike extension, is being built. New cross-town thoroughfares and a downtown traffic interchange are also scheduled for early construction.

PARKING: Pittsburgh was the first U.S. city to create a parking authority which is planning an initial $10 million program



Squirrel Hill Tunnel, part of the Penn-Lincoln Parkway will cost nearly $14 million.

Chemist Mary O'Callaghan works on model of Sanitary Authority's proposed sewage plant.



Pittsburgh's Parking Authority expects to build facilities like this in downtown area.

Residents of Terrace Village project meet to decide on proper landscaping of grounds.

of off-street parking facilities for automobiles.

POINT STATE PARK: Demolition will begin next year on the 36-acre site for a new state park at the juncture of the Allegheny and Monogahela Rivers. Land acquisition alone has cost $7 million.

STREAM POLLUTION: Allegheny County Sanitary Authority is financing an $82 million program which includes construction of a county-wide sewage-treatment system.

GREATER PITTSBURGH AIRPORT: Terminal buildings of new 1,500-acre airport are being built. Scheduled to be open for commercial use in 1950, the airport's total cost is estimated at $20 million.

URBAN REDEVELOPMENT: An urban redevelopment authority has been set up to rebuild blighted areas. The authority and the Equitable Life Assurance Society are working on a scheme to transform 23 acres adjoining Point State Park into a new business area.

HOUSING: The Conference has sponsored a Housing Council to tackle this crucial problem. As in most cities, low-cost housing is stymied by high building cost. The solution largely depends upon federal legislation and subsidies.

PRIVATE PROJECTS: U. S. Steel Corporation and the Mellon National Bank and Trust Company will begin demolition of site for a new 40-story office building this spring. The Aluminum Company of America will begin construction of a new 30-story building in 1950.

The list could be extended to many other fields of public improvement, for the Pittsburgh area is undergoing a man-made upheaval which is by no means complete.

"Our program in Pittsburgh involves not merely the control of smoke, floods and stream pollution, the construction of new highways, parks, office buildings and a major airport," says banker Richard K. Mellon, one of the leading figures in the Allegheny Conference, "but a great expansion of health educational and cultural activities as well.

"Such progress is possible only because administrative officials at the state, county and city levels—irrespective of party affiliation—and business leaders have been able to work in absolute harmony for the good of the whole community. By maintaining this cooperation and enterprise, there will be no obstacles that united Pittsburgh cannot readily overcome."

Pittsburgh's redevelopment has enthusiastic support of residents like Carnegie Tech student James Thorpe: "The program demonstrates that an industrial area like Pittsburgh can be a pleasant place to work and live in."

Mrs. A. J. Brown, a nurse, is a newcomer to Pittsburgh: "I come from the Mid-West, and though I've only lived here a short time I find that I like Pittsburgh very much. I've found a real sense of civic pride in this city."

Salesman J. L. Rodgers is all for Pittsburgh's redevelopment plan: "This improvement program is making Pittsburgh the finest city in the country. The new highways will make it easier for me to get to my customers." THE END.

"Maestro" Henry L. Scott, comedy pianist, untangles fingers after trill.

Henry Scott mixes fun and games with his music

HENRY L. SCOTT has made a gilt-edged career out of playing the piano for laughs.

To concertizing, he adds touches of pure madness—crawling under the piano to search for a lost chord, playing with his hands thrust between his legs, pulling on mittens without missing a note.

Through it all, he manages to leer amiably at his audience. He wise-cracks with abandon, and is not above jibing at late-comers.

Henry dons mittens without missing a note, vainly tries to locate pedal.

Roars of laughter greet Scott's zany stunts as audience of 1,500 sees early preview of his Broadway show at Syracuse.

To give his listeners a chance to catch their breath, pianist Scott will turn serious and offer a perfectly polished rendition of Chopin's Minute Waltz.

Public Likes His Formula

This mixture of music and clowning has kept Scott, who is in his late thirties, booked steadily for the past ten years. He has made eight transcontinental tours, played in virtually every important concert hall in the nation. On the college concert circuit he is a steady favorite. His antics bring him some $30,000 a year.

Like Mozart, Henry first played the piano when he was four, began studying at eight and from then on devoted himself to serious music. After years of vaudeville, piano teaching and radio he developed his comedy program.

He is now about to realize his greatest ambition—a complete, one-man show of his own on Broadway next month. This will comprise a two-hour program, titled "Concerto for Fun." Already it has been previewed at Syracuse, N. Y., where pictures here were taken. His will be the first all-piano show booked for a solid run.

Scott aims to apply the operatic formula of drama, music and humor to the concert stage. If the public is to acquire an appreciation of good music, he says, people must first be brought into the concert hall. If comedy programs will bring them in, so much the better.

The "Concerto for Fun" is his attempt to pioneer in what has been called a new art form. Concerning his projected one-man invasion of Broadway, he says:

"I'm scared stiff, but I'm also convinced it will work."

Chopin with grapefruit, course in counterpoint a la acrobatics win applause, to which the virtuoso then bows.

MILTON CANIFF

...CANYON, THE INTELLIGENCE REPORTS FROM THE NATIVES CONFIRM OUR CONCLUSION THAT THE REBEL TROOPS ARE MOVING IN TO STRIKE AT OUR AIRLIFT —AND ATTEMPT TO SEIZE MY MINING OPERATION!

SURE, COPPER— THOSE BOYS HAVE ORDERS TO GRAB THIS ATOMIC ENERGY ORE FOR THEIR NEW BOSSES!

MY PILOTS ARE IN A HUDDLE! HAVE THEY COME UP WITH ANY NEW TACTICS TO USE WHEN AN ATTACK COMES?

WELL— I'M NOT SURE...

THEY'RE NEARLY ALL EX-COMBAT MEN FROM THE WAR— THEY MAY BE READY TO SHOW ME THEIR PLANS— LET'S LISTEN IN

IF YOU INSIST...

LISTEN, YOU GUYS, MEN CAN HOLD OUT AGAINST OVERWHELMING PRESSURE AND PHYSICAL HANDICAPS! HISTORY WILL BACK ME UP ON THAT!

MAYBE HE'S TALKING ABOUT THE DEFENSE OF MALTA BY THE ROYAL AIR FORCE!

EVERYBODY KNOWS HOW THOSE TWO SAVED THE DAY AND GAVE THEIR OUTFIT A CHANCE TO REBUILD!

THAT'S PROBABLY THE U.S. NAVY AND MARINES DEFENDING MIDWAY ISLAND!

CONGRATULATIONS, MEN— I'M HAPPY TO SEE THAT YOU'RE FORMULATING A GENERAL SCHEME TO DEFEND OUR AIRLIFT!

AIRLIFT, MISS CALHOON?— I WAS TALKING ABOUT THAT MOVIE WHERE THE THREE GUYS CAME HOME AND TRIED TO ADJUST THEMSELVES TO CIVILIAN LIFE...

AND I WAS WHOOPIN' UP THE ONE ABOUT THE OLD PRIEST AND THE YOUNG PRIEST WHO REBUILT THEIR CHURCH AFTER IT BURNED!

WE'RE VOTING ON WHICH MOVIE REED KIMBERLY SHOULD RUN OFF FOR THE LOCAL PRINCESS!

MEANWHILE

WHY IS IT SO DIFFICULT FOR YOU TO CHOOSE ONE MOTION PICTURE TO ILLUSTRATE LIFE IN THE UNITED STATES, REED KIMBERLY?

THERE HAVE BEEN SO MANY GOOD MOVIES, SNOW FLOWER

...BESIDES, WHAT IF THE PILOTS BRING A PROJECTOR AND A SINGLE FILM ALL THE WAY UP HERE AND YOU DONT LIKE IT?

... IT IS CUSTOMARY TO CUT OFF THE EARS OF ONE WHO OFFENDS THE FAMILY OF THE HIGH ROKK!

OF ALL THE MOVIES EVER MADE, WHICH SINGLE FEATURE FILM DO YOU THINK WOULD BEST PORTRAY LIFE IN THE UNITED STATES TO ONE WHO HAS NEVER VISITED THE U.S. NOR EVER SEEN A MOTION PICTURE?

"whiteness I never even hoped for!"

It's an entirely new kind of whiteness the very first wash...then clothes keep

WHITE for LIFE!

Never again that dull gray look as long as you wash your clothes in "Lifetime" Oxydol

New "Lifetime" Oxydol makes something wonderful happen inside your washing machine. Never again will clothes get that dull gray look the way they used to do. Even dull, yellowed clothes turn dazzling white again. Your very whitest clothes wash to a brilliant new kind of whiteness. Washable colors take on a new brightness.

And that happens every time you wash your clothes in "Lifetime" Oxydol. Yes . . . clothes keep white for life! Seeing is believing — get "Lifetime" Oxydol!

AND I HOPE YOU NEVER BREAK YOUR RECORD--AT LEAST NOT TODAY.

THAT'S WRENN MANOR--ON THE SIDE OF THE HILL DOWN THERE, SAINT.

I'M GOING TO ENJOY SEEING IT FROM THE GROUND, COLONEL WRENN!

THAT'S MY NIECE'S PLANE COMING OUT TO MEET US--SHE MUST HAVE SEEN US COMING.

DOESN'T SHE SEEM A LITTLE EAGER FOR THE REUNION?

I SHOULD HAVE WARNED YOU, MR. TEMPLAR--DIANA IS QUITE A RECKLESS GIRL.

DO YOU MIND IF I NAVIGATE FOR A FEW MINUTES, COLONEL WRENN? WE'LL SEE IF SHE REALLY LIKES FLYING ROUGH.

AND I ONLY HOPE, COLONEL, THAT YOUR NIECE FEELS AS ADVENTUROUS AS YOU TOLD ME!

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

YESSIR! IF LITTLE OL' CHUM FUN HADN'T SHOWED UP THAT ALEXIS DAME FOR A PHONY—BOY! YOU MIGHT HAVE MARRIED HER AND THEN WOULD YOU BE IN A SPOT!

O.K., KID! YOU PROVED THAT ALEXIS WAS QUITE CAPABLE OF HAVING A SICK CHILD THROWN INTO THE STREET. STOP RUBBING IT IN. I'M CURED!

I SUPPOSE SPRAY, CHAZZ, AND HOTSHOT WERE IN ON THE STUNT, TOO...WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

OH, OH! I FORGOT—THEY WERE RIGHT OUTSIDE, IN THE BLOND BABE'S COURTYARD.

AND IN THE BARONESS ALEXIS' COURTYARD...

TSK! SPRAY, STOP THIS VULGAR FISTICUFFS WITH THE LADY. IT'S UNDIGNIFIED—AND BESIDES, I'VE GOT HER CANNON.

STOP HER, YOURSELF, Y' LUG-HEADED THROTTLE PUNCHER. I'M BUSY TRYING TO REMEMBER A FLASHY JUJITSU HOLD.

THERE, THERE! RELAX, GAL! YOUR ARISTOCRATIC POISE IS ALL UNDONE.

LET ME GO, UGLY, LITTLE PEASANT! RED-TOPPED WITCH IS MAKE INSULT AT ALEXIS' BEAUTY. I FIND OUT WHY!

WHEW! DARLING, YOU'VE BEEN MOUSETRAPPED... WHEN YOU CAME HIGH-BALLING AFTER TERRY WITH A GUN IN YOUR PINK FINGERS, WE FIGURED YOU WERE OUT TO SOOTHE YOUR INJURED PRIDE BY BLASTING THE EX-BOY FRIEND...YOU HAD TO BE SIDETRACKED QUICK!

SO I POPPED UP WITH A FEW CHOICE CATTY CRACKS. YOU FORGOT ABOUT THE ARTILLERY, DROPPED IT AND CAME IN SWINGING.

LET'S GO, CHAPPIES. I THINK THE BARONESS WOULD RATHER BE ALONE WHILE SHE GETS OVER THE SHOCK OF FINDING OUT THAT SHE HAS A LOT TO LEARN ABOUT THE USE OF THE NEEDLE.

MEANWHILE, AT THE TOWN HALL OFFICE OF MAYOR CHUM.

INCREDIBLE!

IT IS TRUE, HONORABLE CHUM. FOR UNKNOWN REASON THE BESIEGING FORCES WITHDRAW IN GREAT HASTE!

AND BEYOND THE TOWN WALLS, THE LAST OF THE BESIEGERS PULL OUT ON THE DOUBLE. 3-27

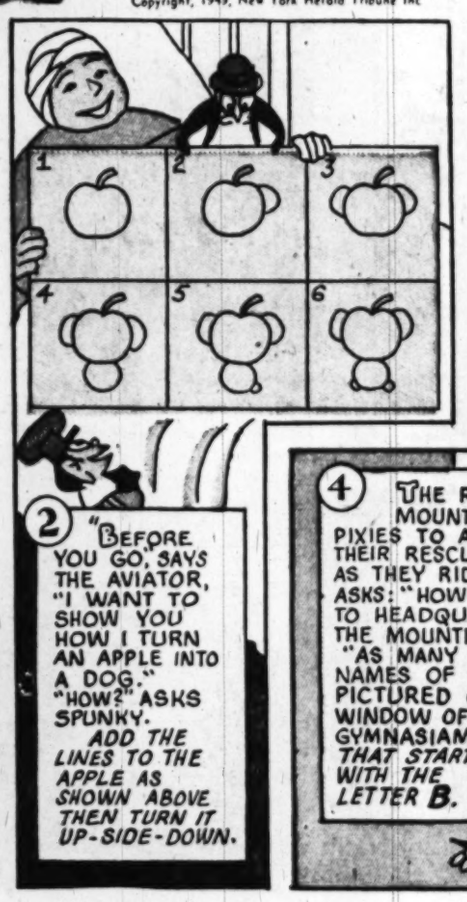
1 POP! THE BOX OPENS AND INVISIBLE JACK JUMPS OUT. BEANIE WAVES HIS MAGIC PENCIL AND THE MAN APPEARS.

START WITH DOT 1 AND FOLLOW THE BROKEN LINES UNTIL YOU GET TO ANOTHER DOT. DO THE SAME WITH DOTS 2 AND 3.

THEN COLOR ALL SPACES MARKED WITH A, B, C OR D, AS FOLLOWS:
A, IS RED.
B, IS YELLOW.
C, IS BLUE.
D, IS BLACK



2 "BEFORE YOU GO," SAYS THE AVIATOR, "I WANT TO SHOW YOU HOW I TURN AN APPLE INTO A DOG."
"HOW?" ASKS SPUNKY.
ADD THE LINES TO THE APPLE AS SHOWN ABOVE THEN TURN IT UP-SIDE-DOWN.

3 ON THEIR WAY OUT OF THE AVIATOR'S WARD THEY SEE ON DOORS NAMES OF DOCTORS WHO ARE SPECIALISTS IN THEIR FIELD, AS YOU CAN SEE BY THEIR TITLES.
WHAT KIND OF DOCTORS ARE THEY?

4 THE ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTIE INVITES THE PIXIES TO A FEAST TO HONOR THEIR RESCUE OF THE AVIATOR. AS THEY RIDE ALONG, WIZZIE ASKS: "HOW MANY MILES TO HEADQUARTERS?" THE MOUNTIE ANSWERS: "AS MANY MILES AS NAMES OF SPORTS PICTURED ON THE WINDOW OF THIS GYMNASIAM THAT START WITH THE LETTER B.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY HAROLD R FOSTER

Synopsis: TO THE HIDEOUS GATEKEEPER OF ILLWYNDE CASTLE PRINCE VALIANT SHOUTS: "OPEN IN THE NAME OF KING ARTHUR OR I WILL HAVE OUR GREAT WIZARD, OOM FOOYAT, SEND ONE OF HIS TERRIBLE SERVANTS AMONG YOU!"

AND NOW HE MUST FULFILL HIS THREAT.

WHEN DARKNESS FALLS, VAL'S COMPANIONS SHOW MUCH ACTIVITY ABOUT A BIG CAMPFIRE, TO HOLD THE WATCHERS' ATTENTION WHILE VAL CREEPS TO THE WALL AT THE FAR SIDE.

AFTER MANY FAILURES VAL AT LAST SUCCEEDS IN GETTING ONE END OF HIS LINE SECURED TO A CASTLE WINDOW.

ON THE HILLSIDE ABOVE THE HAUNTED CASTLE VAL AND OOM FOOYAT PREPARE THEIR CAREFULLY MADE 'SERVANT.

THE CANDLES ARE LIGHTED WITHIN THE WICKER BODY, THE PULLEY PLACED ON THE LINE--THEN, WITH A GREAT DEAL OF SCREAMING, IT IS RELEASED.

THE WATCHERS ON THE WALLS TURN TO SEE THE GLOWING HORROR COME RACING ACROSS THE SKY.

STRAIGHT FOR A WINDOW IT FLIES, AND DISAPPEARS IN A BRIGHT FLAME, LEAVING BEHIND ONLY A SCORCHED BROOM AND AN ARROW.

HAL FOSTER

THERE IS SILENCE NOW FROM THE CASTLE, AND VAL SMILES AS HE WINDS IN HIS LINE. FOR HE KNOWS NOW THAT THE HAUNTS WITHIN THE CASTLE ARE NO MORE REAL THAN THE ONE HE JUST SENT IN.
